GOOD-NIGHT STORIES

By Max Trel

Knaaf's Knowledge of Port Said and India is limited, indeed. Mij, Flor, Hanid, Yam and Knaaf—the five little shadow-children with the turned-around names—who were traveling around the world with their masters and mistresses, were sailing toward Port Said. "In what country is Port Said?" asked Yam. "It's in Africa," replied Mij. "Africa isn't a country, it's a continent," corrected Hanid. "The country that Port Said is in, is Egypt," said Knaaf, trying to appear very wise. "Port Said is in Egypt, I always knew that." The others looked at the shadow-boy in surprise. As a rule he knew very little about geography, yet he often succeeded in pretending to know a great deal. "Is Port Said an important city?" Flor asked him. "Oh, yes, it's a very important city."

"Why is that?" inquired Hanid, smiling slyly. "It's important, because—because—" Knaaf hesitated. He tried to look as wise as possible, but it didn't help him a bit. "Because what?" Hanid asked him again.

Just then the real-children's father, turned to Knaaf's master, Frank, and said: "When we reach Port Said, you'll see the famous Suez Canal."

Knaaf turned to Hanid in triumph, "It's important because of the Suez Canal."

"That's correct," she said. "Why didn't you answer more promptly?" "I wanted to see if Frank's father knew it as well as I."

Here the boat came into sight of Port Said and entered the Suez Canal. The canal was quite wide. Along the banks were palm trees. Beyond were the tall white houses of the city. Here and there were minarets, looking like lighthouse towers. The ship moved slowly down the canal. The shadow-children Children, as well as the real-children, stood on deck.

"Who discovered the canal?" asked Yam. "It wasn't discovered at all," Hanid replied. "It was built by a Frenchman named Ferdinand de Lesseps. There's a statue of him."

She pointed to a stone figure standing on a pier at the entrance of the harbor.

"What did he build it for?" Yam asked again. "He was a canal builder," said Mij, "so he built this canal."

"No," said Hanid, "he built it because it made it so much easier to go to India than before. Columbus wanted to find a short cut to India. He thought that by going west he would reach India from the other side. Instead of reaching India, he reached America, which he never knew existed. He thought he had really reached India. That's why he called the red men Indians. Before the Suez Canal was built, ships going to India had to sail around Africa. Now they simply—"

"Now they simply go down the Suez Canal," broke in Knaaf, just to show that he knew all about it. Hanid shook her head.

"There's much more to it than that. They go down the Suez Canal into the Red Sea, then down the Red Sea into—"

"Into India," interrupted Knaaf.

"Into the Arabian Sea," she continued with a smile. "This is between Arabia and India and is really part of the Indian Ocean. As soon as they cross this they are in—"

"In India!" cried Knaaf. "Yes, you're right at last."

"Oh," said Knaaf, "I was right all along."

"Well, smartly, if you know so much, what is it that comes from India that makes it so important?" "Humph," he said, "that's easy. It is India rubber balls! Everybody knows that."

And he walked off, quite proud of himself.

SAFER BATHING

LONDON—The talk along bathing beaches this year has been about the scantiness of costume, but of the safety of them. New ones on the market have small special chambers fully placed in front and back. These chambers can be inflated and will support a swimmer. They are so arranged that an unconscious swimmer will float face upward.

SELDOM HEARD OF

PARIS—You very seldom hear of a revue girl kicking because she has to wear scanty clothing in the show. Yet Mile. Simone Gahard, former mamequin and last year's "Queen of Paris," refused to appear in the show because of the scanty costume it called for. The theatre took her to court and claimed an indemnity of $325.

TOPSY-TURVY TOWN

LONDON—Porlock is topsy-turvy land no longer, for the ministry of health has made the two halves of the city a whole. It used to be, however, that the water came was allowed to enter only one side of the street; police needed a tape to measure which side of the village the prisoner was in; taxes varied; and one-half of the village was wet and the other dry.

JAIL TERM AND FINE METED TO OHIO EDITORS

freedom of the press in the hearing which was concluded this morning when Judge Walther refused his motion to dismiss the charges. He also denied that the editorial was in contempt.

In spite of Baker's announcement that he would appeal at once to the appellate court, Judge Walther issued a call for Sheriff Hargravy to take the two men in to custody at once.

No Apology Offered

Judge Walther pronounced his sentence after Baker, when his motion for dismissal was denied, reading the defendants' case without calling witnesses or offering evidence. The jurist then declared Selzer and Matson guilty. He asserted that Ohio supreme court decisions had shown that lower courts have the inherent right to convict and punish contempt of court, even in cases not pending. The judge said, however, that the present case regarding his injunction still pending, a point which Baker denied.

Recommendations of punishment were asked by the judge of Baker and John A. Cline, former county prosecutor and past president of the Ohio State Bar association, who served as prosecutor.

Cline pointed out that the newspapermen had made no attempt at apology or offered testimony. He said that therefore the punishment should be commensurate with the harm done.

REFRIGERATING GAS ADDS THREE TO DEATH TOLL

ated that Mrs. Painter, perhaps feeling faint and realizing impending disaster, had tried to rise from the bed, but was overcome. The gas, except in large quantity, is almost odorless, officials said, and the family was probably feeling ill upon retiring.

Contractors Face Loss.

E. W. Kritzer, vice-president of the company which manufactured the refrigerating system used in the building, hurried to the scene upon being informed of the tragedy by Coroner Bundesen. He agreed to help the coroner elim-nate the use of methyl chloride gas.

Kritzer said that more than $50,000 had been invested here in methyl chloride refrigerating systems, and that many small contractors, financially unable to make the change to another refrigerant, probably would be put out of business.

The refrigeration system operated from a central plant which manufactured the gas in the basement and pumped it to the roof from there it flowed by gravity through the 70 individual units. A similar plant was blamed two weeks ago for the deaths of two persons.

SEATTLE CITIZEN REGAINS HEALTH THROUGH SARGON

That Sargon, the new, revolutionary formula, perfected after years of scientific research, is one of the greatest health-giving remedies of the age, is conclusively proved by the unquestionable evidence of thousands of people throughout the country who have been lifted from the throes of ill health by its use.

Right here in the northwest thousands have taken it with the most astonishing and gratifying results and scores have come forward to tell of its amazing powers. Among the latest to give enthusiastic public endorsement of Sargon is Charles W. Snyder, 89 Pine street, Seattle. Mr. Snyder was formerly a locomotive engineer but was retired several years ago. He is a veteran of the Spanish-American war, Mr. Snyder said:

"I feel just as hale and hearty today as I did when I was an engineer fifteen years ago—and I give Sargon all the credit."

"My stomach was badly out of order and my whole system seemed to be poisoned from constipation. Rheumatic pains made it almost impossible for me to walk up and down stairs. My appetite failed completely and I was getting weaker all the time. I really don't believe I could have kept going if it hadn't been for Sargon."

"Now, after a few weeks of the Sargon treatment, it is actually hard for me to believe that anything was ever the matter with me. I'm entirely rid of indigestion, my appetite is fine and, best of all, the pains have gone out of my legs and I can get around as well as anybody. Constipation is a thing of the past with me and I feel a hundred per cent better in every way. My friends know that when I say a thing I mean it and I wouldn't be recommending Sargon now if I didn't know to my own satisfaction that it's the best body-building tonic money can buy."

Sargon may be obtained in Roseburg from Nathan Fallerton's Rexall drug store.—Adv.
