"EL AVIATOR"

The motors crashing roar, the slugging of the wires Above ether blue, below the world's desire, Free as an eagle sweep, I climb towards the sky Carressed by the fleecy clouds, as I swiftly pass them by.

I'll be your king, speeding on wings of light— To bring you the token I have sought, in my upmost bounds of flight.

I'll bring you a necklace of fiery stars, hung with crescent moon In jewel case lined with adverb clouds, that I may crave a boon.

NEW SLOT MACHINE DETECTS BAD COIN

(Associated Press Local Wire)
NEW YORK, May 11.—There hung out in Times Square today the death knell of the "plugged nickel" and other forms of "wooden money."

In a drug store in that district was installed the first automatic bogus coin detector, a machine that not only detects but tells all about it in a loud voice.

The first "robot" slug detector was attached to an automatic change maker but is adaptable to any slot machine. If a bad coin, even though of proper size and weight, is dropped in the slot, it is deflected from the course of good coins by an electro magnet and a loud mechanical voice admonishes "please use good coins only."

The inventor, Joseph Shermack, first intended to have his robot say "stop thief" or "arrest that man," but on more mature thought decided that this might wrong persons who innocently made use of bad coins.
