GOOD-NIGHT STORIES

By Max Trel

THE SHADOW CHILDREN LEARN THAT APPEARANCES ARE DECEIVING

Just because a thing appears good, that doesn't mean that it is good. No, often it is quite otherwise as Mij, Flor, Hanid, Yam and Knarf—the five little shadow-children with the turned-about names—discovered.

They were one day on the seashore with the little real-children, when they decided to take a stroll under the water. Now you may think this is a very extraordinary thing to do. For shadows it was nothing at all. They merely changed themselves into water-reflection. At once they were perfectly at home under water.

It was very pleasant on the bottom. Above they could see the waves breaking. Little crabs scur-ried under the rocks as they approached. They saw mussels and snails and scallops and anemones and other water creatures. At length they all sat down on a moss-covered pebble, for they had walked a long way, you see, and were getting tired. Hardly had they sat down when a little silver fish swam past them.

"Hooray! Hooray!" it shouted. "What are you so happy about?" Flor asked it.

"The little fish flapped its tail with joy. 'I've just found something!'

"What is it?" asked Hanid.

"I don't know what it is, but it's something fine. I'm going to tell my brothers and sisters to hurry over and look at it."

Of course, this made the shadow-children extremely curious.

"Where is it?" they demanded.

"It's here," said the little fish, darting off. The shadows followed him. Nearer and nearer the shore he went. Then he stopped. "Here it is!" it exclaimed.

"Isn't it fine?" The shadows peered at it closely.

"Why," said Hanid, "it's just a lot of little cords."

"And all the cords are knotted together," added Flor.

"The space between them is smaller than a little fish can squeeze through," remarked Mij.

"It looks as if it were moving towards the shore," said Yam.

"I think," said Knarf, "that it's a—"

At this moment the fish gave a little shriek of delight.

"I have an idea! I'm going to go as far back into it as I can."

"You'd better not!" the shadows exclaimed. "Something is sure to happen."

"Oh, no," said the little fish "nothing can happen. Mother would have warned me beforehand. She told me to be sure not to bite on a hook or to get caught in a net."

"That's just what this—" Knarf broke in.

"—but as she didn't say anything about this, nothing can happen, you see." And with that the little fish flipped right into the web cords. No sooner did it do so than the two ends drew close together. The little fish creaked and squirmed.

"Help, Help!" it cried.

The shadows grasped the cords and pulled back with all their might in vain. The poor little fish was finally drawn out on the shore by a fisherman.

"Oh, look!" exclaimed the real-children, who were watching. "The little fish is caught in the net."

"A net? That's just what I was going to say!" Knarf said.

But the little fish didn't answer. Copyright, 1929, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

QUARTER BREED INDIAN MURDERS GIRL AND 2 MEN

Second Girl Attempting to Interfere Badly Hurt—Slayer Gives Himself Up.

(Associated Press Leased Wire) MT. VERNON, Wash., July 13.—Angered when the white girl he loved refused to leave a farm house where she was staying, Joe Dalley, 35, crippled quarter breed Indian, killed the girl and two men and slashed an Indian girl with a shingle axe yesterday. He was under guard in the county jail here today.

The dead are Mose Henry, 60, pioneer Skagit county settler in whose home the tragedy occurred; George Stump, 45, Everett rooming house proprietor, and Virginia Ray, 24, of Bellingham. May Hoffman, 28, was in a hospital near here with her head and arms slashed by an axe Dalley used to kill Stump.

A former "high rigger" in the woods, Dalley appeared at the Henry farm early in the afternoon. "Put on your hat and come with me," he told Miss Ray.

She refused and when Stump urged her to stay, Dalley seized the axe, knifed Stump down and drove it into his head. When the Hoffman girl attempted to stop him he swung the axe on her. She fell under a table, insensible.

Henry slipped into the next room. Dalley followed him and, getting possession of a ten-gauge shot, shot Henry through the head, killing him.

Re-loading the gun, Dalley told officers he fired both barrels at Miss Ray. He reloaded and shot again. The girl fell on the floor dead.

Meanwhile Miss Hoffman escaped through a window and crawled to the road three-quarters of a mile away, where neighbors found her. Dalley drove to Stanwood, where he surrendered to Marshal William Jordan and told his story.

"They robbed me, so I killed them," he said. "I should have killed myself, too."

A fall a few years ago while working in the woods broke both legs.

ENDURANCE FLIGHT ENDED BY DEBRIS ON PLANE'S BODY

had better come down. I had no trouble landing, but the tail was so heavy I had to hold the plane back with both hands to bring her down on an even keel."

Then came the praise for the power unit. "I never saw a motor run prettier," he said.

Mendell looked pale and heavy, while Reinhart, a bit more pale, stumbled as he attempted to walk away from the plane. Both fliers later said they found themselves strangely weak on their feet.

Dr. Frederick Rhodes, who examined them, said that their condition was "much better than might have been expected."

"The temperature, blood pressure and pulse of each was about that which a person would show after violent exercise under ordinary conditions, with the exception that the return to normal was slower."

"While they came through fine, I wouldn't want to see anyone else attempt it."

Mendell and Reinhart both complained of a headache.

plained of slight deafness, but this had cleared away in large part by the time they were interviewed by newspapermen at their resting place at a hotel to which they were taken following the examination. There they issued this statement:

Goal Was 300 Hours "We are awfully proud of having the honor to hold the endurance record for refusing. We wish to take this opportunity to express our thanks and appreciation for all the help and encouragement rendered us during this flight."

"In setting this record we have put it as high as possible. It was our intention to make 300 hours, but due to debris that had collected on the stabilizer and to the hatch blowing off and cutting a hole in the stabilizer of the Buhl, excessive vibration was caused and we were forced to land 53 hours short of our goal. But we are very happy that we have won all records by over 71 hours."

Motor in Fine Shape Inspection of the 220-horsepower Whitwind motor which carried the Buhl to its astounding record, showed that it was in excellent condition. The nine-cylinder air-cooled power unit was taken apart last night by W. E. Thomas, Wright Aeronautical corporation expert, and after being thoroughly looked over, he pronounced it as "ready to fly again."

It was estimated that the Angeleno had flown approximately 19,760 miles in the journey which had taken it only a few miles from the airport. The average speed was 59 miles an hour, with the motor consuming 3,655 gallons of gasoline.

Plane, Money Rewards A new Buhl airplane today was enroute here, a gift to the fliers from the makers of the plane Angeleno. It is powered with a Wright whirlwind motor, gift of the Wright Aeronautical corporation.

Cash contributions amounting to more than three thousand dollars and possible contracts for screen and stage appearances, as well as for newspaper and magazine articles, awaited the pair when they had completed their rest.

The flight was backed by William Gibbs McAdoo, former secretary of treasury, who owns the plane, William G. McAdoo, Jr., A. E. McManus, Jr., manager of the Culver City airport where the flight was staged, and Paul Whit- tier, multi-millionaire pilot of the refueling ship.
