ROSEBURG, OREGON, THURSDAY, JULY 25, 1929.

ERECT A TEMPORARY WIND INDICATOR

TWICE recently good will planes from other cities in Oregon have landed at the Roseburg municipal airport. Our landing field has not yet been put in condition to receive planes and as a result fliers from other cities must wonder at us telling them to land at the municipal field. Bonds were voted and sold some time ago for the purchase and conditioning of the airport. The commission appointed to complete the transactions for the purchase of the land has been at work. Deeds to the land are being obtained as rapidly as possible and plans are being completed for the grading and other work that is to be done. It may be some time before this work is started and in the meantime, all through the summer, planes will be landing here occasionally. If only as a temporary measure, a wind indicator, or "sock" as the pilots call them should be erected on the field for the guidance of planes that will be landing here this summer.

Our neighboring city, Eugene, is all decked out with huge street banners, red shirts, whiskers and calico dresses. Her "Sunset Trail" pioneer pageant will blaze forth in all its glory tonight and will be repeated Friday and Saturday nights. Eugene is putting its whole heart into this celebration and deserves the success she is bound to have for it.

The University of Oregon R. O. T. C. unit won a marksmanship trophy in competition with other western colleges recently. Critics of the military training policies in our colleges and universities should bear in mind the fact that a man is seldom forced to fight just because he is in fine physical condition.

If you are addicted to such things, you will find it much easier to count cars with Oregon licenses on than to attempt to count the cars from other states, on the highways of Douglas county.

The next step in endurance flying, now that refueling is commonplace, will be to change the crew of an endurance plane at regular intervals while the plane is in the air.

POEM FOR THE DAY

By LOUIS ALBERT BANKS

THE DAY OF DEMOCRACY

The United Press brought this news story from Montevideo, Uruguay, July 16, 1929.

"The American colony here held an extensive celebration of the Fourth of July. Uruguay has officially declared July Fourth as a national holiday, called the 'Day of Democracy,' out of respect to the democracy represented by the United States.

"Gerhard, Gude, the United States Charge d'Affaires, gave a reception in the afternoon, in which the Foreign Minister concurred, as the official celebration of the day.

Ab, yes proud Uruguay is wise
To mark 'Old Glory' in the skies
As flag of freedom all supreme—
The emblem of the people's dream!
It comforts brave men everywhere
Till all mankind delights to share.
The men of eighteen seventy-six
Set fires of hope to world-wide wicks.

How graciously proud Uruguay
Now celebrates our natal day!
It shows us these great Southland states
Have lost suspicion's fears and hates.
Have caught our spirit of good-will,
Would share with us the virile thrill
That comes to freemen in this hour
Which celebrates the people's power.

The kings and queens have had their day;
The people now will have their say;
And when our day of birth comes round,
And we shall loud our trumpets sound,
Good men will hark in every land
And praise that brave heroic band
That to democracy was true
And placed our stars on field of blue.

"Old Glory" to the winds will fly,
Will hold democracy on high,
And freedom's friends on every shore
Will hear the cheers our voices roar,
And all who hear will happier be
Because America is free,
Will hail it as the people's day
And for our happiness will pray.

NEW RECORD DOUBTFUL

(Associated Press Local Wire)
WASHINGTON, July 25.—While officials of the national aeronautics association were unable today to pass officially on the attempt of Mrs. Phoebe O'Neil to establish a new altitude record for women at Molina, Ill., it was said indications were the flight was not an altitude record.

How to Enjoy a Vacation

Go next door or across the street, sit there and wish you were at home. Remarkably like on a vacation.

Examine rats near your home through a magnifying glass. Looks exactly like Grand Canyon.

Poke cinders in your eyes and sleep on pantry shelf. Wonderful substitute for an upper berth.

Fill your grip with books and lead, and run for cars every day. Same thing as touring Europe.

Fill bathtub with water, put in some broken glass. Ah! Just like the old swimming hole.

Let faucet run in kitchen sink or bathtub. Sounds as if you were at Niagara.

Let the mosquitoes into your home. Just like being out camping.

Rush from one place to another. Feels like trying to enjoy a vacation.

"How are you getting on with your job, Bill?"

"Fine. I've got five men under me now."

"Really?"

"Yes; I work upstairs."

"Jones is the most brutally frank business man in town."

"How so?"

"When he remits in payment, he writes: 'You have already found the enclosed check.'"

A Gentleman's Attire
DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
We were just wondering the other day—and the wondering became a serious argument—whether it is proper for the ladies at a party to dress in evening clothes when the gentlemen in the party are not in full dress, or even Tuxedo suits. Will you please tell me your opinion.

READER:
In order to answer your question satisfactorily, we should turn it around. That is, the question should really be: "Is it proper for the gentlemen not to dress in evening clothes, formal or informal when the ladies plan to wear evening clothes?" By the change in the order of the question I mean to indicate that a gentleman should dress correctly, especially when he is to be in the company of ladies. A lady does not dress to correspond to the degree of formality of the gentleman's clothes, but, on the other hand, a gentleman should dress correctly regardless of the lady's dressing.

That is, a gentleman going to an informal party in the evening wears a dinner jacket (Tuxedo), and when he is going to a formal party in the evening, such as a ball, the opera, a formal dinner or a wedding, he should wear formal evening clothes. For a man not to do this indicates that he is not a gentleman—who abides by the rules of good form and good taste.

If a woman wears an evening dress and her escort appears in a business suit, well, there are, for a woman, few moments more embarrassing, not only to her but the man also, if he is sensitive-minded.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
Is it proper to powder one's nose in public? Take, for example, in a restaurant. Please settle this argument for us.

No, it isn't proper. And I haven't to add, before I am deluged with letters, that I am thoroughly aware that it is "done," but that doesn't make it "correct" or "proper." And as for the blatant process of making up the lips in a restaurant—ugh! Better take your little make-up outfit and go to the dressing room to "dress" your face.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

BAKE BACK IN GAME

(Associated Press Local Wire)
NEW YORK, July 25.—Babe Ruth returned to his place in the New York American lineup yesterday in the game against Detroit.

The lumbering was carried from the field in Detroit July 17. He came back against Cleveland two days later but lasted only an inning and was forced again to retire. For a time it was feared the leg injury would keep the Yank slugger from the game for several weeks at least. Ruth took his regular place in right field.

HOT WEATHER COUGHS HANG ON TENACIOUSLY

Worst Kind of Colds, Says Authority, for They Reduce Vitality Already Weakened by Heat and Leave Victim Without Resistance to Disease.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York

Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

WINTER is the time we expect colds and catarrh. But it is not in cold weather alone that human beings suffer from these ailments. Even in Midsummer they are all too common.

Indeed, about the worst of colds is the "Summer cold." It drags on, taking what is left of exhausted energy. Really, you can be positively ill and incapable of your daily duties. From the effects of one of these colds, you may feel like staying in bed for several days.

Science has much to learn about the common cold. It is not known for a certainty what causes it. It is due to the action of germs, bacteria, bacilli, or a virus of some sort.

Some day the mystery will be solved. Then a remedy will be found, or at least a reasonably sure means of protection will be discovered. Until that glorious day we must do our best with present knowledge.

Anything that lowers the vitality, lessens the resistance to disease. When we are well and strong, full of energy, properly nourished and living right, we can fight off the agents of disease. We can resist infection.

Anything that weakens the system, prepares the way for disease. The effects of intense heat, causing loss of appetite and broken sleep, lower the resistance power to those agents that produce colds. That is why the Summer cold is almost as frequently met as the Winter cold.

Neglected teeth, with abscessed roots or purged gums may promote the growth of germs that attack the tonsils or nasal tissues. Abscessed tonsils may be the breeding place for such poisons. These causes operate in hot weather as in cold and may be more dangerous because of the weakened resistance due to days and nights of intense heat.

One goes to sleep without even and wakes up chilled to the bone from a change in the weather. It is difficult to determine just what effect such exposure has, but undoubtedly it is a factor in exciting a cold.

Contacts with persons who have colds, swimming in contaminated waters, drinking from unclean glasses—all these have an important relationship to the taking of colds. We should not overlook them.

Take care of yourself if you have a cold. Practice the Golden Rule by regarding the rights of others. Don't expose family, friends or the public to the effects of any careless sneeze on your part. It is easy to "spread" this disease.

Good Manners
By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Ordering Dinner
DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
I have been told by good authority that when a man and woman are seated at a table in a restaurant the waiter holds the man by the bill of fare. He reads the various items aloud to the woman, and she chooses her order in that manner; gives her order to him, and he, in turn, gives it to the waiter. My friend does not agree. He maintains that the girl also is given a menu, and uses as proof that in every high-class restaurant this method is used. Please correct the wrong one.

ILLIAN:
USUALLY each is given a menu card, and they choose the dinner together. However, I think that what your friend has independently in mind is that the gentleman who is the host should take the initiative, and with this point of view I am heartily in sympathy. "The host should be 'active' about the menu, suggesting various items that he knows are perhaps specialties of the restaurant in which they are dining, making it easy for her to make her choice, and, in general, being the 'masterful' host."

If he can do this better with a man than with a woman, so much the better. I can easily understand that he might! The man who invites a girl to dine with him and then weakly hems and haws about what to order, and shows that he doesn't know what such kind of hospitality is all about, is a disappointment to the woman he has invited. It men realized this more, they would acquire more gracefulness and gracefulness about doing the ordering. And I am sure that, from what your friend maintains, he would be able to take the reins (for the menu card) in his own hands and order an interesting and well-balanced meal. And he is right about the girl's giving her order to her host, and the host
