READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

The poor old tub man was surprised. Of course he never realized that he was going to be upset by Old Bird Goody. The bird had pounced him in the nest, and it was one of those hard blows that knock a person to the ground, like only hard blows do.

The Goodygo stood back, real mad, while Master Tub Man looked quite sad. "That's what you get for roosting me," the long-necked bird cried out. "I don't mind eating you now and then, but don't do things like that again, 'cause if you do, I'll just hand you another painful blow."

The Tymbies still hid from view. They didn't know just what to do. They liked the friendly old man, but they feared the monstrous bird. "I wish," said Betty, "we could add the man, 'cause he seems quite afraid. The two are talking back and forth, but I can't hear a word."

Then Carpy said, "Let's run away. This is no place for us to play. We're bound to get in trouble if we stop and interfere. I'd like to help the old tub man, but I see no way that I can. The safest place for us is many, many miles from here."

And then the bunch heard Clowzy roar, "Oh, look! He's hitting him once more. I simply cannot stand to see an old man knocked around. I may get hurt, but I don't care. At least I'll give that bird a scare." And not a moment passed ere little Clowzy felt the ground.

He dove right down from off the hill, which gave all of the rest a thrill. It was a flying tackle. Clowzy surely had the knack. The thought of it may seem absurd, but round the legs he caught the bird. Real quicky Master Goodygo was flat upon his back.
