GOOD-NIGHT STORIES

By Max Trell

OH, YES, KNARF IS CLEVER, HE ALMOST GUESSED MISS DOLL'S RIDDLE.

Try as they would, Mij, Flor Hanid and Yam—the little shadow-children with the turned-about names—couldn't get Miss Doll to open her eyes. Now this was inconvenient for one reason. She was the only one who knew the answer to the riddle she had just told. Neither the shadow-children, nor the other guests at her party in her doll-house, could possibly guess it.

It was Knarf's fault, you remember, that she had so suddenly closed her eyes. The little shadow-boy, seeking mischief, had pulled at one of her golden curls just as she was about to tell the answer to the riddle. Instead of speaking, she toppled off the chair and being a sleeping doll, instantly closed her eyes.

With the help of the tin-soldier, Jack-in-the-box and the Poly-Poly

"We'll Have to Leave Her."

family, the shadow-children tried their utmost to lift her back on the chair again. But as the tin-soldier was afraid to bend for fear of breaking in two, and Mr. Jack had no legs to stand on, and the Roly-Polys were rolling all over themselves, they could do nothing.

"Well," said Hanid at length, "it's no use trying any longer. We'll have to leave her as she is and do our best to guess the riddle ourselves."

"What do we have to guess it for?" Knarf asked, not the least bit sorry for what he had done.

"Riddles have to be guessed!" said Hanid sternly. "If it hadn't been for you we should have known it by now."

"Humph," said the impertinent shadow-boy, "I'll guess it without any trouble at all. Just tell me how it goes."

"I remember it," Yam said. And she recited as follows:

"My first is in bell,
My second's there as well,
"My third is very much harder to spell.
Taken together I'm as big as a house
And yet I'm afraid of the tiniest mouse;
I walk with princes and ride with kings,
And would rather eat peanuts than most other things;
I begin with an E
And end with a T;
Guess what's between and you'll quickly guess me!"

"Now you've heard it," Hanid said to Knarf, "what is the answer?"

"The answer," said the shadow-boy, trying to appear very wise, "just let me think." Suddenly he exclaimed: "I have it. It's the word EAT!"

"That begins with E and ends with T all right," Yam said, "but it doesn't agree with any of the other clues."

"It doesn't agree with them at all!" chimed in the others.

"It's plain to me," put in the tin-soldier, "that the word should have three syllables and not three letters."

"Oh, why didn't you say so before?" Knarf said. "I'll think of another word." Adn he started to think again. By and by he uttered another exclamation. This time he knew he had the right word because not only did it begin with E and end with T but it had three syllables as well.

"The word," he said, boastfully, "is ELEMENT."

"My first is in bell," said Yam, repeating the first line. "Yes, the first syllable el is in bell. But it can't be right. Is element afraid of a mouse? Does an element eat peanuts? Is an element—"

"Wait!" cried Knarf. "It isn't element. It's something that sounds just like it! It's—"

At that very moment a child's hand stuck in through the door of the doll-house and the next instant Miss Doll was set back on her chair again, her eyes wide open.

"The answer to the riddle is ELEPHANT," she said, imagining that she had been talking all the time.

"Yes, that's right!" cried Knarf. "That's just what I was about to say! Oh, how clever I am almost to guess a riddle! I think I must be one of the cleverest shadow-boys in the world!"

But no one paid the slighest attention to him, for all were thinking how an elephant WAS as big as a house and was afraid of a mouse, and did walk with kings and princes on its back, and did prefer peanuts to anything else.

RODEO TO FILL FOUR DAYS AT OAKLAND TRACK

is to present his jumping horse, which will leap over an automobile.

Tom Armstrong of Gresham, owner of Missoula Boy, and Shasta Express, the latter horse being the one killed at Gresham recently in a race, is bringing two of his racing horses for the speed contests.

One of the best known riders to be present at Oakland will be Rose Smith, an Oregon girl, who has attracted nation-wide attention by her ability. She spent most of her life near Prineville, where she learned to ride the ranges at an early age.

She started her professional career at Pendleton and later went to Chicago, where she won numerous trophies and then went to New York, where she captured the championship for lady riders at the Madison Square show. In 1927 and 1928 she won the honors for ladies at the Ukiah Rodeo, she participated in the Hoot Gibson show for 20,000 Shriners at Hollywood and beat all riders, including the men, in the trick riding contest at Sacramento. She has just completed an engagement with the Oregon City Round-up and the Sunset Trail.

In addition to participating in the outlaw riding contest, she will present her famous trick riding horse, King, who is pronounced to be one of the greatest horses of his kind.

Buff Jones, overseas cowboy and army champion, winner of the high honors of the third army horse show held at Whittilah, Germany, during the Gun Kara there, is another of the famous riders to be seen at Oakland. Jones was the movie star of "Runaway Romance" and has been engaged to make another series of motion pictures at Hollywood during the fall and winter.

Lots of Entertainment

The rodeo which is sponsored by the Oakand Gobblers and the Oakland unit of the American Legion, will be replete with entertainment from Friday morning to midnight Monday. Each day at 11 o'clock there will be a parade to the grounds, with a comic section forming one of the special features each day. A pioneer section will also be provided and prizes will be given the oldest pioneer men and women.

There will be many Indians, who will participate in the parade and will maintain an Indian village, where tribal dances and customs may be seen.

The rodeo each day will consist of riding outlaw horses, bulls steers, calves and even buffalo, bareback riding, trick riding, roping, relay and stage coach races, blooded horse races, costume contests and comic riding. Over $3,000 in prizes will be distributed. One of the features will be the championship riding events under the American Rodeo association rules.

Every evening there will be an Indian pageant, street carnival and dance. There will be a boxing card Saturday.

Music will be furnished by the Sutherlin band and orchestra. The band, together with a group of the Oakland Gobblers, will make a ballyhoo trip, visiting the various cities and towns from Albany to Ashland.
