OREGON WILL STAY DRY

A MOVEMENT is afoot, headed by H. H. Stallard, to initiate a bill whose purpose is to repeal the Oregon prohibition law. Mr. Stallard's intention, he says, is to get a vote on the measure at the next state-wide election, to be held next year.

Mr. Stallard is somewhat accustomed to leading pre-lost political causes in Oregon, so the prospect of almost certain defeat that his measure will face probably does not dismay him. It is likely he will be able, if his petitions are circulated diligently, to get enough signatures to place his repeal bill on the ballot and that the bill itself will receive a considerable number of affirmative votes, but Stallard and those who are working with him must realize, as all informed people do, that there is still a voting majority in Oregon in favor of prohibition.

Five states of the union are without prohibition laws of their own. They are Montana, Nevada, Wisconsin, New York and Maryland, thus carrying the condition into every section of the country except the deep South. All of them have federal prohibition under the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act. In each of them the absence of state prohibition laws increases the difficulties of enforcement, but it does not and cannot make the would-be wet states openly wet.

Virginia Mabee, a twelve-year-old Oregon City girl, has been neither absent from school nor tardy in seven years since she entered the primer class. That is a record of which any little girl may well be proud.

A Salem wife left home and wrote back to her husband that she would not return, but that he had better "stay in Salem with the rest of the nuts." He sued for divorce.

POEM FOR THE DAY

KEEP THE UMPQUA BEAUTIFUL The Associated Press brings this story from Detroit, Michigan: "Miss Marion Boyd, of Detroit, today was announced as winner of the national Umpqua beauty slogan contest, conducted among high school students by Mrs. John H. Rockefeller, Jr."

Dame Nature has a sentient breast And quick responds with virile zest; She'll back up o'er the slightest touch - For very little gives us much; Her seasons come on tripping feet, Are always young and fresh and sweet; She seeks to clothe each ugly place With all her rainbow-colored gace.

Motion pictures were held to be a deterrent to crime in an address here yesterday before the ladies' business conference of the national association of policewomen by Colonel James S. Joy of Hollywood, representative Will H. Hays, head of the organized film producers.

OUT OUR WAY

GOOD-NIGHT STORIES

By Max Trel MR. PUNCH HAS SHARP WITS - OH, YES, INDEED!

As Mr. Flor, Hanid, Yam and Knarf—the five little shadow-children with the turned-about names—approached Mr. Punch, they noticed that he was silently moving his lips.

"What are you doing?" asked Hanid. Mr. Punch looked up and down warily to make sure that Judy, his wife, wasn't around. Then he whispered gravely: "I'm counting my money."

The shadow-children were quite surprised. They didn't know that he had any money to count. He was only a poor puppet, you see.

"Where do you keep your money?" asked Yam. At this Mr. Punch looked even more warily.

"I'm counting my money!" Hanid asked. "It's hidden—in a book," he replied mysteriously. "Judy can never find it."

"Why not?" "Because she never looks in a book. She'd like to find it, too, because it's all new money. It's never been used. I never use money, you know."

"You never use money?" exclaimed the shadow-children. "How do you get along?" Mr. Punch smiled knowingly. "I use my wits," he replied. "Of course," he added hastily, "that doesn't apply to you. You might try to use your wits and find that you haven't any."

"What do you do then, Mr. Punch?" inquired Knarf inquisitively. "I really can't say—in fact, I can't say at all," retorted Mr. Punch. "I've always had my wits about me. I remember one case where they stood me in good stead. My father told me to go out into the woods and chop down a big tree, as we were running short of toothpicks—or it may have been matchsticks. I don't remember which. As I always obeyed my father promptly, I rushed out into the woods. Imagine my consternation when I got there to discover that I had no axe. It is difficult to chop down a tree without an axe—in fact, it is very difficult. I looked all over the woods for an axe. There was none to be found. I didn't want to use my money to buy one, so I decided to use my wits instead."

"And you cut down the tree with your wits?" demanded Hanid. "Certainly," retorted the puppet. "They were sharp wits, you see—in fact, they were very sharp wits."

Mr. Punch bowed. "I must hurry along now," he said to the shadow-children. "Time is money, you know." And he started to go off. "Just a moment," interrupted Knarf. "What did you do when you came to your wits' ends?" Mr. Punch looked puzzled. "My wits a ends—my wits' ends," he murmured. Suddenly he stopped and coughed his ear, as though he thought he heard something. "It's Judy," he concluded to the shadow-children in a frightened whisper. "Now I must go!" And off he went!

Camp at Lloyd Park

GOOD ATTENDANCE AT BAND CONCERT There was a fine attendance for the concert given last night by the Roseburg Municipal band in opening their summer season. The concert was played at the Library park, which was well filled by music lovers, while hundreds sat in parked cars along the street. The band was somewhat handicapped last night by the absence of several of the members, but despite this handicap offered a program that was greatly enjoyed. Concerts will be given each Thursday evening during the remainder of the summer and early fall.

EDITORIALS ON THE DAY'S NEWS

Five years endeavored to have California equal the highways of Oregon.

These words were spoken at Grants Pass the other day by the governor of California.

HE was laying it on a little thick, as all know who have traveled from end to end of California, whose main highways are really fine.

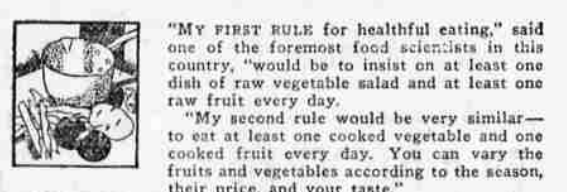

But it is so unusual for a governor of California to come up here and admit gracefully, even to the point of exaggeration, that anything Oregon has it better than anything California has that we are taken aback.

But we appreciate the spirit behind Governor Young's words.

It is A. Callison, a business visitor in this city today from his home in Garden Valley.

Enjoy healthful fruits and vegetables...

Flavored with sugar they are delicious

"My first rule for healthful eating," said one of the foremost food scientists in this country, "would be to insist on at least one dish of raw vegetable salad and at least one raw fruit every day."

His next remark emphasized the value of sugar in making fruits and vegetables so palatable that people would eat them, not simply for their beneficial results, but for general enjoyment of their flavors. "Sugar," he explained, "is the greatest of all condimental foods. It brings out the natural flavor of fruits and vegetables."

It is important that people enjoy the food they eat. Otherwise they will not eat a varied enough diet. Sugar, nature's most perfect flavor, plays a part in making almost all the foods we eat more inviting.

A pinch of sugar improves the flavor of nearly every vegetable. Remember a dash of sugar in cereal, in tea or coffee, in all milk drinks. Most foods are more delicious and nourishing with sugar. The Sugar Institute.

Spray Now

for Spider Mites S-W Summer-Mulsion a sure control

MANY orchards in the Valley are already infested with Red Spider. This subtle pest is causing the loss of thousands of dollars annually. Yet many growers fail to appreciate the serious injury caused by these mites.

Spider Mites are dangerous because they reduce the chlorophyll (green coloring matter) in the foliage, causing the leaves to turn yellow. Lack of chlorophyll in the foliage restricts digestion of the sap, causing fruit to become stunted and under-colored. Spider Mite injury also reduces the set of fruit buds for the next year's crop and weakens the vitality of the tree.

Sherwin-Williams Summer-Mulsion is a positive control for Spider Mites, with absolute safety to fruit and foliage. Kill these pests NOW and insure the harvest development of your fruit as well as the set of fruit buds for the next year's crop. Applied with Arsenate sprays, it will control Coding Mite, too.
