NEUNER TELLS OF GLENDALE'S RISE; PREDICTS GROWTH

under the guidance of these three incorporators, prospered and continued to grow, until 1921, when the capital stock was increased to $100,000, and during all of this time the company added a substantial acreage of standing timber for future use. It also established two large retail lumber yards in Lodi and Stockton, California, both supplied from the Glendale mill and yard, thus creating its own markets for its cut.
"In 1922, Mr. Snyder died—long before his life's task was completed; for many years prior to his death he confided in his friends, his dream and objective of a real, honest-to-God sawmill, with a railroad to supply the logs, and with a great pond to store them. But the great ruler of the universe called him such, before his dream became a realization.
"The dreamer lives forever. While the toiler dies in a day."
"With the passing of Dave Snyder from the stage of action, a great character disappeared—a man many men, universally respected by all who knew him; one who believed in his fellow-men and was always ready to lend a friendly hand; a captain of industry, not a man of letters, but a diamond in the rough. Ordinarily, with the passing of such a man, the community suffers a great loss, for generally the relatives retire to private life and enjoy the fruits of the departed's labor; live in peace and comfort, without the worry of a competitive business or to assume great responsibilities of an industrial plant.
"Son Carries on Work
"Fortunately, however, Mr. Snyder always retained the controlling interest in his company and lived in the future, not in the past. Al-berth Snyder, the son, bidden into manhood years before the noble sire of this worthy son had departed this life, and he had inherited all of the instincts and manly attributes of his father. He was not only especially prepared and trained to undertake and carry on the uncompleted life's work or tasks of his father, but early in manhood gave promise of a real business ability in guiding the affairs of this company.
"There is no work of genius which has not been the delight of mankind; no work of genius to which the human heart and soul have not sooner or later responded.
"Genius must be born, and never can be taught."
"So this young man succeeded his father as president of the company and with his associates, Zwight and Fisher, immediately began to carry on and finish the uncompleted plan and objective of the company. And I might say, at a time when conservatism seemed to permeate the entire land, the capital stock again had to be increased—this time to $300,000. The rails were laid for a six-mile railroad, additional timber was purchased, and this magnificent mill was constructed at a final outlay of over $225,000, and the dream of a quarter of a century had been realized. Remember, not a share of this stock was peddled or advertised for sale on the market; not a cent of donations was asked from anyone. Everything was purchased for value, and here we have the finished sawmill, the constructed monument, if you please, carefully planned and skillfully built, the last word in electrical and mechanical engineering—erected, my friends, upon a foundation of honesty and integrity, with capital earned by the sweat of brow and strength of arm. Your very presence here is mute evidence of this fact, yes.
"Genius, like humanity, rests for want of use."
"The present plan of the company calls for an additional three miles of railroad extension, and when fully extended it will tap 250 million feet of timber, the greater portion of which is owned by this company. In addition thereto, it owns individually and has under contract approximately 125 million feet, within a radius of four miles from the mill, which will be conveyed to the mill pond by truck. The total acreage of timber owned and under contract by the company will supply this mill for the next fifteen years of continuous operation.
"Strong Concerns
"Forty-eight years this concern has withstood the financial storms of the country and the fluctuations of the lumber markets, and still it succeeded and prospered. During all of this time, it added improvements to its plants and carried a payroll, but never missed a pay day. They have had their ups and downs, privations and self-denials, but always considered their working men, with safety appliances and better working conditions. For nearly a third of a century this company never had a strike or serious labor trouble. When other companies on the coast were required to shut down, this concern ran full blast continuously, increasing its capacity yearly, expanding constantly. What is the secret? I asked Dave Snyder during his lifetime, and his answer was, 'Treat your working men white, give them a living wage, be sympathetic to their complaints; in short, give them a square deal. That is all the honest laborer demands, and he is entitled to nothing less. I have labored all my life and appreciate his position. Remember, they are only human beings and are entitled to be treated as such.'
"Corporations, my friends, are berated throughout the land as money-making machines, through which men might escape their just liability, so that they may not an-

PHILHARMONIC ORCHESTRA IN CONCERT HERE TONIGHT

The concert of the Philharmonic orchestra of Los Angeles that is to be given this evening at the sealer high auditorium is the greatest musical event in the history of Roseburg. This organization is the finest symphony orchestra on the coast and one of the six great orchestras of the world. This tour is the second tour of the north-west and is made in celebration of the tenth anniversary of the founding of the orchestra.
The tour is being made under the personal direction of George Leslie Smith who was here in February to arrange for the concert.
The orchestra is made up of sixty-five members with everyone an artist on his instrument. Alfred Hertz who is the conductor of the San Francisco Symphony, is leading the orchestra. He has an enviable reputation as a conductor and is well known in Europe and America. He is the leading conductor of the famous Hollywood Bowl concerts in the summer. Both the conductor and the orchestra are well known in Roseburg through their radio concerts and music lovers are very happy to hear them at first hand.
The Philharmonic orchestra was founded in 1919 by William An-draws Clark, Jr., who is accompanying it on the tour. It is through his interest that so fine an orchestra is maintained in Los Angeles and through his generosity that we have the privilege of hearing one of the really great musical organizations in Roseburg.

Leaves for Coos Bay—Kenneth N. Hay of Eugene, representative in this section of the state for P. J. Cronin & Co., dealer in automotive supplies and radios left here yesterday for Coos Bay. Mr. Hay spent several days here on business for the company.
Drunkness Charged—D. Green of Roseburg, who is employed in construction work at Glendale, was arrested there last night on a charge of drunkenness. He was bound over by the justice of the peace until after the celebration, being released until the time of his hearing.
To Leave for East—E. J. Bartholomew of Portland, who is a representative of the Marshall Wells Hardware company in this section, has received a wire from his company to leave Friday for Duluth for a convention of the company. Mr. Bartholomew will leave by air, making the entire trip by airplane.
Visiting Mrs. Gross—Mrs. Bessie Bjork, of San Francisco, and Miss Irene Boone, of Portland, arrived in the city from the north last evening and were entertained at the home of their cousin, Mrs. G. E. Gross, of North Roseburg. This afternoon Mrs. Bjork will continue on south to her home in the California city, but Miss Boone will remain for a few days visit with Mrs. Gross and family.
Enroute North—Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Bynon of North Bend visited in this city for a short time yesterday with Mildred Bynon, enroute north. They were accompanied by Mrs. Bynon's brother, W. S. Mitchell, of Chicago, Ill., who is general manager of finance of the Continental Airways Inc., and who has spent some time on the coast taking views of the coast and making plans for the establishing of a landing field at Marshfield. Mr. Mitchell has two planes on the bay at the present time.

swer for the chance they take in a business venture. Men have souls; corporations do not. But, in the case of this company, the souls of the men who compose the company are reflected in the policy of this institution. It has never, in all my time upon the scene of action in Douglas county, resisted or even protested the payment of a special or other tax for any worthy cause; it has helped to build your school houses, maintain and improve your highways and by-ways, build your town and develop your community, and, for that matter, the entire county. We need more corporations of this type in this county and state; they are assets, not liabilities, as many of them are.
Patronize Home Industry
"it has been a community builder; it has always had the interest of Glendale at heart. Remember, this is an age of cooperation and organization. The people and organizations of a community must act collectively and operate jointly and as a systematic whole if they would build up the town and country making up the community. The town must patronize and help the country create a market for its products; the country must help and patronize the town, merchants and its institutions. You cannot help your town and county by patronizing the mail order house or the itinerant peddler. Neither contributes to your welfare. Nor does either reduce your tax burdens or help build up your schools and other civic institutions. We all must have civic pride, and take an interest in our own towns and communities, and in all public matters affecting and developing the county and the state. A person is not entitled to succeed unless he gives of his time and talents to better conditions. 'Live and let live' should be our motto. 'Give home products the preference.' 'Patronize home industry' should be the watchwords of every home. If we were one-half as loyal as our California friends on the south, with our superior climate, our greater natural resources, the population of Oregon would double in the next ten years.
Douglas county and the entire state of Oregon needs more industries. Every lover of his town, county and state should become 'industrial minded,' spread the gospel of our great natural resources, invite and encourage the tourist to come. Tell each of your community, encourage capital to come to our state. No matter where investment is found to redound in your favor; for, after all, in community building and in the developing of a country, there must be a unity of action, a sympathetic cooperation. If one section does not attract an industry, another section may; therefore, let us not be selfish in building up a great state.
Glendale Congratulated
"You people of Glendale are entitled to congratulations. You met with a terrible catastrophe last year, when your town burned to the ground. You were not discouraged; you are rebuilding upon the smoldering ruins, a city beautiful, and you have the admiration of the entire state. You are entitled to success; you need capitals of industry to establish more sawmills, build more planing mills, box factories. Douglas county uses as much or more box shooks than any other county in the state. Why do we have to import when we have the raw material? You need capital to harness your streams and to develop your valleys; more people to till your valleys. You need more Snyders, more Glendale Lumber companies, to build more industrial monuments, to cut your billions of feet of standing timber tributary to your town. You need capital to employ labor, to keep the wheels of industry rolling down the avenue of prosperity.
The history of the institution which you do honor today has shown the way, and is the 'trail blazer' in developing the lumbering industry of your section. It should be an inspiration to every man, and to every person of the land who might be carried away by the mistaken idea that 'opportunities' has passed and gone. Everyone but the idle man who is waiting for it around the corner and prays that it never reaches him, knows that the opportunities are greater today, than ever before, for the man who is honest and has willing hands. While competition is keener, the demand for business and industrial executives has never been greater. We may well take heed from the lines of Walter Mason in 'opportunity'—
'They do me wrong who say I come no more
When once I knock and fall to find you in;
For every day I stand without your door,
And bid you work, and rise to fight and win.'
'It is very fitting and and proper that you pay honor and tribute to this great achievement. The founder of this industrial monument sleeps on yonder knoll overlooking
