MOTHER O' MINE

If I were, hanged on the highest hill,
Mother O' Mine
Oh Mother O' Mine
I know whose love would follow
me still,
Oh Mother O' Mine
Mother O' Mine

If I were drowned in the deepest sea,
Oh Mother O' Mine
Mother O' Mine
I know whose tears would flow
down to me,
Mother O' Mine
Oh Mother O' Mine

If I were damned of body and soul
Mother O' Mine
Mother O' Mine
I know whose prayers would make me whole,
Mother O' Mine
Oh Mother O' Mine

—Kipling.

Tomorrow the nation will honor Mother, rich and poor, the happy and sad, and the good and the bad alike. Happy those who will sit during the Mother's Day service with Mother at their side, reverent and sad those who will look back across the years with hearts aching with pain remembering the many times Mother paid the price for her child's gain. Mother is a magic word with which none other can compare. The hardest convict will soften at the thought of mother. She places no price upon her deeds but prompted by love, her hands have done, we scarcely realize until she is gone. The thin gray hair upon many a mother's brow is a halo, and the beauty of her soul a picture which artists cannot paint. Mother's Day is rapidly gaining in significance, and no longer does it bring only a picture of a gray haired mother. To each individual it means their own Mother.

White flowers and red will be worn tomorrow throughout the land; the wearer of the red, glad at the thought of a living Mother. The wearers of the white flower will have a vision of the beauties of Mother, clearer perhaps for her absence and with sadness will remember that the whole way through there never was another like—Mother.

Churches will hold special services tomorrow in honor of Mother with special music arranged for the day. Many families will gather in reunion and in Roseburg as in every city large or small tomorrow will be Mother's Day.

Poppy Sale Significant of Soldier Dead

IN FLANDERS FIELDS
In Flanders fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly
Scarce heard amid the guns below.

We are the Dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now we lie
In Flanders fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe;
To you from falling hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high;
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
In Flanders fields.

Today the winds are low in Flanders fields and the world has found release from war. Soldiers sleep beneath the blowing poppies in the blessedness of peace. Guns are quiet on the fields of Flanders and poppies wave gently in the quiet breezes. White crosses mark the graves of the soldier dead.

To the American Legion and the auxiliary comes the task of bearing the torch held high by the soldiers on the battle fields of France. Fighting side by side with soldiers who now sleep, the returned soldiers take their places in the legion today bearing the torch in time of peace. To the Legionnaire has come the responsibility of caring for the families disrupted by war; the responsibility of the soldier fighting the battle for health. Through the Legion, hospitals have been established for the Buddies who were wounded in action and returned home unable to bear the torch further.

The war is over. The Legion goes on—serving in time of peace as well as in time of war. They will not break faith with their Buddies who died. Symbolic of the far away fields of Flanders, the war fought in the fields of poppies is the tiny flower. Ex-soldiers fighting for health make the poppies while detained in veteran hospitals throughout the United States. The auxiliary members become the poppy vendors.

The auxiliary of the Legion asks the public's help in keeping the faith with the soldier dead and contribute toward the fund for caring for disabled soldiers and their families for which the poppy sale proceeds are used.

The annual poppy sale is scheduled for May 28 and 29th in this city and 2000 poppies will be sold according to the plans of the auxiliary.

The Woman's Day

BY ALLENE SUMNER

Mrs. Mary Ware Dennett was convicted in New York federal court the other day on a charge of "sending obscene matter through the mails," though her well-written and sane sex pamphlet, "The Sex Side of Life," had been used by Y. M. C. A. and other educational and social agencies for years.

When the pronouncement of "guilt" was read and she faced prison, her two sons of 24 and 28, who were really responsible for her writing the pamphlet, as she put in written form the same explanations given their youthful questions, indicated their continual and eternal "standing by" their mother, just as they always had.

The "proof of the pudding" in the eating, and the proof of disputed educational methods, it seems to me, is in the type of person these methods produce. Mrs. Dennett's sons seem to speak for their mother's honesty and sanity of method.

Her host of "character witnesses," testifying to the good she had done, should have been another "proof of the pudding," being those who, too, have contributed to the national good.

But, no, a jury composed of laymen, with an utter lack of any understanding of social or educational necessity, decreed that she was guilty, because she had dared to frank about sex.

And in Boston—

In Boston the other day Theodore Dreiser was found guilty of writing and causing to be sold "an obscene book." It reminded me of the day I saw the play made from the book, "The American Tragedy," and the comments of two flappers upon it, their eyes wide with horror.

"Tell you it pays to watch your step!" one of them commented, and how any "message" other than the hostess.

The invited guests were: Misses Nova Bush, Betty Oliver, Catherine Kent, Phyllis Wellman, Marie Head, Rheba Boyce, Mildred Parson, Opal Hansen, Eva Gilson, Virginia Ayers, Opal Horner, Helen McDonald, Mrs. Charles Stanton and the hostess.

Miss Helen Churchill of Portland and her brother George Churchill of the University of Oregon are at home over the week-end with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Churchill. They will spend Mother's Day at home.

Hilda Randall Hoover and Herbert Hoover

Elizabeth Davison Rockefeller and John D. Rockefeller

Traits that have brought success to Herbert Hoover are heritages of his mother.

When Herbert was six his father died. Then his mother—Hilda Randall Hoover—a gray-haired leader in the Quaker church, sewed and worked to provide food and clothing for Herbert and the other two Hoover children.

For three years she taught her children the lessons that formed the foundation of their lives. "That she died, a prayer on her lips that her family would be cared for. And the lesson she taught Herbert Hoover helped lift him from an orphan boy in the village of West Branch, Ia., to humanity's international diplomat and president of his country.

Elizabeth Davison Rockefeller and John D. Rockefeller learned the first principles of business from his father, but it was his mother, a strict disciplinarian, who upheld the standard of the family when it showed a tendency to deteriorate.

When he ran off to play against her orders, Elizabeth Davison Rockefeller spanked young John

Mother dear, of you I'm dreaming,
And your lovely face appears
In the golden sunshine streaming
Through the window of the years.

For the smile of God is beaming
In the lovelight of your face.
