CLOCK WILL BE INSTALLED JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL SOON

An exterior clock for the Junior high school building has been ordered and is expected to arrive within a short time. The clock will be electrically operated and controlled by the master clock in the school office, from which the various gongs and signal buzzers are operated. At the time the building was constructed a place was left for the installation of the clock, but at that time the district did not have funds to buy it, so a dummy face was put in the place where the clock is to be located. Last year the 9th grade class put on a play and raised a fairly large sum of money to apply on the purchase of the clock, and this year it was decided to apply the balance in the student body treasury to completing the payment. The order has been placed and as soon as the clock can be built up to the specifications it will be shipped direct from the factory. It will be a decided improvement to the appearance of the building and will be a great help to the students.

WHIRLWIND BY ELEANOR EARLY

THIS HAS HAPPENED Sybil Thorne, lunching with Mabel Moore, her dearest friend, encounters Dolly Weston, who tells her excitedly that she has dreadful news of Valerie. Valerie West is the girl Tad Thorne married, and Tad is Sybil's adored brother. Sybil has never liked Valerie, and has suspected numerous small affairs.

Now Dolly tells her that Valerie is planning to desert Tad, and elope with a man from New Haven. At first Sybil is inclined to let Val go ahead, but Dolly and Mabel convince her that it would break Tad's heart, and persuade her to interfere. When Dolly makes a frantic declaration about the way men feel when their wives are unfaithful, Sybil decides to save Tad from a worse fate. Valerie might cause him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXV Suddenly Sybil became amenable. "All right, Dolly," she said, "I won't tell Tad. And if Jack will drive us, I'll go down to New Haven tonight. Thanks for telling me about it. Dolly, you meant well, I guess. Perhaps it's for the best. I'll see what I can do anyhow. Don't worry about my dragging you into it. And don't tell Dot Faxon's crowd."

Dolly turned wide eyes on her friends. "Why, Sib?" she reproached gently. "Don't you know you can trust me? I'm awfully fond of Val—really. Wild horses couldn't drag a word out of me. I'll run along now. You and Mrs. Moore will want to be making arrangements. Valerie will thank you some day for this."

Dolly winked back suppressing tears, and powdered her nose resolutely. "Good-bye," she said. "You're good kids—both of you."

"My dear," said Mabel when she had gone, "that girl's been in a jam herself. And Tom Weston raised the devil. It's plain as the nose on your face. Did you ever know a girl to give herself away so?"

"I'll bet Tom had her on her knees. It's a wonder to me he ever took her back. But he put the fear of God in her, sure as you live. That's why she wants to save Val. She's been through the mill herself."

"Say, these modern wives! What's become of good old-fashioned morality? They make happy news their god. Then they spit in virtue's face. No wonder they're disesteemed. The blind fools!"

Sybil sighed. "It's a dizzy world, Mab. Have you seen Tom Weston lately? Old father's time. Grayed than his father. Lines like scars. Poor Tommy, if a fool woman can hurt a man that much, then, Mab, I'm going to bring Val home again."

"That's all there is, old dear. The rightous Sybil smelted my well-earned breath one night, and left me flat. Most outrageous thing ever happened to a man."

He reached for her glass, and his fingers found her wrist. Dull red burned his cheek, and his eyes flashed with an unholly fire. "Val, I never wanted a woman so much in all my life."

"How about Sybil?" "The devil with Sybil!" A girl in a crimson skating suit peeled cotton snowballs. A girl in pink tarlatan knicker and waisted. And a girl in a rush skirt, shimmyed. Waiters hurried about, depositing small bottles of rank liquor under folded napkins. Ten o'clock... Eleven o'clock. The place was wild and noisy. The girl in tarlatan was soaking wet and swearing roundly. Someone had ducked her in the ladies' coat fountain.

Sybil and the Moores had driven from Boston directly to the Ramseys in New Haven. Sybil introduced Tom and Valerie to Valerie's hostess. A plump creature swathed in satin, dripping monkey fur, hennaed and facialed and fluked. A matron of fish phrases.

"Poor Val!" she exclaimed volubly. "We actually DROVE her out this evening. To Googin's—such a jolly place. Mr. Ramsey had a beastly headache. We were all going, but the very last minute—"

An expression of conventional concern succeeded Mrs. Ramsey's fixed smile. "Nothing's wrong at home, I hope."

Sybil checked maliciously. "Oh, no—we're just giving Val a little surprise party. She will be SURPRISED, won't she, Mrs. Ramsey? Of course you'll phone and have her popped. But we'll drive fast—and perhaps we'll get there first."

Mrs. Ramsey elevated her tweezed brows. Flashed appreciatively, but Sybil had flown. "A little speed, Jack! Step on it!"

Through the frosty night they drove like mad. "It's like the movies," giggled Mabel, snuggling warmly against her husband's shoulder. "So, the virtuous sister, starring Val's the ingenue lead, and you're the hero, Jackie, rescuing the innocent ingenue from the villain at Googin's."

Presently they were there. Standing in the doorway. Life and love surged by, staggering sometimes as they passed. Youth in youth's arms. And youth in age's embrace. Pretty rounded cheeks against heavy jowls, and the corrugated skin of old dancing fools.

Tragi-comedy. The business of having a good time. Sybil's glance embraced the great dining room.

"There they are—over in the corner booth. Val's facing us, wondering her nose."

Like a flash she had left them. A slim little figure in a plaid sport shirt and heavier jacket, threading her way between the dancers. "Sybil! What are you doing here?"

Valerie awayed a bit unsteadily. Clutching the table cloth, dragging the chain periously. "God Almighty!"

The man with her was on his feet. White as death. Facing Sybil across the empty glasses and the stained linen. The words were coming from dry lips, choked from

WORLD WAR AMNESIA VICTIM IDENTIFIED

(Associated Press Special Wire) PUEBLO, Colo., Oct. 12—A telephone conversation across the continent today gave what Pueblo police considered positive identification of Harry Devlin, Canadian war veteran, who has been an amnesia victim since 1914. From Toronto, Canada, "Billy" Wallace, boyhood friend of Devlin and now a reporter on the Toronto Star, talked with Devlin and together they recounted boyhood experiences that led S. L. Devlin, 67, of Toronto, to believe he had found his son who was reported killed in the world war in 1914.

AUDITORS SEEK TRACE OF MONEYS PAID ALDERSON

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 12—Auditors who examine the books of the late W. C. Alderson, county school superintendent who shot himself to death Monday, will seek to find trace of $40,000 which investigation showed had been received by Multnomah county from Washington and Clackamas county officials said today. Alderson's will, found today in his effects, leaves $1 to each of his children and the balance of his estate to his sister, Edith Alderson.

LETTER OF CREDIT STOLEN FROM U. S. CITIZEN IN ITALY

(Associated Press Special Wire) GENOA, Italy, Oct. 12—Mrs. Charles H. Hopkins, of Santa Barbara and San Francisco, complained to the police today that she and her travelling companion had been robbed of a letter of credit for $20,000, and of some jewelry while staying at the Miramar hotel here. The police believe that the thief is one of an international band of "hotel rats," who operate in the French and Italian Riviera each autumn and winter. Mrs. Hopkins and her travelling companion said that they suspected a young man who travelled on the same train with them from Switzerland. They left early today for San Remo, Italy.
