GOOD-NIGHT STORIES

The Shadow-Children Visit Ting-Ling's Town

"In our town," said Ting-Ling, the Chinaman, "we have all the latest improvements. You'll see how sensible they are as soon as we arrive there."

Mrs. Flor, Hanli, Yam and Knarf—the five little shadow-children—were walking with Ting-Ling inside the Chinese plate. They had no trouble getting inside it as they were shadows, you see.

After crossing the bridge, they passed along the side of the garden, then around the hill. At length they reached the walls of the town.

"Why are you doing that?" Yam asked.

"We discovered that our shoes last longer if we stand on our heads. It's quite an improvement."

"That's plain to see," agreed Knarf.

"But don't you get a headache?" inquired Flor.

"Oh yes—but we have a good cure. We cut off our heads."

"A little further on they met several farmers entering a house."

"Gloria always get tired when they walk," Ting-Ling explained. "This town keeps them fresh no matter how far they go."

"It certainly is an improvement," said Knarf.

"By and by they stopped in front of a little house. It was very old-looking, inasmuch as the roof was at the bottom and the cellar-door was at the very top. Moreover, it had neither windows nor door."

"This is my house," said the Chinaman. "It has all the latest improvements."

"Why is the roof at the bottom?" asked M.

"And why is the cellar door at the top?" asked Flor.

"And why have you neither windows nor door?" asked Hanli.

"We became tired of having to climb up to the roof and down to the cellar. So now we do it just the other way around. We did away with the windows because they're always breaking and we have no doors because they're always slamming."

"Then how do you get in?" interrupted Yam.

"We don't get in. Walking around a house makes everything. But you must look at my garden."

They followed him around the house. There, instead of a garden, they saw a deep pond.

"Where are the flowers?" they exclaimed.

"We planted them in the pond," said Ting-Ling. "It saves the trouble of watering them."

"But how can you pick them?" asked Yam.

"You merely reach in," said Ting-Ling. "You merely reach in. And to show how easy it was he reached in. Unfortunately, the side of the bank gave way and he sank up to his knees."

"It's a very good garden," said Ting-Ling. "But the bank needs a little improving."

This day, however, Master Knarf didn't say a word.

Plans State Sale of Medicinal Rum

Col. W. P. Andrews, New Grand Exalted Ruler of B. P. O. E.

Liquor for medicinal purposes. No doctor's permit necessary. A state dispensary—no federal supervision. Just such an affidavit that the liquor is to be used as a remedy.

That's the plan of A. W. Lafferty, above, New York lawyer, and former Oregon congressman, who has introduced a bill now pending before the Wisconsin legislature.

Lafferty's bill points out that liquor for "concededly medicinal purposes" is legal under a ruling of the supreme court.

The bill is a member of the Wisconsin legislature, and is now pending before the Wisconsin legislature.

WOMEN GAINFULLY EMPLOYED CREATE ECONOMIC PROBLEM

Number Making Their Own Living in United States Now Totals 8,500,000; All But 35 of 572 Occupations Represented; Even Negroes and Women Born in Foreign Countries Making Progress.

NEW YORK, July 9.—An investigator for the New York Trust company believes that women brought difficult problems with them to the economic world. 8,500,000 of them decided to make their own living.

The presence of women in industry and commerce has been a factor of importance ever since the decade between 18
