

ROTARIANS WILL FLY TO DISTRICT MEET VANCOUVER

A large group of local Rotarians plan to attend the district Rotary conference to be held in Vancouver, B. C., May 8, 7 and 8. Many clubs of the district are arranging for airplanes to transport their delegations and considerable advertising is being given this feature of the convention. A cup has been offered as a prize to the club that sends the most members the greatest total mileage by airplane. The Ketchikan, Alaska, club is one that has entered and is sending a large delegation by air. Neater clubs, however, may win by sending a larger number of delegates over a shorter distance. There are 65 clubs in the district.

The Roseburg Rotarians do not plan to fly to the convention, but quite a number are expected to make the trip. Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Booth and Mr. and Mrs. Dexter Rice are among those who have already announced that they will go.

LIQUOR NOT FROM HOME OF WOMAN KILLED IN RAID

(Continued from page 1)

ter he had slugged her husband, Joseph. The deputy was himself shot in the leg by the Dekings' young son, Gerald, and is recovering in a hospital.

Wets Offer $50,000.
LOGAN, Utah, April 1.—An offer of $50,000 has been sent to attorneys for the family of Joseph Deking, Aurora, Ill., to assist in prosecution of raiders who shot Mrs. Deking to death, by Orman W. Ewing, Salt Lake broker and mining man, Mr. Ewing announced here.

The proposal, Mr. Ewing said, was made with the consent of other persons in western states interested in the association against the prohibition amendment.

Reply has been received by Mr. Ewing, he said, indicating that funds are needed, and Ewing said he had already directed his attorney to solicit the funds.

"While we deplore the need for publicity in this gruesome case," Mr. Ewing said, "nevertheless, Mrs. Deking's martyrdom may save others a like fate at the hands of the fanatics who have succeeded in setting aside the inalienable rights and guarantees of the constitution."

Ewing added that the offer was originally made for the announced purpose of giving Mrs. Deking a public funeral and to assist in prosecution of her slayers.

Would Curb Dry Agents
CHICAGO, Apr. 1.—Resolutions intended to curb what he calls the "unconstitutional" activities of dry agents have been drawn up for presentation to the next session of congress, by Representative A. J. Sabath, of the fifth Illinois district.

Citing the killing of Mrs. Lillian Deking of Aurora, Ill., which he called "the assassination of a defenseless mother in her own home," Congressman Sabath charged that the prohibition law has "made insecure the liberty, homes, even the lives of American citizens."

Congress, under terms of the

Everybody Drives
A Used Car—Get Yourself a Good
One From Our Stock

Studebaker, 1923. Has enclosures.

Chevrolet sedan. Latest six cylinder car. Has been run 1700 miles. Better than a demonstrator.

Chrysler coach, 1926. Fine mechanical condition. Excellent appearance.

Dodge sedan, 1926 production. Five-bearing crankshaft—more bearings than many six-cylinder cars.

Buick 1922 touring. Owned and cared for by particular people. We believe this to be the best used car of its production in town.

Ford coupe, 1926. This car looks almost like new. In fine running order. Just the thing for the second car in the family.

Ford 1-ton truck. Lengthened chassis. New over-size tires on rear. Engine reconditioned. Chassis in fine condition.

These cars and many others you may find in our stock. See our cars before you buy—likely we have just what you are looking for.

J. O. Newland & Son

PHONE 458
For your protection make your used car purchase from a reputable dealer.

NOTED WRITER IS DEAD; 77 YRS. OLD

BRANDER MATTHEWS
Associated Press

(Associated Press Special Wire)

NEW YORK, April 1.—Brander Matthews, critic, educator and playwright, died yesterday of influenza and the lingering effects of a stroke of paralysis he suffered two and a half years ago. He was 77 years old.

For 50 years he was a noted first nighter. His dramatic works included "A Gold Mine," "Margery's Lover," "On Probation" and "The Decision of the Court." He also wrote one novel, "His Father's Son."

He served as president of National Institute of Arts and Letters and was first chairman of the simplified spelling board.

resolution, would instruct the attorney general, secretary of the treasury and prohibition director to issue rules of conduct to all prohibition enforcement officials, "agents, spies, snoopers and agents."

REBEL AIRPLANE BOMBS NACIO; TWO SOLDIERS SLAIN

(Continued from page 1)

the adjoining American town of Naco, Ariz.

The first of the three bombs dropped in the afternoon caused a stampede of American sightseers through the international gate. These had been in the cafe section of town which was not visited by the aerial attack.

Scores of Americans perched on box cars on the American side of the border, witnessed the explosion of the fatal bomb.

SERVICES HELD FOR MRS. G. GORDON

Funeral services for Mrs. Gilmann Gordon, who passed away at her home in Glendale Friday, were held at Ten Mile Sunday afternoon. A large crowd of friends assembled for the last rites, many attending from Glendale and other parts of the county. Burial was in the Ten Mile cemetery in charge of M. E. Ritter of the Roseburg Undertaking company.

HIRAM BARKER IS BURIED SATURDAY

Services were held Saturday for Hiram Barker, well known resident of Edenbowyer, at the chapel of the Roseburg Undertaking company, which was filled to capacity by friends from Glide, where Mr. Barker formerly lived, and in this city. There were many beautiful floral offerings, attending the service in which he was held. M. E. Ritter was in charge of arrangements and burial was in the Oak Creek cemetery.

AGRICULTURAL REPORT COUNTY GRANGE HEARD

(Continued from page 1)

Evergreen Grange.
Each grange of the county has been very active in its agricultural program, which the Pomona grange holds to be one of the most important activities. The subordinate granges submitted their reports to the county committee, of which J. C. Leedy, county agent, is chairman, and Mr. Leedy summarized activities in the following report, which was submitted to those present at Saturday's meeting:

To the officers and members of the Douglas County Pomona Grange:
The agricultural committee of all the subordinate granges of Douglas county cooperate fully with the county agent and O. A. C. extension service in arranging and conducting meetings of value to the various communities.

In this connection a series of pruning meetings was held at various points in the county, at which time the fruit growers assembled at selected orchards where the most approved methods of pruning the important fruits were discussed and demonstrated.

Sheep Meetings Held

A series of sheep meetings was also held in the various communities, at which time H. A. Lindgren, livestock fieldman of the O. A. C. extension service gave instructive talks on management and cost of producing sheep. Dr. J. N. Shaw, veterinarian of the Oregon Experiment Station was also present at this series of meetings and gave instructive talks regarding control measures of sheep diseases, emphasizing the importance of controlling intestinal parasites and liver fluke which have been rather destructive to the sheep flocks of Douglas county.

A series of rodent control meetings was also held at the various schools as well as at the farms of Fred A. Goff at Melrose and John Casebeer at Glide. J. F. Branson of the Biological Survey was present at all of these meetings and discussed the life history and control measures for such rodents as moles, cophers and field mice, and gave demonstrations of the most approved methods of poisoning cophers and field mice and of trapping moles.

Fertilizer trials are being conducted in six orchards, the agricultural committees of the granges and the county agent cooperating with the owners in this work.
A Farmers' Week was held during the month of February, at which time every grange in the county was represented with members in attendance.

Evergreen Grange, with J. Robert McKay chairman of the agricultural committee, has held sheep, pruning and rodent control meetings with good attendance, and is encouraging club work among the boys and girls. This grange also reports that conditions are improving among the sheepmen as grass is becoming more plentiful; that turkey growing is now occupying the minds of a large number of their members; that melons will be planted in the usual acreage; and that a number of the grange members are becoming interested in bulb growing, which promises to be an important industry in the future, in Douglas county.

Melrose Grange, with Fred A. Goff chairman of the agricultural committee, has conducted a pruning demonstration, and has held sheep and rodent control meetings. The agricultural committee is assisting in the conduct of a fertilizer trial; reports that broccolli is now being harvested at profitable prices; that the early fruits are in bloom and later fruits also give promise of good crop; and that the acreage of alfalfa will be increased in that section this year.

Rescue Grange, at Lookingglass, with H. B. Montgomery chairman of the agricultural committee, reports that a sheep meeting was held at the T. E. Olivant farm; a pruning demonstration at William Voorhees' farm; and a fertilizer trial is being conducted on the R. B. Montgomery orchard; that A. F.

Millard is cooperating in the egg cost study. Rescue Grange is also assisting in the boys' and girls' club work in furnishing suitable leaders for the clubs; and has recently entertained the Kiwanis club of Roseburg.

Plan Community Fair

The Glide Grange, of which Willard Smith is chairman of the agricultural committee, has held sheep meetings and rodent control meetings and is planning a pest hunt for the coming season. Club work is being encouraged at every opportunity. A special boys' and girls' club demonstration was given by Arnold D. Collier, club agent of Lane county, assisted by two of his club boys, featuring the preparation of sheep for show purposes. The community fair, however, is the chief enterprise sponsored by the agricultural committee of the Glide grange and plans are being made to put on a bigger and better fair in 1929.

Drain Grange, with J. B. Wilson, chairman of the agricultural committee, has held sheep and pruning meetings and is planning on holding a community fair in September on a larger scale than in previous years.

Henry Cox is chairman of the agricultural committee of the South Deer Creek Grange, where a well attended sheep meeting was held. South Deer Creek has a rodent control district which is sponsored by the grange. Crop reporting is also one of the activities of the agricultural committee. South Deer Creek grange is cooperating with Glide in holding a community fair.

Dairying is the principal occupation in the Smith River section and naturally the activities of the agricultural committee of the Smith River Grange center around this industry.

REPORT OF CONDITION OF THE First State and Savings Bank

at Roseburg, County of Douglas, Oregon, at close of business March 27, 1929.

RESOURCES
Loans and discounts	$299,367.00
Bonds, securities, etc.	254,407.01
Banking house, none, furniture and fixtures	$5,516.00
Real estate owned other than banking house	40,295.84
Cash, due from banks and cash items	61,245.60
Other resources	312.50
Total	$659,543.95
LIABILITIES
Capital stock paid in	$ 50,000.00
Surplus	15,000.00
Undivided profits—net	4,449.99
Reserves	488.44
Demand deposits	280,300.95
Time certificates	357,210.00
Savings deposits
Total	$659,543.95

State of Oregon, County of Douglas, ss:

I, G. V. Wimberly, cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 30th day of March, 1929.
F. P. Clemens, Notary Public for Oregon. My commission expires Sept. 26, 1931.
(Seal)

G. V. WIMBERLY, Cashier.
Correct—Attest:
J. H. Booth
H. Wollenberg
H. W. Booth
V. J. Micelli
Directors.

$1.00 SPECIAL $1.00 THIS WEEK ONLY

This price is cash and carry. Call for and deliver at regular prices.

Ladies Coats Cleaned and Pressed$1.00
Men's Overcoats Cleaned and Pressed$1.00

Roseburg Cleaners

Phone 472 308 N. Jackson

DOUGLAS FUNERAL HOME

Established 1926

Perfect Funeral Services
Fair and Reasonable Prices

AMBULANCE SERVICE

PHONE 112 H. C. STEARNS PHONE 112
Pine and Lane Sts. Manager Lady Attendant

CARD OF THANKS

In retiring from business I wish to thank the people of Roseburg for their kind and liberal patronage and for their many personal courtesies during the 17 years I have been in business in Roseburg.

I can assure my friends that my successors will maintain the same high standards of service that have marked our business in the past and are deserving of the best cooperation, courtesy and patronage. They are men in whom the utmost confidence and trust can be imposed, and their experience assures a high quality product in supplying the bakery needs of Roseburg.

AUGUST HECK
Retiring Proprietor of the Oregon Bakery

cultural committee of the Smith River Grange center around improving dairy practices and production of feed for dairy cows. Reed's Canary grass, Ladino clover and corn silage are being thoroughly tried out by the farmers of that section, cooperating with the agricultural committee of the grange. Dairy day of the Farmers' Week program was held in Reed's part in cooperation with the agricultural committee of Smith River Grange; fifty dairyman attended.

Myrtle Creek Grange is the newest grange in the county but is getting off to a splendid start. Hans Weaver is chairman of the agricultural committee, composed of five members. At the last regular meeting of the grange E. N. Breesman, associate agronomist of the Oregon Experiment Station, gave an interesting discussion on crop production. However, the principal activity of the Myrtle Creek Grange has been the organization of the Myrtle Creek Livestock Marketing association, composed of stockmen in Myrtle Creek and adjacent communities. This organization will pool lambs and other livestock and ship direct. H. F. Traub is chairman of the board of directors.

Fraternally submitted,
J. C. LEEDY,
Chairman, Agricultural Committee, Douglas County Pomona Grange.

Garden cultivators and seeders of all kinds are sold at Wharton Bros.

EASTER GREETINGS FROM CARTER'S TIRE SHOP

I went to church last eve to hear the woman preacher preach. The sermon was good, the message was delivered in a kind, instructive, appealing way. I came home and sat down in my easy chair to meditate about the sermon and Easter.

Then I retired to my bed and rolled up in my blankets. That night I dreamed a soul inspiring dream. I dreamed of childhood fifty years ago; of meeting my most beloved sister, who passed from earth life forty years ago. This sister would always do little things for me, such as hanging my lost knife, or a stout string, or any little thing I requested her to do, while the other sister now living, would say "hunt it yourself, you lazy walloper."

With my departed sister in my dream, we ran out in the yard, played among the trees, the lilac and rose bushes; we went down in the old orchard, under the old apple tree, we hung from the limb and turned out bodies through our hands and we called it "skinning the cat." We went to the high sand bank, ran and jumped and played in the sand. There I awoke from my dream. I said to myself "What a beautiful dream, just like life." Then I cuddled up under the blankets and tried to sink back to that unconscious, pleasant state of mind—heaven and dreamland.

This I could not do; I raised the window blind and peeped out, daylight was here, the moon was still shining dimly in the west. The sweet smelling morning air was perfumed from the blooming cherry peeling way. I came home and sat down in my easy chair to meditate about the sermon and Easter.

Then I retired to my bed and rolled up in my blankets. That night I dreamed a soul inspiring dream. I dreamed of childhood fifty years ago; of meeting my most beloved sister, who passed from earth life forty years ago. This sister would always do little things for me, such as hanging my lost knife, or a stout string, or any little thing I requested her to do, while the other sister now living, would say "hunt it yourself, you lazy walloper."

With my departed sister in my dream, we ran out in the yard, played among the trees, the lilac and rose bushes; we went down in the old orchard, under the old apple tree, we hung from the limb and turned out bodies through our hands and we called it "skinning the cat." We went to the high sand bank, ran and jumped and played in the sand. There I awoke from my dream. I said to myself "What a beautiful dream, just like life." Then I cuddled up under the blankets and tried to sink back to that unconscious, pleasant state of mind—heaven and dreamland.

This I could not do; I raised the window blind and peeped out, daylight was here, the moon was still shining dimly in the west. The sweet smelling morning air was perfumed from the blooming cherry peeling way. I came home and sat down in my easy chair to meditate about the sermon and Easter.

Then I retired to my bed and rolled up in my blankets. That night I dreamed a soul inspiring dream. I dreamed of childhood fifty years ago; of meeting my most beloved sister, who passed from earth life forty years ago. This sister would always do little things for me, such as hanging my lost knife, or a stout string, or any little thing I requested her to do, while the other sister now living, would say "hunt it yourself, you lazy walloper."

With my departed sister in my dream, we ran out in the yard, played among the trees, the lilac and rose bushes; we went down in the old orchard, under the old apple tree, we hung from the limb and turned out bodies through our hands and we called it "skinning the cat." We went to the high sand bank, ran and jumped and played in the sand. There I awoke from my dream. I said to myself "What a beautiful dream, just like life." Then I cuddled up under the blankets and tried to sink back to that unconscious, pleasant state of mind—heaven and dreamland.

This I could not do; I raised the window blind and peeped out, daylight was here, the moon was still shining dimly in the west. The sweet smelling morning air was perfumed from the blooming cherry peeling way. I came home and sat down in my easy chair to meditate about the sermon and Easter.

Then I retired to my bed and rolled up in my blankets. That night I dreamed a soul inspiring dream. I dreamed of childhood fifty years ago; of meeting my most beloved sister, who passed from earth life forty years ago. This sister would always do little things for me, such as hanging my lost knife, or a stout string, or any little thing I requested her to do, while the other sister now living, would say "hunt it yourself, you lazy walloper."

With my departed sister in my dream, we ran out in the yard, played among the trees, the lilac and rose bushes; we went down in the old orchard, under the old apple tree, we hung from the limb and turned out bodies through our hands and we called it "skinning the cat." We went to the high sand bank, ran and jumped and played in the sand. There I awoke from my dream. I said to myself "What a beautiful dream, just like life." Then I cuddled up under the blankets and tried to sink back to that unconscious, pleasant state of mind—heaven and dreamland.

This I could not do; I raised the window blind and peeped out, daylight was here, the moon was still shining dimly in the west. The sweet smelling morning air was perfumed from the blooming cherry peeling way. I came home and sat down in my easy chair to meditate about the sermon and Easter.

Then I retired to my bed and rolled up in my blankets. That night I dreamed a soul inspiring dream. I dreamed of childhood fifty years ago; of meeting my most beloved sister, who passed from earth life forty years ago. This sister would always do little things for me, such as hanging my lost knife, or a stout string, or any little thing I requested her to do, while the other sister now living, would say "hunt it yourself, you lazy walloper."

With my departed sister in my dream, we ran out in the yard, played among the trees, the lilac and rose bushes; we went down in the old orchard, under the old apple tree, we hung from the limb and turned out bodies through our hands and we called it "skinning the cat." We went to the high sand bank, ran and jumped and played in the sand. There I awoke from my dream. I said to myself "What a beautiful dream, just like life." Then I cuddled up under the blankets and tried to sink back to that unconscious, pleasant state of mind—heaven and dreamland.

This I could not do; I raised the window blind and peeped out, daylight was here, the moon was still shining dimly in the west. The sweet smelling morning air was perfumed from the blooming cherry peeling way. I came home and sat down in my easy chair to meditate about the sermon and Easter.

Then I retired to my bed and rolled up in my blankets. That night I dreamed a soul inspiring dream. I dreamed of childhood fifty years ago; of meeting my most beloved sister, who passed from earth life forty years ago. This sister would always do little things for me, such as hanging my lost knife, or a stout string, or any little thing I requested her to do, while the other sister now living, would say "hunt it yourself, you lazy walloper."

With my departed sister in my dream, we ran out in the yard, played among the trees, the lilac and rose bushes; we went down in the old orchard, under the old apple tree, we hung from the limb and turned out bodies through our hands and we called it "skinning the cat." We went to the high sand bank, ran and jumped and played in the sand. There I awoke from my dream. I said to myself "What a beautiful dream, just like life." Then I cuddled up under the blankets and tried to sink back to that unconscious, pleasant state of mind—heaven and dreamland.

This I could not do; I raised the window blind and peeped out, daylight was here, the moon was still shining dimly in the west. The sweet smelling morning air was perfumed from the blooming cherry peeling way. I came home and sat down in my easy chair to meditate about the sermon and Easter.

Then I retired to my bed and rolled up in my blankets. That night I dreamed a soul inspiring dream. I dreamed of childhood fifty years ago; of meeting my most beloved sister, who passed from earth life forty years ago. This sister would always do little things for me, such as hanging my lost knife, or a stout string, or any little thing I requested her to do, while the other sister now living, would say "hunt it yourself, you lazy walloper."

With my departed sister in my dream, we ran out in the yard, played among the trees, the lilac and rose bushes; we went down in the old orchard, under the old apple tree, we hung from the limb and turned out bodies through our hands and we called it "skinning the cat." We went to the high sand bank, ran and jumped and played in the sand. There I awoke from my dream. I said to myself "What a beautiful dream, just like life." Then I cuddled up under the blankets and tried to sink back to that unconscious, pleasant state of mind—heaven and dreamland.

This I could not do; I raised the window blind and peeped out, daylight was here, the moon was still shining dimly in the west. The sweet smelling morning air was perfumed from the blooming cherry peeling way. I came home and sat down in my easy chair to meditate about the sermon and Easter.

Then I retired to my bed and rolled up in my blankets. That night I dreamed a soul inspiring dream. I dreamed of childhood fifty years ago; of meeting my most beloved sister, who passed from earth life forty years ago. This sister would always do little things for me, such as hanging my lost knife, or a stout string, or any little thing I requested her to do, while the other sister now living, would say "hunt it yourself, you lazy walloper."

With my departed sister in my dream, we ran out in the yard, played among the trees, the lilac and rose bushes; we went down in the old orchard, under the old apple tree, we hung from the limb and turned out bodies through our hands and we called it "skinning the cat." We went to the high sand bank, ran and jumped and played in the sand. There I awoke from my dream. I said to myself "What a beautiful dream, just like life." Then I cuddled up under the blankets and tried to sink back to that unconscious, pleasant state of mind—heaven and dreamland.

This I could not do; I raised the window blind and peeped out, daylight was here, the moon was still shining dimly in the west. The sweet smelling morning air was perfumed from the blooming cherry peeling way. I came home and sat down in my easy chair to meditate about the sermon and Easter.

Then I retired to my bed and rolled up in my blankets. That night I dreamed a soul inspiring dream. I dreamed of childhood fifty years ago; of meeting my most beloved sister, who passed from earth life forty years ago. This sister would always do little things for me, such as hanging my lost knife, or a stout string, or any little thing I requested her to do, while the other sister now living, would say "hunt it yourself, you lazy walloper."

With my departed sister in my dream, we ran out in the yard, played among the trees, the lilac and rose bushes; we went down in the old orchard, under the old apple tree, we hung from the limb and turned out bodies through our hands and we called it "skinning the cat." We went to the high sand bank, ran and jumped and played in the sand. There I awoke from my dream. I said to myself "What a beautiful dream, just like life." Then I cuddled up under the blankets and tried to sink back to that unconscious, pleasant state of mind—heaven and dreamland.

This I could not do; I raised the window blind and peeped out, daylight was here, the moon was still shining dimly in the west. The sweet smelling morning air was perfumed from the blooming cherry peeling way. I came home and sat down in my easy chair to meditate about the sermon and Easter.

Then I retired to my bed and rolled up in my blankets. That night I dreamed a soul inspiring dream. I dreamed of childhood fifty years ago; of meeting my most beloved sister, who passed from earth life forty years ago. This sister would always do little things for me, such as hanging my lost knife, or a stout string, or any little thing I requested her to do, while the other sister now living, would say "hunt it yourself, you lazy walloper."

With my departed sister in my dream, we ran out in the yard, played among the trees, the lilac and rose bushes; we went down in the old orchard, under the old apple tree, we hung from the limb and turned out bodies through our hands and we called it "skinning the cat." We went to the high sand bank, ran and jumped and played in the sand. There I awoke from my dream. I said to myself "What a beautiful dream, just like life." Then I cuddled up under the blankets and tried to sink back to that unconscious, pleasant state of mind—heaven and dreamland.

This I could not do; I raised the window blind and peeped out, daylight was here, the moon was still shining dimly in the west. The sweet smelling morning air was perfumed from the blooming cherry peeling way. I came home and sat down in my easy chair to meditate about the sermon and Easter.

Then I retired to my bed and rolled up in my blankets. That night I dreamed a soul inspiring dream. I dreamed of childhood fifty years ago; of meeting my most beloved sister, who passed from earth life forty years ago. This sister would always do little things for me, such as hanging my lost knife, or a stout string, or any little thing I requested her to do, while the other sister now living, would say "hunt it yourself, you lazy walloper."

With my departed sister in my dream, we ran out in the yard, played among the trees, the lilac and rose bushes; we went down in the old orchard, under the old apple tree, we hung from the limb and turned out bodies through our hands and we called it "skinning the cat." We went to the high sand bank, ran and jumped and played in the sand. There I awoke from my dream. I said to myself "What a beautiful dream, just like life." Then I cuddled up under the blankets and tried to sink back to that unconscious, pleasant state of mind—heaven and dreamland.

This I could not do; I raised the window blind and peeped out, daylight was here, the moon was still shining dimly in the west. The sweet smelling morning air was perfumed from the blooming cherry peeling way. I came home and sat down in my easy chair to meditate about the sermon and Easter.

Then I retired to my bed and rolled up in my blankets. That night I dreamed a soul inspiring dream. I dreamed of childhood fifty years ago; of meeting my most beloved sister, who passed from earth life forty years ago. This sister would always do little things for me, such as hanging my lost knife, or a stout string, or any little thing I requested her to do, while the other sister now living, would say "hunt it yourself, you lazy walloper."

With my departed sister in my dream, we ran out in the yard, played among the trees, the lilac and rose bushes; we went down in the old orchard, under the old apple tree, we hung from the limb and turned out bodies through our hands and we called it "skinning the cat." We went to the high sand bank, ran and jumped and played in the sand. There I awoke from my dream. I said to myself "What a beautiful dream, just like life." Then I cuddled up under the blankets and tried to sink back to that unconscious, pleasant state of mind—heaven and dreamland.

This I could not do; I raised the window blind and peeped out, daylight was here, the moon was still shining dimly in the west. The sweet smelling morning air was perfumed from the blooming cherry peeling way. I came home and sat down in my easy chair to meditate about the sermon and Easter.

Then I retired to my bed and rolled up in my blankets. That night I dreamed a soul inspiring dream. I dreamed of childhood fifty years ago; of meeting my most beloved sister, who passed from earth life forty years ago. This sister would always do little things for me, such as hanging my lost knife, or a stout string, or any little thing I requested her to do, while the other sister now living, would say "hunt it yourself, you lazy walloper."

With my departed sister in my dream, we ran out in the yard, played among the trees, the lilac and rose bushes; we went down in the old orchard, under the