THE TINYMITES

READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

The Tines still stayed out of sight. Then Scouty said, "It isn't right for us to stand so idly by and see the coal men harmed. An awful fuss by them was made when they were picked up in that spade. They don't know what's to happen. It's no wonder they're alarmed."

"Don't be too hasty," Copy cried. "You'd best stay right here by my side until we see what that big man is planning to do next. He's laughing at the coal men now. He thinks it's all a joke somehow. The way he's acting really has me very much perplexed."

Then Clowny climbed in. "Look," said he. "Some little railroad tracks I see. They run right by the big bold man. I wonder what's in store. I haven't seen a train round here, but back a while I can hear a train heading this way now. That's what the tracks are for."

And he was right. It wasn't long until, with merry clang and bong,
