lowing the boarding and searching of their boat, Mrs. Heath appeared before customs officials Monday night with her attorney and gave her version of the affair. She told Mr. Fredericks yesterday that her husband had communicated with her and expressed fear he might meet with violence if he appeared for questioning.

The official version of the affair was that Sandlands and Milton Larson, customs border patrol inspector, seized the cruiser early Saturday and that the latter went to report the seizure, leaving Sandlands to guard the boat and its occupants. When Larson returned Sandlands, the Heaths and the cruiser were missing.

CHICAGO FANS GO WILD AS PENNANT LOOMS FOR CLUBS

Gates Slammed to Prevent Overflow of Field at Farewell Game of Western Dates.

By WILLIAM J. CHIPMAN
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Despite a 5 to 4 defeat by Brooklyn before a record mid-week crowd of 55,000 at Wrigley field yesterday, the Cubs are eastward bound with their lead of seven and one-half games intact. The Pirates also lost—to the Giants by 5 to 3—and must face the clan McGraw in another game today.

Chicago burned with baseball enthusiasm yesterday as it had at no other time since the dim and distant days of Tinker and Evers and Chance. Wave after wave of pennant-hungry fans swept through turnstiles, filled vast stands and poured out upon the field. For the first time in the history of William Wrigley's enlarged plant, amazed club officials had to slam the gates shut at a mid-week game with 55,000 yelling madmen (and mad-women) inside and perhaps 25,000 more milling about in the streets outside.

Even with the loss of this farewell home game, the Cubs quit Wrigley field with a record of fourteen victories and only two defeats in their stand against the east. Their grand total for the season against the east to date is forty-one victories and six teen defeats.

Rain interferred with the Cardinal-Brave game at St. Louis and the Phils and the Reds were not scheduled.

Athletics Hold Ground

While Chicago was cheering its Cubs, American league contenders were, in effect, marking time. The Athletics bowed to the Browns by 8 to 3 in the first game of a double-header, but came back strong to win the second by 11 to 3 behind Eddie Rommel's knuckle ball, which was working. The Senators trimmed the Yanks by 13 to 5 in the opener, but Freddy Heimach pitched a three-hit shut-out in the nightcap, winning for the champions by 8 to 0.

This left the Athletic margin stationary at eleven and one-half games with the Yankees on deck for a double-header today and a single clash tomorrow.

Cleveland nosed out Detroit by 6 to 5, and entered into a tie with the Browns for third place. The Sox, White and Red, were not scheduled.

PASADENA SPORTS ENTHUSIASTS ARE ENROUTE HERE

Jack Boaz and Joe Welch, Pasadena sportsmen, are leaving Pasadena today for Roseburg where they will spend several weeks fishing on the North Umpqua, according to word received here. T. A. Ballance, will arrive here Friday. Ballance will join the other Pasadena anglers and go up the North Umpqua with them.

2 PITTSBURGH MURDERS

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 7.—Two men were slain here last night, one at the door of a hospital and the other on the street in the east end district. The police described the slayings as "mob killings" believing they may have resulted from a continuation of gang fighting.

expired term of the late Representative Whitmell P. Martin over M. E. Norman, republican banker of Morgan City, in yesterday's special election.

Despite the republican drive directed from national headquarters with the tariff the dominant issue, the democrat came through with a majority that may reach 3,000. With reports missing from only 11 of the 132 precincts, unofficial returns gave Mr. Montet a majority of 2,500.

gress. When a young man, while teaching school in Milwaukee, he read Henry George's "Progress and Poverty" and became an ardent single taxer. Joining a German debating society he was designated on one occasion to uphold the single tax idea against a shoemaker speaking in favor of socialism. The judges awarded the decision to Berger, but he said in his heart he felt that he had lost the argument and made up his mind to study books on socialism.

"Before I knew it, I was a socialist," he said in later years. "I did not join the party just at that time for there was none, but I helped to start one."

ANOTHER CLINIC FOR PRE-SCHOOL CHILDREN IS SET

Another of the series of infant and pre-school clinics being conducted under the auspices of the Douglas county health unit will be held at the offices of this department in the courthouse next Wednesday from 1 to 4 o'clock.

Dr. H. K. Kent, head of the health department, will supervise the clinic, and is anxious for parents to bring their children for examination, especially if they are to start to school this fall. If they are examined now, he points out, there will be time for correction of any ailment before school opens.

SOVIET FLYERS TO HOP TOMORROW FOR UNITED STATES

MOSCOW, Aug. 7.—The bi-motored all metal monoplane, "Land of the Soviets," will leave Moscow at daybreak tomorrow (about midnight tonight, E. S. T.) on its trans-Siberian, trans-Pacific, trans-American flight to New York. The first lap of 1,400 miles will be to Omsk.

The aviators are: Boris Storingof, navigator; Semyon Shestakov, pilot; Philip Bolotof, alternate pilot; A. Shestakof, mechanic, and D. B. Futaev.

WARNING GOES OUT TO DOUGLAS FRUIT GROWERS

through an infected area should not be used on another tree until it has been sterilized, he warns. A solution of one part of cyanide of mercury, one part of bichloride of mercury and 500 parts of water by weight should be used to disinfect tools. A convenient and safe way to handle the solution is in a large, open-mouth jug, using a swab to put it on the instrument.

"It is absolutely essential that all infection be cleared up this year," declared Mr. Parker. "If it is not ridded next year we shall experience serious trouble. Already in this county one grower has lost at least a thousand boxes of pears on account of the blight.

"We had a little blight last year, but this season it is more widespread. I have found it from Sutherlin to Winston and am convinced that it is also present in other sections. It is impossible for me to visit every orchard in the county and I therefore advise any growers who is doubtful about his trees to get in touch with me immediately."

Mr. Parker's office is in the federal building above the post office in quarters also occupied by the county agricultural agent.

GOOD-NIGHT STORIES

Tin-Soldier and Jack-in-the-Box Talk a Fast Foot-Race

"Hello! Who's there?" cried Jack-in-the-box, springing up.

"It's I," said Knarf, the little shadow-boy.

Mlj, Flor, Hanid and Yam, the other shadow-children with the odd, turned-about names, hurried over.

"You mustn't mind Knarf, Mr. Jack," Hanid apologized. "He's always disturbing people for no reason at all."

"Humph!" said Knarf indignantly. "For no reason at all! I have a very good reason for disturbing Mr. Jack."

"Hello! Who's There!"

"What is your reason?" Flor asked.

"Yes," said Jack-in-the-box, "what is it, I'd like to know."

Knarf's eyes twinkled. "It's just this," he began. "I was talking to the tin-soldier just a moment ago and he boasted that he was the fastest runner in the world. He said that he would be sure to win no matter whom he raced against. 'Are you sure of that?' I asked him. 'Of course, I'm sure! There isn't anybody in the whole world who can run as swiftly as I can.' Now when he said that, I instantly thought of you, Mr. Jack, for you have always said that you were the fastest runner in the world—"

"And I am still," broke in Mr. Jack. "I can beat the tin-soldier all around the town!"

"That's just what I told him," Knarf said, chuckling, "and he said: 'Well, you go and tell that old stick-in-the-box that I'll run him a race any day in the week and not only beat him all around the town, but all around any number of towns!"

"What!" cried Mr. Jack. "He had the courage to call me an old stick-in-the-box?"

"Those were his very words," agreed Knarf. "He said you were that because you always stick in your box."

"If I'm an old stick-in-the-box he's an old stick-in-the-mud! You can go back and tell him that I'll run him a race whenever he pleases."

"All right," said Knarf gaily. "I'll tell him at once!" And off he ran to speak to the tin-soldier, who, as it happened, was standing behind a rubber ball only three inches away from Mr. Jack. In a few moments the shadow-boy returned.

"He agrees to run this very minute—unless you're afraid," Knarf said.

"Afraid?" Mr. Jack said, turning a little pale. "Why of course—I'm—I'm not afraid. What should I be afraid of? Maybe he's afraid." Nevertheless Mr. Jack looked anything but brave himself.

Knarf ran back to the soldier. Then the next thing that he did was to push the rubber-ball aside so that the rivals faced each other.

"Pooh!" said Mr. Jack, when he spied the tin-soldier.

"Pooh-pooh!" rejoined the tin-soldier, glaring back at Mr. Jack.

It was plain enough that both Mr. Jack and the tin-soldier were quite nervous. They kept trying not to look at each other, yet that was all they could do. Knarf interrupted.

"I think," he said, "that you ought first to run twice around the table, then in and out of the dolls' house, then across the carpet to the fireplace, and over the rocking chair back onto the table again."

"It's—it's a long run, don't you think?" Mr. Jack whispered to Knarf.

"I think you ought to leave out everything but the table," put in the tin-soldier, audibly, from the other side.

"I don't think they ought to run at all, either of them," Hanid said.

"Oh no, they both want to run—don't you?" said Knarf, turning first to one and then to the other.

"Oh yy-yes ind-deed," they replied.

"See, I told you they were only too willing. All right," he said to them, "Get on your mark, get ready, set, G-O—!"

But instead of running, both Jack-in-the-box and the tin-soldier remained perfectly still, for as the tin-soldier had no legs that didn't move and Jack had no legs at all, they naturally couldn't broke an inch. And as this is exactly what Knarf expected he laughed and laughed and laughed.
