GOOD-NIGHT STORIES

By Max Trel

Knarf's Fish-for-Dinner Club Comes to Grief.

One day Mr. Flor, Hanid and Yam—the little shadow-children with the turned-about names—were passing the piano in the parlor when they heard a familiar voice. They traced it to the violin lying on top of the piano. Peering inside the violin they saw Knarf, the shadow-boy. He appeared to be delivering a speech, although he was quite alone.

The inside of the violin, you must know, was Master Knarf's club-room. Being not much larger than a match-stick, he found it large and wide enough to suit him admirably. The others listened intently. This is what he was saying: "And the next thing you must do, my friends, is to place the worm on the hook. Then the fish is quickly caught and—"

"Whom are you talking to?" Yam broke in.

Knarf looked up quickly.

Knarf Looked Under Rocks for Worms

"Humph," he said, "I'm talking to the members of the Fish-for-Dinner Club. Please don't interrupt." "But we don't see any of the members," Mr. Flor said. "Where are they?" Knarf didn't say a word. The reason was that he himself was, in a word, the whole club by himself. "What are you telling the members of the Fish-for-Dinner Club?" Hanid wanted to know. "I'm telling them how to catch fish. I wish you wouldn't listen because everything is secret." "But maybe we'd like to join," Flor said. "It wouldn't do you the least bit of good. The rules of the club don't permit any more members to join. Besides I must be going now. The Club is going out on a fishing excursion."

"O-hi!" they all exclaimed. "May we go?"

At first Knarf said no. When, however, they promised not to interfere, or to interrupt, or to claim any of the fish that would be caught, he reluctantly consented to let them follow along.

"Remember," he cautioned them, "you're to remain perfectly quiet. The Fish-for-Dinner Club doesn't like to be bothered."

The first thing that Knarf did was to go out into the garden and look under stones for worms, but couldn't find any.

"I'll fish without a worm," Knarf said, reentering the house through the open window. Then he sprang onto the edge of the goldfish aquarium and taking a thread out of his pocket, knotted the end and let it down into the water. The goldfish, who was nosing among the pebbles, started when he saw the thread but on discovering that it was not good to eat, went about his business.

"You can't catch a fish without bait," Yam said to the shadow-boy. "Shh," Hanid said, "you mustn't interrupt. The Fish-for-Dinner Club knows what it is doing."

Knarf pretended not to hear them, and called down to the goldfish: "Hello, you're supposed to bite the end of my line. How can I catch you otherwise?"

"Catch me?" the goldfish said questioningly. "I don't want to be caught. What good is that?"

"A lot of good. You don't want to stay in this aquarium all your life, do you? As soon as you're caught, I'll take you into the kitchen and then you'll see the frying pan and the fire, and when you've had enough of that, I'll take you into the dining room on a big platter and—"

"Dining room?" That's where everyone eats, isn't it? Oh," exclaimed the goldfish hungrily, "I'll be glad to go with you!"

"All right," said Knarf, whisking nimbly at the others to make "just take hold of the end of my line and I'll help you out."

But instead of just taking hold of the line, the goldfish foolishly swallowed the knot which made it feel so uncomfortable that, as Knarf was trying to pull it up, it suddenly pulled down with such a violent squirm that the whole Fish-for-Dinner Club was pulled into the water itself.

And as the others were under a promise to keep quiet they didn't utter a sound—no, not even a chuckle.

Relief From Curse of Constipation

A Battle Creek physician says "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause." But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the eyes into the large, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderly at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25¢ today at the nearest Rexall Drug Store.
