TOLSTOY RETURNS FROM JAUNT INTO CARIBOU COUNTRY

Believes Animals Adapted to Tame Life; Trapper Companion Tastes of Modernity.
The trapper, who made his first trip out of the north country in fifteen years with the Tolstoy party, is George Yandle, who makes his home in a snow-covered hut on the shores of Lake Noolina, several hundred miles north of The Pas, Manitoba, over which the Caribou cross by the thousands in their search for winter quarters.
The Tolstoy expedition, which was sent out by the museum of natural history of New York, spent several months in the barren land, 1,000 miles north of The Pas, Manitoba, over which the Caribou cross by the thousands in their search for winter quarters.
The trapper, who made his first trip out of the north country in fifteen years with the Tolstoy party, is George Yandle, who makes his home in a snow-covered hut on the shores of Lake Noolina, several hundred miles north of The Pas, Manitoba, over which the Caribou cross by the thousands in their search for winter quarters.
Today he had discarded his habitual garb of the Eskimo and was arrayed in the latest fashion of civilization. For the first time in fifteen years he was wearing a pair of boots and a "store-made" suit, and to ease the climax he added a pair of spats.
But civilization holds no permanent attraction to Yandle, who plans to return to the north within a month. He said he has enjoyed his life among the Indians and Eskimos and had been ill but once, when he contracted influenza during an epidemic.
His hut is located 400 miles from the nearest trading post, where he disposes of his annual catch for supplies.
Pays High for Food
Reindeer meat and frozen fish, he said, are his principal food but unlike the Eskimo he adds some luxuries of civilization. At the trading post he obtains tea at $3 a pound; sugar at $2; tobacco at $4, and a 95-pound sack of flour for $10.
Tolstoy on his expedition was accompanied by Horace Ashton and W. J. Casel and a party of Indian guides and trappers. They journeyed 2,000 miles by canoe to the far northern part of Windy lake and on the return 800 miles were made by dog sled in 25 days.
The expedition found that due to the burning of the woods in the vicinity of Reindeer lake, the caribou have been forced to seek new winter shelter. The party made moving pictures of the migration. Count Tolstoy said he found the caribou quite tame and believed they could easily be domesticated.

MOVIES

POLICE DETECTIVE ROLE LON CHANEY'S NEWEST At The Liberty Sunday

Lon Chaney appears in an entirely new role, as a police detective, in "While the City Sleeps," his latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vehicle which comes Sunday to the Liberty Theatre.
The story, directed by Jack Conway, of "Fetive Miles Out" fame, is a vivid romance of police and gangster warfare in New York. Chaney, heading a band of detectives, fights a machine gun duel with a gangster army, participates in a running battle across the roofs of the city, and intimate details of such police practice as the "shadow box" and third degree, fingerprinting and other identification tricks of detectives are shown in an inside view of police procedure.
Through the succession of thrills runs a pretty love story between Chaney, the heroine, Anita Page, and Carroll Nye, who plays a youthful gangster. The cast includes Mae Busch, last seen with

"SUNRISE" COMING TO ANTLERS

"Sunrise," hailed as a greater picture than "What Price Glory," though of an entirely different nature, will be the attraction at the Antlers Theatre for a run of 3 days beginning Monday. This will be the first showing here of the first picture made in this country by the noted European director, F. W. Murnau, the man who upset all Hollywood traditions and New York standards of excellence during the long runs of the picture in both places.
No picture which has ever played Roseburg has been heralded for so great a number of novelties as are said to be shown in "Sunrise."
The cast of "Sunrise" is headed by Janet Gaynor, who starred in "The Heaven," and George O'Brien, long a favorite in Fox pictures.
