By MILDRED BYRON

All Contributions to this Page—Society, Women's Clubs, and Personal—Should Be Telephoned to the Society Editor by Friday of Each Week.

Social activities have been few during the past week due to inclement weather and many being out of the city on motor trips. With the coming of spring many are planning on vacation trips and plans are progressing for several delightful affairs in the near future.

The Strawberry Carnival is a feature of this week and during the week many have attended the attractions of the carnival shows here. The baby parade was an interesting event of the morning hours today.

One of the most successful ventures of the week is the Flower Show sponsored by the Roseburg Garden Club, assisted by the Woman's club. Tables are fully decked with beautiful blossoms at the show rooms of the C. A. Lockwood Motor Company and hundreds are viewing the display. The Umpqua Squaws are serving strawberries and ice cream and other dainties at the corner of Jackson and Cass street as a feature of the Strawberry Carnival.

An open air pavilion in the grove has been arranged for the assemblies, and the reception room of the hotel will be used for indoor meetings. Hems of Daytime Frocks Follow Evening Mode.

By ROSETTE
Written for NEA Service
PARIS, June 8.—Never was there such a grave matter for discussion where women gather together as the question of the longer skirt. It is extraordinary what a world of controversy this detail has caused in fashion circles and apparently the matter is not yet settled.

We have almost to hand and so long to the shorter skirt in the belief that it is important to us all an air of perpetual youth that it took a man of daring like Jean Patou to endeavor to change the order of things. He, like a few others of the leading couturiers, had accustomed himself to several seasons to longer lines, but until now these efforts had always been confined to evening dresses and even then the legs from just below the knee were seen through the sheer materials used. In his present collection, Jean Patou frankly shows the hem of all but his sports dresses without as much as a word of warning and, what is more, his collection has been voted one of the outstanding ones of the season.

Short Skirt Doomed?
Women, however, are born imitators—in their dress, at all events. One or two of them who are recognized as leaders of fashion adopt the "between the knee and ankle" length and it will not be long before we all follow suit. It would not be an impossible thing, either, to hear the short skirt spoken of with scorn next season. The fact remains that normally longer skirts is undoubtedly more becoming to the majority of us, however much we resent being told so.

Another feature of the new fashions that is causing much comment is the form-fitting princess style that all the couturiers are showing. Women see in this style an omen in the form of a waist-restricting corset, and refuse to be compelled to wear anything so old-fashioned. As a matter of fact, most French women wear some kind of support, even the slimmest, and that is all the new fashions would never need. There are many women who were not very slim but who managed to hide the fact, thanks to the low waist and fullness of dresses of a few seasons ago. But the new swathed hips and form-fitting bodices betray every curve of the body and women are torn between the desire to possess one of those delightfully new frocks, and the necessity of correcting their silhouettes.

Forecast the Mode
Piretti's collection, after many seasons of oddness, appeared this year to be extremely wearable because he just continued creating models on a theme which now has been adopted by everyone else. He stresses the princess line also and shows some unusual sleeve treatments, but very few of his models could be termed eccentric. Piretti's skirts are, of course, just a little longer than anyone else's, but that is part of their originality.

The Woman's Day

BY ALLENE SUMNER

"I'm too much of a woman of the world to expect Jack to sit in his hotel room and never have any fun." So Mrs. Jack Dempsey is reported to have said when asked to comment on the supposed brawl of her husband and some other gentleman about some chorus girl.

And here's warning that Mrs. Jack Dempsey is only "too much of a woman of the world" to show that world just what she feels. In no respect are the Judy O'Grady's and Colonel's ladies so akin as in submitting to the age-old femaleish tradition of jealousy. They may scoff at it all they please with their minds, but its there just the same.

Chicago Puffery

Perhaps we're all wrong about our vague idea that the land of Missouli is a hard land for women who want to do anything other than kitchen police work. We have just heard that when an Italian telephone company recently dismissed all its married women employees, Missouli forced the company to reinstate them, insisting that marriage should be more penalize the working woman than the working man.

And here's warning that Mrs. Jack Dempsey is only "too much of a woman of the world" to show that world just what she feels. Better Eggs

And there isn't a doubt in the world that it will be done. Women have a way of going after things in a graphic manner. How many men would have carried a wrigling live gator down the street in order to impress the city council? Still that's not such good reasoning. When men went to put over an orange crop or egg crop or what have you, they are not averse to wearing hat bands and carrying canes and cutting up all sorts of chivalrous foolish ideas in order to spread their wares.

Baby Parade Is Unique Affair

Tiny tots gaily clad in pastel shades, pushing flower covered doll carriages, riding tricycles, or riding in floats were charming this morning in the baby parade, a feature of the Strawberry Carnival. The tiny entrants marched or were trundled through the business section of the city, smiling and gay in the big event of marching in a real parade.

Rose covered perambulators, vied with other means of travel and many beautiful floats were entered. Small bathing beauties followed the Indian chiefs, some almost too small to march in the parade. Little Bo-peep was there and had lost her sheep, but she gleefully carried her crook, looking over the crowd in the hopes of finding them, or a familiar face. One too dressed as a huge strawberry rolled along high up on a tricycle, and brought many comments from the interested onlookers.

Boys' and Girls' Club Notes

About 700 boys and girls of Oregon are looking forward to attending the fifteenth annual 4-H club summer session at Oregon State college this summer, June 10-22, according to L. J. Allen, acting state club leader. Many of them will attend by virtue of scholarships won at state, county, or local fairs, some will be sent by their communities, and others will pay their own way.
