TOD MORGAN WHIPS SAL SORIO IN HOT 10-ROUND BATTLE

BY VICTOR G. SIDLER (Associated Press Sports Writer) LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 21.—The fates which apparently have decreed that no Mexican shall hold a world's ring title have denied another challenge from that Latin-American race. To the futile attempts of Aurelio Herrera and Joe Rivers, great Mexican fighters, to ascend the throne, there was added another today, that of Baby Sal Sorio, boyish San Bernardino, Cal., ringman. Sorio's quest for the junior lightweight crown was decisively repulsed here last night by Tod Morgan, slim, olive king of that division. Morgan won by a wide margin from the 19-year-old Mexican who had flattened some 55 of his 75 opponents. The title holder romped off with eight of the ten sessions. Baby Sal's challenge was ripped to shreds by the jabbing, slashing left hand of the champion, against which he had absolutely no defense. Morgan's long left jab found its way to Sorio's head and body repeatedly keeping the Mexican's head tilted back and his weight balancing on his heels. When Sorio tried to fire his short, jolting rights, he found that great weapon nailed securely to his side, by the ring-wise Morgan. In two rounds, however, Baby Sal saw realization of his hopes almost come true. He took the third and eighth sessions, and had the champion in distress in both. In the third he nailed Morgan with several lefts and jarring rights and Tod went down. The champion, claiming a foul, weathered the storm, however. Again in the eighth Baby Sal had the titleholder in distress as the result of three more of his six inch rights. However, it was plainly a case of two much experience, too much ring generalship, and too much boxing skill for the youthful, swarthy skinned challenger.

ROSEBURG AND MYRTLE CREEK TO PLAY HERE FRIDAY

An interesting and fast game of baseball is expected Friday afternoon when Roseburg and Myrtle Creek high school teams tangle for the county honors. Myrtle Creek has one of the best teams in the county, having gone through the entire season without a defeat. Roseburg was beaten by Myrtle Creek in their first game, the local boys going on the diamond without having had any practice, the bad weather having prevented them from getting into training. As a result they played a very poor game and were defeated, the only game Roseburg has lost for three years. Since that time the local boys have been undefeated and have been playing a very good game. If they can defeat Myrtle Creek in Friday's game they will be tied for the county championship. Both teams play an excellent brand of baseball and the game should be one that will be well worth watching. Coach Turner has been giving the boys some hard practice in getting them in shape for this contest, which will be their last for the season.

"STRANGLER'S MAT Foe BADLY HIT IN PLUNGE"

(Associated Press Local Wire) KANSAS CITY, May 21.—Matros Kirilenko, known as "the terrible Cossack," New York wrestler, suffered concussion of the brain and dislocated right shoulder in a match here last night with Ed "Strangler" Lewis. Kirilenko plunged out of the ring onto a concrete floor when Lewis evaded one of his headlong rushes. He was taken to a hospital where physicians said his condition was not serious.

The accident occurred after two minutes and 30 seconds of sweating. Lewis has taken the 300 lb. in 25 minutes with a scratch and further acted to knock out one of the mayor's previous appointments, that of "Doc" Martin, special night police, after rejecting a group of appointments to the position of street commissioner.

The council succeeded in setting the status of George Frew by a resolution passed over the mayor's objection, after an appeal from the ruling that the resolution was out of order. The resolution declares that Frew is street superintendent and not street commissioner, and that he, therefore, is an employee and not an officer, so that his employment comes under the jurisdiction of the council and not the mayor.

Fight Over Commissioner
This understanding left the office of street commissioner vacant and Mayor Hoover attempted to fill the office by appointment. The council, however, declared that there is no need for a commissioner as long as there is an efficient superintendent under the supervision of a council committee, and so all appointments were unanimously rejected.

The mayor then declared he would make a recess appointment, and a motion was introduced that the salary of any appointee to the office be made $1 per month, but the motion was ruled out of order and no action was taken.

The fireworks started when the opinion of Attorney Kiddle, as recently published, was read, the opinion declaring that George Frew, as street commissioner, and Henry Worthington, electrical inspector, were de facto officers, serving without legal authority, and were not entitled to payment for their services.

Council Prepared
The council had the decks cleared for action, and Carl Wimberly, former city attorney, asked to be allowed to introduce a statement on behalf of his client, George Frew.

"This is not a court," Mayor Hoover declared. "We're not trying Frew's case here. If you want it tried, take it to court."

"This is a public council," Attorney Wimberly responded, "and any citizen has a right to appear before this body to present any matter pertaining to city welfare or upon his own behalf. I believe the council would like to hear this statement."

The council immediately reported that the attorney was correct in his assumption and Mr. Wimberly proceeded to declare the status of Mr. Frew.

He first stated that he had read the opinion of the city attorney and that he did not agree with that opinion.

"The city attorney argues," Mr. Wimberly stated, "that because the charter uses the word 'may' in granting authority to the mayor to appoint a street commissioner and uses the word 'shall' in referring to the appointment of a marshal, it was intended to leave the appointment of a street commissioner to the discretion of the mayor. It should be borne in mind, however, that the mayor has never exercised the discretion to dispense with the office of street commissioner, but has constantly endeavored to place in that office some person of his own choice. It is very apparent that the discretion in this matter was intended to be lodged in the council, otherwise it would not have been provided that the street commissioner should hold his office at the will of the common council. The city attorney in his opinion seems to concede, as properly he must, that the council would have the right to dispense with the services of a street commissioner at any time it might so see fit. Such being the case, the only discretion insofar as the mayor is concerned is in selecting the person whom he wishes to appoint to the office if the council determines that such officer is necessary."

"The city attorney has cited authorities which he claims sustain his position that the term of office of appointive officers expires with the term of the officer making the appointment. Practically all of his authorities, however, are to the effect that a mayor or municipal council could not take any action which would take away the right of an incumbent officer to hold such appointments. In other words, the mayor or council could not appoint an officer for a term extending beyond the term of office of the members of the council. These authorities, however, are not in point, for the reason that no claim has been made that the mayor does not have the right to make appointments. But, I understand, it is the position of the council that until a new appointment is made and the appointee is confirmed the person holding the office at the time the new council and mayor were installed would hold the office until the successor had been appointed and such appointment had been confirmed. I have made a somewhat extended investigation of the law and find that the position of the council in that regard is sustained by the better authorities. The statement of the courts in that regard is to the effect that unless legislative intent to the contrary is manifest, municipal officers will hold over until their successors have been appointed and have properly qualified. This doctrine is based upon the consideration of public convenience and necessity. The courts of a large majority of the states of the union have so held. I take the further position, however, that the term of office of the old council does not expire until the first Monday in November of this year and that all appointive officers, even under the ruling of the city attorney, would hold their offices until that time unless removed as provided by charter.

Authorities in Minority
"A few of the authorities support the city attorney, but they are largely in the minority. "As before stated, the opinion of the city attorney is based upon the assumption that Mr. Frew was appointed street commissioner by Mayor Hoover. The record, however, does not bear out this assumption. It is my contention that Mr. Frew is not an appointive officer, but has been only an employee. The city council under the charter is vested with the authority to clean and repair the streets. As an incident to that authority, it has power to employ all persons necessary to do such work. Mr. Frew was heretofore appointed for that purpose and has continued to serve in that capacity with the consent of the council. There is no authority to be found in the city charter for the mayor to employ persons for such work, and he, therefore, has no such power or authority. I, therefore, request that the council take such action as is necessary to confirm the employment of Mr. Frew and to provide for the payment of his wages."

Attorney Wimberly was frequently interrupted by Mayor Hoover as he presented the statement.

"Do you mean to take the position," Mayor Hoover asked, "that Frew is not a street commissioner?" "That is our position," Attorney Wimberly answered. "He was employed as street superintendent, and in that position is an employee and not an appointive officer and is hired by the council."

"It has been my understanding," said the mayor, "that he was street commissioner, and acting on this assumption I declared his office vacant and discharged him."

"You couldn't do it," the attorney answered heatedly. "You have nothing to say about an employee. All employees are hired and fired by the council and the mayor has nothing to say about it."

Resolution Introduced
Following the sharp tilt between the mayor and attorney, both of whom were apparently quite angered as they exchanged words, Councilman Kiddle presented a resolution declaring Frew to be street superintendent, expressing confidence in his efficiency and fixing his salary at $125 per month and authorizing payment for his back services.

ly voted down unanimously. "We have been getting along so far without a street commissioner," Councilman Kiddle said, "and as long as we have an efficient street superintendent under the direct supervision of the council, I see no reason why we should have a commissioner."

Statement Challenged
Councilman Harris moved to abolish the office, but was promptly ruled out of order, and the mayor proceeded to appoint A. L. Archambault as street commissioner. The council pointed out that the man is not even a resident of Roseburg, and contended that he was not eligible for the office.

Mayor Hoover declared that such a rule had not been closely followed in the past. This statement was challenged by Councilman Shoemaker, but went unanswered.

The council, however, proceeded to reject the appointment of Archambault and the mayor brought out another appointment, naming John Beckley. This, too, went to the way of the rest.

"Alright," said the mayor, "if you don't like my appointments, I'll abolish the office of street commissioner and name Elmer Metzger an supervisor at a salary of $50 per month."

"Where do you get my authority for that?" Councilman Dent wanted to know.

Another councilman jumped up and moved that the matter be left on the table, but was immediately ruled out of order, and a regular vote called for and again the councilmen voted no.

"I'll withdraw all my appointments," Mayor Hoover then declared, "and name E. A. Troxel as a recess appointment."

"I move that the salary of the street commissioner be made $1 per month," Councilman Shoemaker said. The motion was seconded but again the councilman was declared out of order, and the motion was not placed.

The council then proceeded to take up the matter of the jurisdiction of the street roller, over which there has been a determined fight, the council's statement being presented by Recorder Geddes.

At the conclusion of the meeting, the council during its other deliberations having appointed Ray Russell as night officer, Councilman Young presented a motion that E. T. "Doc" Martin, special night officer, be relieved as a city officer on June 1, the motion being unanimously adopted. Martin was appointed by Mayor Hoover during the early part of the year and received $25 per month from the city. Councilman Young stated in placing his motion that he believed Martin's services unnecessary as long as the city furnished a regular officer.

ELEVEN NAMED BY PRESIDENT ON CRIME BOARD

The eighteenth amendment as well.

Although both Bishop James Cannon, Jr. and F. Scott McBride, leaders of the organized drys, were absent from Washington, it is known that they and other leaders will be ready at the proper time to present the case for both the prohibition amendment and the enforcement laws.

Both drys and wets scanned the names of the eleven commissioners in the hope of finding the answer to the question of their views on the prohibition subject, but they had only varying success. The White House announcement made no reference to the subject and the public careers of the commissioners have identified them with neither side.

CLEVELAND, O., May 21.—An open mind will guide Newton D. Baker, secretary of war under President Wilson, in arriving at his conclusions as a member of President Hoover's commission for the study of law enforcement, he said today.

Baker for many years has concerned himself with the study of crime. He was appointed in 1925 to the executive committee of the national crime commission and is president of the Cleveland association for criminal justice. After his appointment was announced he declared he would serve willingly and asserted that he will approach the commission's problems with an open mind.
