

RECREATION FILMS TO BE GIVEN LOCAL PREVIEW IN JULY

An exceptionally good motion picture show of local interest is being arranged by the Douglas County Sportsmen and Game Protective Association...

RIVAL WIVES by Anne Austin Author of 'The Black Pigeons'

THIS HAS HAPPENED Iris Moran deserts her husband, John Curtis Morgan, eloping with Bert Crawford, a family friend...

For six months she acts as a long-distance housekeeper for him, exciting the love of his child, He is six-year-old Curtis Morgan...

Her jealous eyes told her that he was relieved, "Fine! That will give me several hours of good, hard work of course, if Curtis is worse, or calls for me, I'll be out there in a hurry."

When her husband was gone, Nan wandered into the drawing room where the neglected Christmas tree still offered all its treasures...

Her steps made very slow by the weariness of despair, Nan walked about the tree, untying the gold and silver cord which bound the tissue-wrapped parcels...

What rotten luck! Morgan exclaimed disconsolately. "The wife from the capital. By a shift in the supreme court calendar, that Bradley case comes up Friday, if I can be ready with my witnesses by then, I don't like to ask for another adjournment, because I'd like to get the Bradley case off my hands before the Blackhall trial resumes in January..."

His hesitation and the dark flush which accompanied it told Nan that the "and all" referred to Iris and all the complications which her unexpected return had brought into her husband's life...

"Of course, dear," he interrupted quickly, as if she had reminded him that it was not she, but Iris, who had made the child ill by stuffing him with chocolates and candied fruits...

"Of course you will," Nan agreed, still in that unutterably cold voice.

to Diamond Lake, securing motion pictures of all of the principal scenic spots. This is a very beautiful film, and has now been completed with the exception of the titles. The negative has just been returned to Mr. Clark, who is getting it ready to have the titles inserted. Before the film is returned to the factory for this work, the sportsmen are going to show it to a local audience at the Liberty theatre...

Another reel was made at the salmon bake held by the local club, and this, too, will be shown. Three or four other reels are to be secured from the state organizations, so that the local club will offer a motion picture program lasting for an hour and a half and showing some of the scenic and recreational features of the valley.

The films will be made up in a form providing proper continuity, and after the titles are affixed will be loaned clubs along the Pacific coast and will be shown their members as a means of publicity for the Empqua.

As she opened the door, still carolling softly, an insistent query pushed its way through her exultation: "I wonder how he addressed Iris' gift? For my former wife, from Jack?" How she had hated to bear Iris call him 'Jack' making him small and trivial by the simple device of using a nickname which was a gross insult!

"Peace on the earth, Good will to men From Heaven's all-gracious King." "That's a Christmas carol," Curtis called weakly from his bed. "We learned two Christmas carols to sing at school last Friday. Can you sing 'Little Town of Bethlehem'?"

"Of course I can! But look when I am! Santa Claus! And there are some big presents downstairs for you as soon as you're well enough to play with them," Nan answered. The next hour was almost pure happiness, heightened, Nan was half-dressed later to realize, by the casual way in which Curtis inspected and laid aside the excellent miniature of herself which Iris had sent to her son in later years...

"Wouldn't you like to write a note to your mother at the hospital and thank her for her gift?" Nan suggested. In her new happiness, she could afford to be generous, had an urgent need to be generous toward that other woman who, it seemed, was to be vanquished. "For my dear wife—her heart sang, over and over.

"Huh? At the hospital?" Curtis repeated, with childish scorn for Nan's ignorance. "She ain't—I mean, isn't at the hospital any more. She went to the Wellington Arms yesterday. Father and I took her. She's got a swell room 'at a hotel. Why don't you say Wellington Hotel, Nan? Billy, calling a hotel an Arms?" He lay back upon his pillows, looking suddenly tired and peevish. "Sing to me, Nan. You sing pretty." Before Nan, whose voice was a little husky with unshed tears, could finish the carol he had asked for, the child was asleep. Her hand upon his forehead told her that, despite the excitement of receiving so many gifts, his temperature was perceptibly lower.

Twice, during the long afternoon, Nan was sorely tempted to call the office. It would make her more happy to be absolutely sure that he was there, working on the Bradley case. But each time she refrained. Was she degenerating into one of those jealous, suspicious wives who can't trust their husbands out of their sight, who resort to low tricks to catch them in lies and deceit?

At five Dr. Black came. When he had completed his examination of the sick child, he drew Nan with him out into the hall. As the door closed his jovial grin faded instantly, and was replaced by a grave frown. "Is it anything serious, doctor?" Nan asked in a terrified whisper, as they descended the stairs. The doctor did not answer until they reached the front hall. "I can't be sure. Children are peppy patients. Scare you to death one day, and provoke you into spanking them the next by their high spirits. To be frank, Nan, it looks a little like appendicitis. . . . Hey, hold onto yourself, girl! Nothing to hit the ceiling about if it is. And it may not be of course, or at worst, a very mild attack which may never be repeated, if you watch his diet. . . . That woman! 'That woman!' he added savagely.

"I have been very careful, Dr. Black," Nan said bleakly. Not for her to utter accusations against the boy's mother. "Don't I know that?" Dr. Black blustered. "Believe me, I gave Iris Morgan a piece of my mind today."

"You saw her?" Nan cried. "But Curtis told me she had left the hospital—"

"Right!" But the hotel manager called me this afternoon. All excited, said Mrs. Morgan was in a terrible state. I went, of course.

though I was pretty sure what ailed her. Having hysterics because John and the boy hadn't come to see her on Christmas Day. "Then—" Nan's hand went to her throat, for she felt that her heart was leaping from it with joy—"he didn't go? He didn't see her today?"

"No. That was the trouble. He telephoned her at the Wellington Arms that Curtis was not able to go out and that, of course, he couldn't see her, either. John's no fool, Nan. He's not entirely superior to convention. No man in the public eye, like John Curtis Morgan, can afford to be. With the kid along as a chaperon and an excuse for the call, a remarried man may call on his divorced wife without creating a scandal, but without that excuse—Well, Iris simply had a fit. Dumbest little sympathy she got from me, I can tell you. Of course you know she accuses you of having vamped, trapped and abducted her husband."

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

and peevish. "Sing to me, Nan. You sing pretty." Before Nan, whose voice was a little husky with unshed tears, could finish the carol he had asked for, the child was asleep. Her hand upon his forehead told her that, despite the excitement of receiving so many gifts, his temperature was perceptibly lower.

Twice, during the long afternoon, Nan was sorely tempted to call the office. It would make her more happy to be absolutely sure that he was there, working on the Bradley case. But each time she refrained. Was she degenerating into one of those jealous, suspicious wives who can't trust their husbands out of their sight, who resort to low tricks to catch them in lies and deceit?

At five Dr. Black came. When he had completed his examination of the sick child, he drew Nan with him out into the hall. As the door closed his jovial grin faded instantly, and was replaced by a grave frown. "Is it anything serious, doctor?" Nan asked in a terrified whisper, as they descended the stairs. The doctor did not answer until they reached the front hall. "I can't be sure. Children are peppy patients. Scare you to death one day, and provoke you into spanking them the next by their high spirits. To be frank, Nan, it looks a little like appendicitis. . . . Hey, hold onto yourself, girl! Nothing to hit the ceiling about if it is. And it may not be of course, or at worst, a very mild attack which may never be repeated, if you watch his diet. . . . That woman! 'That woman!' he added savagely.

"I have been very careful, Dr. Black," Nan said bleakly. Not for her to utter accusations against the boy's mother. "Don't I know that?" Dr. Black blustered. "Believe me, I gave Iris Morgan a piece of my mind today."

"You saw her?" Nan cried. "But Curtis told me she had left the hospital—"

"Right!" But the hotel manager called me this afternoon. All excited, said Mrs. Morgan was in a terrible state. I went, of course.

though I was pretty sure what ailed her. Having hysterics because John and the boy hadn't come to see her on Christmas Day. "Then—" Nan's hand went to her throat, for she felt that her heart was leaping from it with joy—"he didn't go? He didn't see her today?"

"No. That was the trouble. He telephoned her at the Wellington Arms that Curtis was not able to go out and that, of course, he couldn't see her, either. John's no fool, Nan. He's not entirely superior to convention. No man in the public eye, like John Curtis Morgan, can afford to be. With the kid along as a chaperon and an excuse for the call, a remarried man may call on his divorced wife without creating a scandal, but without that excuse—Well, Iris simply had a fit. Dumbest little sympathy she got from me, I can tell you. Of course you know she accuses you of having vamped, trapped and abducted her husband."

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

and peevish. "Sing to me, Nan. You sing pretty." Before Nan, whose voice was a little husky with unshed tears, could finish the carol he had asked for, the child was asleep. Her hand upon his forehead told her that, despite the excitement of receiving so many gifts, his temperature was perceptibly lower.

Twice, during the long afternoon, Nan was sorely tempted to call the office. It would make her more happy to be absolutely sure that he was there, working on the Bradley case. But each time she refrained. Was she degenerating into one of those jealous, suspicious wives who can't trust their husbands out of their sight, who resort to low tricks to catch them in lies and deceit?

At five Dr. Black came. When he had completed his examination of the sick child, he drew Nan with him out into the hall. As the door closed his jovial grin faded instantly, and was replaced by a grave frown. "Is it anything serious, doctor?" Nan asked in a terrified whisper, as they descended the stairs. The doctor did not answer until they reached the front hall. "I can't be sure. Children are peppy patients. Scare you to death one day, and provoke you into spanking them the next by their high spirits. To be frank, Nan, it looks a little like appendicitis. . . . Hey, hold onto yourself, girl! Nothing to hit the ceiling about if it is. And it may not be of course, or at worst, a very mild attack which may never be repeated, if you watch his diet. . . . That woman! 'That woman!' he added savagely.

"I have been very careful, Dr. Black," Nan said bleakly. Not for her to utter accusations against the boy's mother. "Don't I know that?" Dr. Black blustered. "Believe me, I gave Iris Morgan a piece of my mind today."

"You saw her?" Nan cried. "But Curtis told me she had left the hospital—"

"Right!" But the hotel manager called me this afternoon. All excited, said Mrs. Morgan was in a terrible state. I went, of course.

though I was pretty sure what ailed her. Having hysterics because John and the boy hadn't come to see her on Christmas Day. "Then—" Nan's hand went to her throat, for she felt that her heart was leaping from it with joy—"he didn't go? He didn't see her today?"

"No. That was the trouble. He telephoned her at the Wellington Arms that Curtis was not able to go out and that, of course, he couldn't see her, either. John's no fool, Nan. He's not entirely superior to convention. No man in the public eye, like John Curtis Morgan, can afford to be. With the kid along as a chaperon and an excuse for the call, a remarried man may call on his divorced wife without creating a scandal, but without that excuse—Well, Iris simply had a fit. Dumbest little sympathy she got from me, I can tell you. Of course you know she accuses you of having vamped, trapped and abducted her husband."

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

and peevish. "Sing to me, Nan. You sing pretty." Before Nan, whose voice was a little husky with unshed tears, could finish the carol he had asked for, the child was asleep. Her hand upon his forehead told her that, despite the excitement of receiving so many gifts, his temperature was perceptibly lower.

Twice, during the long afternoon, Nan was sorely tempted to call the office. It would make her more happy to be absolutely sure that he was there, working on the Bradley case. But each time she refrained. Was she degenerating into one of those jealous, suspicious wives who can't trust their husbands out of their sight, who resort to low tricks to catch them in lies and deceit?

At five Dr. Black came. When he had completed his examination of the sick child, he drew Nan with him out into the hall. As the door closed his jovial grin faded instantly, and was replaced by a grave frown. "Is it anything serious, doctor?" Nan asked in a terrified whisper, as they descended the stairs. The doctor did not answer until they reached the front hall. "I can't be sure. Children are peppy patients. Scare you to death one day, and provoke you into spanking them the next by their high spirits. To be frank, Nan, it looks a little like appendicitis. . . . Hey, hold onto yourself, girl! Nothing to hit the ceiling about if it is. And it may not be of course, or at worst, a very mild attack which may never be repeated, if you watch his diet. . . . That woman! 'That woman!' he added savagely.

"I have been very careful, Dr. Black," Nan said bleakly. Not for her to utter accusations against the boy's mother. "Don't I know that?" Dr. Black blustered. "Believe me, I gave Iris Morgan a piece of my mind today."

"You saw her?" Nan cried. "But Curtis told me she had left the hospital—"

"Right!" But the hotel manager called me this afternoon. All excited, said Mrs. Morgan was in a terrible state. I went, of course.

though I was pretty sure what ailed her. Having hysterics because John and the boy hadn't come to see her on Christmas Day. "Then—" Nan's hand went to her throat, for she felt that her heart was leaping from it with joy—"he didn't go? He didn't see her today?"

"No. That was the trouble. He telephoned her at the Wellington Arms that Curtis was not able to go out and that, of course, he couldn't see her, either. John's no fool, Nan. He's not entirely superior to convention. No man in the public eye, like John Curtis Morgan, can afford to be. With the kid along as a chaperon and an excuse for the call, a remarried man may call on his divorced wife without creating a scandal, but without that excuse—Well, Iris simply had a fit. Dumbest little sympathy she got from me, I can tell you. Of course you know she accuses you of having vamped, trapped and abducted her husband."

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

and peevish. "Sing to me, Nan. You sing pretty." Before Nan, whose voice was a little husky with unshed tears, could finish the carol he had asked for, the child was asleep. Her hand upon his forehead told her that, despite the excitement of receiving so many gifts, his temperature was perceptibly lower.

Twice, during the long afternoon, Nan was sorely tempted to call the office. It would make her more happy to be absolutely sure that he was there, working on the Bradley case. But each time she refrained. Was she degenerating into one of those jealous, suspicious wives who can't trust their husbands out of their sight, who resort to low tricks to catch them in lies and deceit?

At five Dr. Black came. When he had completed his examination of the sick child, he drew Nan with him out into the hall. As the door closed his jovial grin faded instantly, and was replaced by a grave frown. "Is it anything serious, doctor?" Nan asked in a terrified whisper, as they descended the stairs. The doctor did not answer until they reached the front hall. "I can't be sure. Children are peppy patients. Scare you to death one day, and provoke you into spanking them the next by their high spirits. To be frank, Nan, it looks a little like appendicitis. . . . Hey, hold onto yourself, girl! Nothing to hit the ceiling about if it is. And it may not be of course, or at worst, a very mild attack which may never be repeated, if you watch his diet. . . . That woman! 'That woman!' he added savagely.

"I have been very careful, Dr. Black," Nan said bleakly. Not for her to utter accusations against the boy's mother. "Don't I know that?" Dr. Black blustered. "Believe me, I gave Iris Morgan a piece of my mind today."

"You saw her?" Nan cried. "But Curtis told me she had left the hospital—"

"Right!" But the hotel manager called me this afternoon. All excited, said Mrs. Morgan was in a terrible state. I went, of course.

though I was pretty sure what ailed her. Having hysterics because John and the boy hadn't come to see her on Christmas Day. "Then—" Nan's hand went to her throat, for she felt that her heart was leaping from it with joy—"he didn't go? He didn't see her today?"

"No. That was the trouble. He telephoned her at the Wellington Arms that Curtis was not able to go out and that, of course, he couldn't see her, either. John's no fool, Nan. He's not entirely superior to convention. No man in the public eye, like John Curtis Morgan, can afford to be. With the kid along as a chaperon and an excuse for the call, a remarried man may call on his divorced wife without creating a scandal, but without that excuse—Well, Iris simply had a fit. Dumbest little sympathy she got from me, I can tell you. Of course you know she accuses you of having vamped, trapped and abducted her husband."

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

"I know," Nan nodded, her eyes hot with anger and humiliation. "Well," the doctor chuckled, "I told her a thing or two. But I'll warn you, child—she's a cruel, vicious woman and she'll stop at nothing to punish you. Know what I think? She doesn't really give a tinker's damn about poor John!"

The Rush Will Start Now. Talk fast if you want to save money. One mower and two rakes left out of our cariot shipment. One Rebuilt Osborne Mower $40.00. One Rebuilt Riding Cultivator $40.00. One Used Champion Rake as is $27.50. Farm Bureau Cooperative Exchange. Roseburg. Oakland. AGENTS FOR. L. & H. Electric Ranges. Hood River Spray Co. Sutherland Spray Co. Sean Spray Pump Co. John Deere Plow Co. Hoosier and Milwaukee Pumps. Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Webster of Portland are visitors in this city for a short time registered at Hotel Umpqua.

"Western Auto's" Mid-Season SALE. Thousands of motorists are responding to the call of these Greater Savings on timely vacation necessities. Offered by "Western Auto" just when both the merchandise and the savings are needed most. Join the thrifty thousands, who, knowing the superior quality of "Western Auto" Tires, Camp Goods and Accessories . . . and having absolute confidence in our Iron-Clad Guarantee of Satisfactory Service and our Customer Is Always Right Policy . . . are availing themselves of these great economies. Come in today, and be ready for any trip you may plan.

Save on Camping Equipment. Leave the crowds behind . . . get out into the "back-country," where nature is still her own inspiring self. During this Great Sale, compact outfits that assure complete comfort and convenience are yours at pleasing reductions. Tents Reduced. 7x10 Palmetto umbrella style tent, waterproof material, with awning flap, window and pocket. Complete with pole and pegs. Mid-Season Sale price, as illustrated, $12.95. 7x10 Palmetto umbrella style tent, waterproof material, with awning flap, window and pocket. Complete with pole and pegs. Mid-Season Sale price, as illustrated, $12.95. 7x10 Palmetto umbrella style tent, waterproof material, with awning flap, window and pocket. Complete with pole and pegs. Mid-Season Sale price, as illustrated, $12.95.

Table with columns: SIZE, Wear-well Balloon 10,000-Mile Guarantee, Western Giant Standard Rib-Tread 15,000-Mile Guarantee, Western Giant New Center-Traction 10,000-Mile Guarantee. Rows include 29x4.40 (4.40-21), 30x4.50 (4.50-21), 29x4.75 (4.75-20), 30x5.00 (5.00-20), 31x5.00 (5.00-21), 30x5.25 (5.25-20), 31x5.25 (5.25-21), 30x5.50 (fits 30x5.77), 32x6.00 (6.00-20), 33x6.00 (6.00-21), 32x6.20 (6.20-20), 33x6.75 (6.75-21).

Table with columns: SIZE, Wear-well Cord 10,000-Mile Guarantee, Western Giant Passenger Car Tire 15,000-Mile Guarantee, Western Giant Extra Heavy Truck Type. Rows include 30x3 1/2 Cl. Regular, 30x3 1/2 Cl. Oversize, 30x3 1/2 SS Oversize, 31x4 SS Oversize, 32x4 SS Oversize, 33x4 SS Oversize, 32x4 1/2 SS Oversize, 33x4 1/2 SS Oversize, 30x5 SS Oversize, 33x5 SS Oversize.

Tires Mounted FREE. This Liberal Guarantee Means Absolute Satisfaction for You. Not only does our liberal MINIMUM MILEAGE GUARANTEE cover every "Western Auto" Tire, but your complete and lasting satisfaction is further assured by OUR GUARANTEE OF ABSOLUTE SATISFACTION FOR THE LIFE OF THE TIRE. This Guarantee is further upheld by prompt and smiling service at every one of our more than 150 conveniently located stores, operated by our well-trained and popular CUSTOMER IS ALWAYS RIGHT POLICY. More than 150 Stores in the West. Western Auto Supply Co. 117 S. Stephens Street Phone 97. Open Saturdays To 9 P. M.

The Red Ball Freight Line, Inc. BONDED AND INSURED. Fast Daily Dependable Service. To Drain, Roseburg and way points, Marshfield and North Bend. Make connections for Powers, Bandon, Gold Beach, Port Orford and down coast. From Portland Truck Terminal After June 10th. This Line is Owned and Operated by EXPERIENCED AND RELIABLE OPERATORS. Free Pick Up and Delivery Service. Portland Phone Br 9461 or Br 9262. Roseburg 93. Marshfield 163-J.

MEAT SPECIALS AT THE Douglas Market. If your desire any service in the way of rolling, grinding or cutting of meats that you choose to your order, call on us, as our time is never too valuable to extend to you the fullest of courtesies. SPECIALS YOU CANNOT OVERLOOK. Roasts: Beef—Very select 20c-22c. Breasts for Boiling: Lamb 15c, Veal 15c. Steaks and Chops: Veal Shoulder Steak 23c, Pork Pork Steak 25c, Pork Loin Chops 30c. Beef: Chuck Steak 25c, Round Steak 30c. And also many other meat specials. If you can't come, call us.