NO "LAME DUCKS" IN BRITAIN

THERE is one way in which the United States could very profitably pay attention to the recently completed general election in Great Britain.

Britain will have no "lame duck" session of Parliament. In a very short time the men who have been voted in will take their seats. The interim between the old and new governments is so short as to be almost unnoticeable.

Contrast that with our own custom of having an election in November, letting the outgoing congress sit all winter, and installing the new president in March. The contrast argues more powerfully than any comment we could make.

If Senator Norris still has with him his old proposal for a constitutional amendment to do away with all this delay, he would do well to brush it off and get it ready to re-submit. It is high time we adopted it.

Theatre-goers will remember Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean and their career a few seasons ago with their famous jingling topical song which played upon their names. The Gallagher of the team died in Chicago the other day, penniless and attended only by his former wife, whom he had deserted and divorced in more prosperous days to go away with a cutie. Gallagher and his teammate reaped their whole fame through—

Oh, Mr. Gallagher,
Oh, Mr. Gallagher,

Hello, what is on your mind this morning, Mr. Shean? and the sequences, to a catchy tune. Now it transpires that the famous song was written by Brain Foy, son of the late Eddie Foy, who submitted it to Gallagher and received nothing for it. The wife of his unprosperous days Gallagher cast out. The youth whose song gave him a fame which brought him a great income through many years he ignored. And Gallagher died penniless and friendless. Write your own moral.

The importance of a child's diet is emphasized strikingly in an article in the current issue of Children, the Parents' Magazine, by Dr. John Monroe, professor of educational psychology at Long Island university.

After 16 years of research, Dr. Monroe found a direct connection between a child's intelligence and the food it eats. While food, of course, was not the only factor, he was able to make this definite statement:

"Where food was wholesome, intelligence had thrived, and where, as a result of poverty or slovenliness, food was inadequate and carelessly prepared, intelligence had declined."

The child, when you stop to think about it, is pretty much at the mercy of its parents. The least the parents can do is give it a chance to make the most of its inborn intellectual capacities by seeing to it that its diet is up to standard in every respect.

POEM FOR THE DAY

By LOUIS ALBERT BANKS

A FLIGHT FOR LIFE

This piece of news comes by Associated Press from Seattle: "Victorious in a 1,000-mile aerial race with death doctors here today held out hope for the recovery of Mrs. Peter Kostrometoff of Sitka, Alaska, who was in a critical condition from Septemia."

Told that the only chance to save his wife's life was to put her under the care of specialized physicians immediately, Kostrometoff early yesterday morning arranged by cable for the 1,000-mile race, for immediate refueling of the plane at Ketchikan, Alaska, and Alert Bay, B. C., and for her care here. Necessary hospital facilities and specialists were unavailable in Alaska.

What would have required five or six days by boat was negotiated in eleven hours by plane.

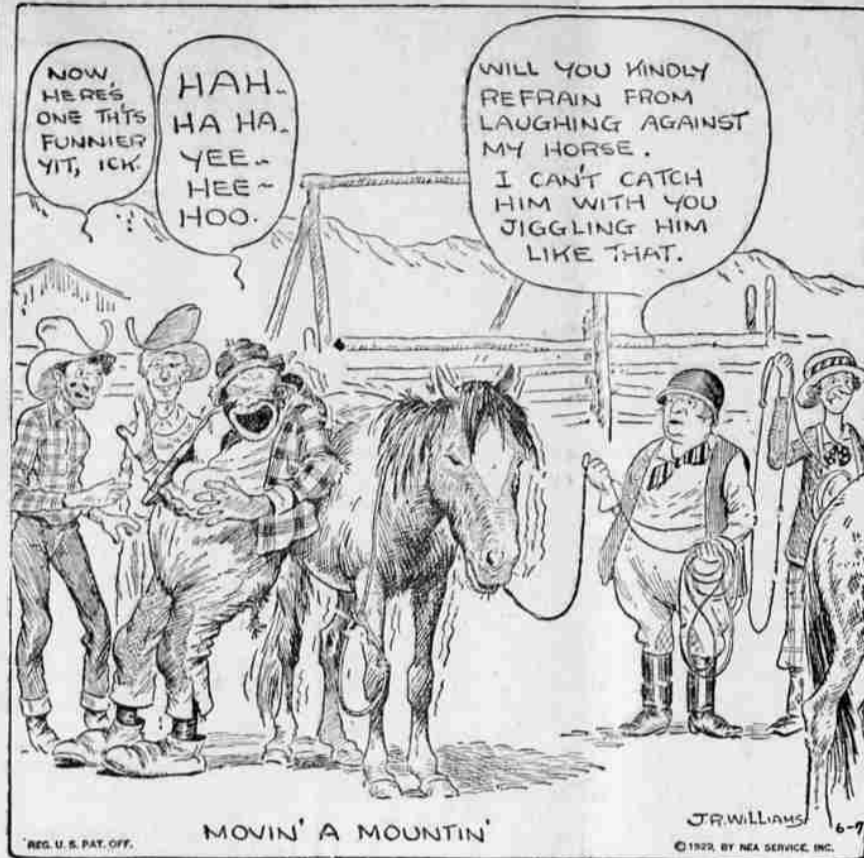

These airship tales are full of cheer;
They give us hope and conquer fear;
They tell of man's swift upward climb
To heights of glory all sublime.
This modern science makes us proud
Yet keeps our heads in reverence bowed.
For all this reign o'er earth's fair sod
Is gracious gift of Father God.

This rare dominion of the air,
Which lifts us from such depths of care,
Is but to imitate the wings
Which He first gave all flying things.
When we with humbleness of heart
Bow down to His creative art
In nature's studio, we find
The models needed for mankind.

There are no longer far frontiers.
The airship with its flying gears
Annihilates both time, and space,
And life can win o'er death the race.
It ought to wake our grateful thanks
For pioneers in flying tanks
Who dared the obloquy and shame
Before they won their mead of fame.

All honor to brave Orville Wright!
Thank God he lived to see this sight,
And Byrd and Lindbergh and the rest
All owe to him their flying zest.
So let us hail with open mind
The pioneers of every kind
Who think they see a vision clear
Of what will make the world more dear.

NEW LOS ANGELES OFFICE OF STATE CHAMBER IS OPEN

The new Los Angeles office of the state chamber is performing a real service for the people of southern California, and for the state of Oregon at the same time. It is the statement of W. G. Ide, manager, state chamber, who has made his first report of the results of the new office. Last week Mr. Ide received the first report of the persons who had called at the Los Angeles office, seeking information on Oregon, and over 100 names, including business men, investors, and families seeking farm homes, were listed. During the first three weeks' operation of this office over 20 families were started toward Oregon, looking for permanent locations. Several hundred tourists who plan extended visits in different parts of Oregon, have been served with maps, booklets, and travel information.

The state chamber is cooperating with local chambers of commerce in all parts of Oregon by furnishing lists of prospective investors, people looking for business opportunities and permanent homes who have visited the Los Angeles office. Tourists travel in being attracted by letters mailed to over 5000 leading business men in all parts of southern California from the Los Angeles office which contain highway maps, special recreational maps showing the scenic spots of Oregon and also an invitation to visit Oregon this summer. In addition to this, an advertising campaign has been started in daily newspapers to acquaint people of the southwest with the resources of Oregon and call attention to the Los Angeles office.

"How could we give you, lassie?" he inquired.

"Nineteen, sir."

to the remedy prescribed. The opinion is here hazarded that all three of your guesses will be wrong.

EXCESS RAIN HURTS STRAWBERRY CROP

PORTLAND, Ore., June 7.—(In less the moisture is soon replaced by warm sunshines, Oregon's strawberry crop, which was heralded as one of the finest on record, will rot on the vines, and strawberry jam and jelly will become rarities instead of common household delicacies.

This was the report made today by one buyer for a large produce house after a survey of the market situation.

Instead of being near its peak just now as usual, most of the berry crop was still in the field with the fruit softening and rotting from moisture.

Berries were not plentiful Friday, but because of the weather and their poor quality those brought in sold at price declines. Growers got as high as $2.25 for the best berries, while some off quality stock is reported to have been sold as low as $1.30 a case. The latter case was exceptional, but is illustrative of what may happen to the crop.
