The Woman's Day

BY ALLENE SUMNER

A group of kids in a district school near Sayre, Pa., kept a cache of rabsinjack in the woods near the schoolhouse. At recess they slipped out and imbibed. Teacher told the parents, and the kids were given what is known as the vernacular as "a sound whaling."

Now the parents can completely sit back (with much more comfort than their chastised progeny) and reflect that they've done their duty, and if the kids come to no good end, it's not their fault.

The actions of our juveniles are always and invariably merely a ditto mark to the actions of their elders. When kids are making and drinking mischief, it's because they're living in a society of elders doing the same thing.

One of the interesting features of the meeting is the appearance of Sigismond Stojewski, Polish composer and pianist in two lecture recitals.

Here's a Robert Service poem from life:
Fifty-five years ago Mary Louise Jakes and John Joseph Hill were married in London. A few months later they sailed to America, in quest of fortune, in 1903 Hill joined the gold rush to Alaska, promising that he would soon send for his wife and children.

For more than a quarter of a century, so Mrs. Hill told a Chicago judge the other day when she filed her divorce petition on a charge of desertion, she answered every door bell and watched every mail, believing that she would hear from her wanderer. It took 25 years to make her give up the long waiting.

Most women are like that. To their own undoing, say mental and emotional scientists.

WHAT SPELLS SUCCESS
Thirteen-year-old Virginia Hogan of Omaha, Neb., is hailed as the nation's champion speller.

One wonders how much, if anything, that will mean to Virginia now or later.

Despite all the strifes which femininity has made since the day of Cleopatra or Bellshah, the fact remains that beauty still remains a girl's greatest asset for the pursuit of pleasure, happiness, and worldly goods, while mental prowess is so much of a handicap that one sometimes believes it a gift of the wicked fairy at the christening.

THEY OUGHTA
Our own belief is that a woman in good health with ambitions, not too many children, and a fairly comfortable way of living, has no business not doing something more than "slicing up" the apartment in exchange for a good living.

Charles Edwards gave the principal address of the evening choosing "The Flax" as his topic. Following the address the audience again heard from the musicians appearing earlier in the evening, the exercises closing with a number by the orchestra.

CONFERENCE OF YOUNG PEOPLE HELD AT BOSWELL

The Southern Oregon Young People's conference of the Presbyterian church will be held at Boswell Springs starting next Monday, continuing until Sunday, June 23, arrangements having been completed for the meeting, according to R. Some of the leading men and women of the denomination will be present as speakers and instructors at the conference. Sessions of sports and recreation has been worked out. The full facilities of the resort have been turned over to the young people, and as there is a fine swimming pool, tennis courts, ball grounds, etc., there will be no lack for entertainment.

Elks Lodge Observes Flag Day

The Elks lodge of this city observed Flag day last evening with exercises at the lodge room at 8 o'clock. ## Good Morning Modes Intricate in Cut

FROCKS FOR EARLY HOURS REFLECT ELEGANCE OF EVENING

A peplum morning frock in novel blue and white striped silk uses white pique for a one-sided collar and cuffs. (Center) Red and white ging-hem fashions a sweet early-hours dress, while red velvet makes a short, straight-line jacket to top it. The hat is one of the new multi-colored straws. A basque effect, fine, hand-hemmed ruffling and a fine of decorative buttons give individuality to a morning frock of yellow silk. The skirt is gored and the shiny straw hat banded in feathers.

BY HENRI HENDRI.
For NEA Service
NEW YORK, June 15.—The new elegance in afternoon and evening clothes flows to counterpoint to the genuine chic and beauty of things for the early morning that turned were utilitarian (first and foremost). Much care has been given these morning clothes. Often charming, however, even coffee points are used. But they show the good lines and for intricate cuts of some of the silks, satins and chiffons.

Early this summer the two-piece frock with a neck in blouse was advanced as the coming type for summer. It does have some popularity. But the early morning frock of one piece is found a trifle more convenient and more easily slipped into. Therefore there are many models of one-piece frocks among clothes for the early hours.

Combining blue, yellow and red in the frock, with a blue facing and banding. The use of the multi-colored straws for formal hats is growing. They are usually made with several combinations of color and one can get the effect of several by changing costume with them.

Striped jersey is a seasonal fabric for cool morning wear. Chanel uses blue and white striped jersey as if it were crepe silk. It gives the appearance of a novelty (washed stripes, really). The dress has a pleated peplum, below a band of the striped jersey made on the bias. There is a little oversize collar of white pique that gives a note of individuality to the dress. Altogether this is a highly practical and charming frock.

When a frock has such a fine pattern to its material, it is often advisable to wear one of the fine straws in off-white or a fine felt in decidedly beige tones. I recommend a Paton beige mushroom felt, of feather-weight quality, banded in colors of the frock.

Of all colors for summer wear, yellow is the most chic, at the moment. Of course, any of the clear tones of other colors is good, but since Paris launched the capucine craze this year, yellow stands at the top of the spectrum.

A neat and charmingly feminine morning frock is of canary front crepe. It is a two-piece style, with the skirt gored and the gored emphasized by fine over-stitching. The blouse has a basque effect, caught with a button-trimmed band. Three tiny tucks on either side of the blouse hold it in place on the hips.
