GOOD-NIGHT STORIES

By Max Trel

Knarf, the Shadow-Boy, Changes His Mind About Books.

Knarf—the little shadow-boy with the turned-about name—didn't like to read books. Why? He thought them more trouble than they were worth, that's why. One day, however, something happened which made him change his mind.

Knarf was traveling with Mij, Flor, Hand and Yum—the other little shadow-children—who in turn were accompanying their masters and mistresses. They were on the way to the city of Mecca, which was a very large city.

"What city is this?"

The houses of the city were spread out over three hills, which were connected by bridges. What attracted attention most, however, were a great number of high buildings with minarets, domes, crescents and tall columns. The columns resembled the steeples of churches.

"What's the name of this city?" Yum wanted to know.

"It might be Venice," said Mij.

"—or it might be Athens," said Flor.

—or then again it might be—

Pair From U. O. On Long Canoe Trip

Dean George Rehee and Amos Burg, student of the University of Oregon, are now penetrating the far north on a canoe trip which will take them to the Arctic ocean by way of the Athabasca, Slave and Mackenzie rivers. The map above shows the route which will be taken. Inset shows Mr. Burg, who is widely known as a traveler and camera enthusiast.

U-Boat Chief Back to Nation He Startled by Trip in 1916

NEW YORK—Back in 1916, a war-torn world found its attention temporarily diverted from the European conflict by word that a giant submarine with a valuable cargo in its hold had successfully eluded the British naval blockade to complete its maiden visit to the United States.

At the helm of the submarine Deutschland when its record-setting voyage in 1916, was Captain Koenig, who has returned to America's shores on the maiden voyage of Germany's newest pride of the sea—the S. S. Bremen.

In the less active role of an executive of the North German Lloyd company, the veteran Teuton skipper has come as a visitor to America, still visible in his praise of the creative ability of the shipbuilders of the Fatherland.

Bremen, proud old Hanseatic city rich in traditions of the sea, from which Captain Koenig hailed, conceived both the Deutschland and the Bremen.

In contrast to the journey which surrounded the progress of his voyage in 1916, necessitated by the exigencies of war, Captain Koenig has come back to the scene of his triumph with the progress of the fast liner known to the world.

Both the old and the new world were startled by the achievement of the Deutschland when it appeared at Baltimore July 16, 1916, to write an epoch in maritime commerce. Germany, suffering from the blows dealt it by commerce by the enemy blockade, was jubilant. The Allies minimized it as only a spectacular feat which could have no military effect. America, still viewing Germany through friendly eyes, was stirred by the visit.

A $100,000 cargo of dyestuffs for an eager American market, was the evidence of its peaceful mission. The submarine brought to the United States.

Leaving Bremen, it had tied up at Holland for eight days to throw the enemy off its tracks. Then it had literally nosed its way beneath the scores of armed British war craft which patrolled the North Sea and English Channel, turning the gauntlet to survive the menace of British guns, the merchant submarine steamed across the Atlantic.

Twice the submarine repeated its feat, bringing German merchandise.

Both in peacetime and war, the sea has held Captain Koenig. Before the world war he was master of the German steamship Neckar, and post-bellum days found him again on the deck of a steamship—the S. S. Columbus. Since then he has retired to the quiet of the executive offices of the North German Lloyd companies.

strike them. Relatives informed police the victims had apparently fallen asleep near Liberty lake. Their freight truck was going from Spokane to Mullan, Idaho.

SPokane, July 25.—Harry P. Porter was killed and his brother Frank Porter was seriously injured near Friday afternoon as their automobile truck left the highway, skidded off an electric pole and caused a 66,000-volt power line to

FARM SITUATION SHOWS IMPROVEMENT DURING PAST MONTH

SAN FRANCISCO, July 27.—Business in the twelfth federal reserve district was more active during the first six months of 1929 than during the same period of 1928. Prices of many commodities, particularly farm products, important in the district's commerce, have advanced during the past month, indicating that, despite reduced yields of some crops agricultural purchasing power, in the aggregate, may not be seriously reduced as compared with recent years. The credit situation, which occasioned some concern during the early part of the year, improved during June and early July. The advance of interest rates was halted, bank reserves increased, and the amount of reserve bank credit in use approached the lowest level of several years, notwithstanding the increased accommodation extended to agricultural sections.

Industry operated at record levels during the early months of 1929, but slackened its pace considerably during
