Markets
(Associated Press Local Wire)
PORTLAND, Ore., July 26.—Eggs, butter, poultry and fresh meats were steady and unchanged today.

Tomatoes were scarce and high at $2.50. The local crop has not yet begun to move in any appreciable quantities.

The apricot season was fast reaching the peak of its canning period. A big movement of the fruit is expected over Sunday and Monday or Tuesday should see the fruit at its best for canning purposes. Shippers have held off in order to let the fruit ripen on the trees instead of in storage.

Pending receipt of crops from more northern sections, the canning market is at a standstill, with prices high and the product scarce. The best were quoted at $4.75 to $5 a crate today.

With the exception of French beans, which were down to 7 cents, prices on the east side market of the Gardeners' and Ranchers' association were on a level with those quoted Thursday. The surprise of the market is the steadiness with which berries have kept their values. With raspberries and blackcaps fading out, quotations are still around $2 to $2.25 for raspberries and $3 for the blackcaps. The canning demand had maintained the prices.
