Knarf Tries to Play Knight to Queen Ant—With Disastrous Results

Mij, Flor, Hamd, Yam and Knarf, the five little shadow-children with the turned about names, were walking along the garden wall one afternoon when they saw what appeared to be a great procession coming toward them. From a distance some of the marchers seemed to be carrying large white packages.

Knarf, who was very curious, ran ahead to investigate. He returned in a few moments, greatly excited.

"It's the ants!" he exclaimed. "They're moving!"

"Moving where?" Hamd wanted to know.

Knarf shook his head. "I don't know," he said. "They won't let me get near enough to see."

Being eager to see the new quarters the ants were moving into, and particularly to find out what were the mysterious white packages they were carrying, the shadow-children hurried to meet the on-coming procession. They came upon them just as the leaders were discussing whether to walk over or to go around a small twig that was lying across their path.

"Her Majesty the Queen won't be able to walk over it," one of the leaders contended. "She had better go around it."

"No, no!" said the second leader. "Her Majesty dislikes to go around anything. She had better walk over it. And so they argued."

"Why don't you draw the twig out of the way and settle the problem?" Flor asked.

"It's too heavy to move," said the ants. So they compromised. Some of them walked over it and the rest went around. They all scurried along as fast as they were able, as though they hadn't a second to lose. By and by along came the ants carrying the small white packages.

"What are you carrying there?" Knarf called.

A spider, who had her web in the wall, stuck out her head. "Don't you know?" she cried to Knarf. "They're carrying the eggs."

"Where are they going to move to?" Hamd asked.

"They're moving into a hollow between two stones just beyond where the sunflower touches the wall."

"And what was the matter with the old place?"

"The new queen didn't like it," said the spider. "She said it was too small, and the light was bad and she didn't like the neighbors. Miss Fly, who dropped in yesterday for dinner, told me all about it. She used to know the family very well."

"Used to know the family!" Knarf repeated. "What happened to Miss Fly?"

But instead of answering him the spider cried: "Here comes the queen now!"

It was the queen-ant sure enough. She was much larger and broader than the others, and she didn't move actively at all and had to be prodded along. She was surrounded by a large crowd of ants who appeared to be her bodyguard and whose special business it seemed to be to keep her from straying off the path.

When she found her way blocked by the twig, she hesitated a moment, then started to crawl under it. Her bodyguard followed suit. But as she was too big she had to give up that plan. Then she wandered aimlessly from one side to the other.

Now Knarf, who had heard how chivalrous it was to aid a queen in distress, announced handsomely, "I'm going to help her over!" Then he climbed onto the twig and walked to the middle. "All right, your Queenship!" he called, motioning her to ascend. Instead of the queen, up came the bodyguard, furiously angry, for they thought that the shadow-boy was trying to kidnap the queen. Knarf fled when he spied them. They were too quick for him. One of them caught his heel and he tripped. Followed he tumbled off his feet, off the twig and finally off the wall into a gutter.

"I won't help a queen soon again," he said indignantly, dusting the thick yellow pollen off his clothes.

ALTITUDE RECORD FOR U. S. AIRMEN UP TO 20,820 FEET

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—By treaty of standards calibrations today showed that Waldo Waterman, test pilot at Metropolitan airport in Los Angeles, made an American altitude record of 20,820 feet for commercial planes on July 27.

Waterman's record will not be official until it is confirmed by the Federation Aeronautique Internationale, at Paris.

The previous American record of 16,722 feet for this type of plane was made by Harold Gatty. The world record of 25,941 feet is held by Regina Schinziger, a German.

Plane Must Make Good

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Assistant Secretary Ingalls in charge of naval aeronautics announced today that unless a satisfactory test flight were made, Lieutenant Al Williams, racing seaplane Mercury, will not be sent to England to compete in the Schneider cup speed races.

New Record Attempt

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20.—Donald Templeman, former aviator, trying for a solo refueling endurance record, took on a load of seventy gallons of gasoline at 5 o'clock this morning, completing the fourth refueling of his plane.

In refueling, Templeman is spared the danger of leaving the controls unattended by an automatic funnel shaped device which catches the gasoline conduit as it is dropped. It is the first time the device has been used in endurance flights.

BUTTE, Mont., Aug. 20.—Nick Mamer's Spokane Sun God flew up to the Butte airport at 9:25 this morning. He will circle the field for an hour while the pilots of his refueling ship get breakfast. Then he expects to replenish his supply of gasoline and resume his journey to Spokane.

A new whirlwind motor to replace the one in her plane was shipped to Santa Monica, Beech said, and arrived in time. He declared he was at a loss to explain why the new motor had not been installed.

The Chaparral, one of the fastest planes in the world, was capable of a speed of 160 miles an hour, Beech asserted.

Others Continue Race

PHOENIX, Ariz., Aug. 20.—With the shadow of death shrouding their trail, 15 entrants of the Women's Santa Monica Calif., to Cleveland air derby took off from here today for Douglas, Ariz., 20 miles away, on the third lap of their race.

Claire Fahy of Los Angeles, forced to land with engine trouble at Calexico, Calif., withdrew from the contest when she and her husband, Herbert J. Fahy, Los Angeles test pilot, said they found evidence that her plane had been tampered with. The center section wires had snapped as she landed, Mrs. Fahy said, and her husband declared they showed signs of having been weakened by acid.

Then Resche, of Germany, set her plane down near Holtville, east of Calexico, with carburetor trouble, and wrecked her landing gear. She withdrew when she found immediate repairs could not be made, but said she would proceed to Cleveland as soon as possible to

FABER, VETERAN HURLER, RECEIVES GOLD SHOWER

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—Urban "Red" Faber, whose pitching always has been a bright spot during the rise and decline of the White Sox, had his day today.

It was Faber day at Comiskey park. Hundreds of friends and admirers of the 40-year-old right hander from Cascade, Iowa, were here to help him celebrate. "Red" was slated to show his hurling cunning against the Yankees and receive a gold offering of several thousand dollars.

Faber has been in baseball for 21 years, 14 of which he had been winning games for the White Sox. "Urban Faber is my ideal of a baseball player should be," Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the White Sox said in eulogizing the pitcher. "He is an example for all American youth to follow."

Romance Near "Crash"

When Miss Ashmun suggested he step into the office, Lizarraza whipped out a knife and plunged it into her throat.

Police learned that Lizarraza was obsessed with the idea that he was being robbed by the Red Cross which handled his government disability compensation. On previous occasions, they were told, he had entered the office and threatened violence.

Miss Ashmun had befriended the veteran, quieting him when he grew excited and excusing his outbursts to the others, even when he threatened her, workers in the Red Cross disclosed. It was because of her kindness, police believe, that Lizarraza singled her out for his complaints and finally as the object of his attack.

Sheep Industry Kept at High Plane

By High Prices of Other Meats and Decrease in Slaughter of Cattle

A fair outlook for the sheep industry during the next year, due partly to high prices of competing meats and to the fact that the 1929 lamb crop is smaller than that of 1928 because of the reduced percentage of lambs saved, is indicated in the midsummer sheep and wool outlook report issued August 5 by the bureau of agricultural economics of the United States department of agriculture. Demand for wool in this country is expected to be well maintained and some improvement in the demand in foreign countries may occur within the year.

Markings and slaughter of lambs during the next ten months, according to the report, are expected to be no larger than in the corresponding period of 1928-29, but are likely to be above those of other recent years. While the high level of demand for lamb is not likely to be maintained, any falling off that may occur is not likely to be sufficient to affect lamb prices materially.

An active demand for feeder lambs is expected this fall. If this demand becomes general it may carry the price of feeder lambs so high as to reduce profits on feeding below those realized last year.

The decreased slaughter of cattle and calves and high prices of beef and veal during recent years have helped maintain the demand for lambs. Cattle and calf slaughter is expected to continue relatively small during the next two years and hog slaughter is expected to be further reduced next year.

This reduced competition from other meats will continue to help maintain lamb prices during this period. Within the next three years, however, increased slaughter of cattle and hogs is to be expected, and in planning the long time future of their business sheep producers should give recognition to this situation. Present breeding flocks seem ample to produce at the lamb rate that can be disposed of at prices in line with the level of the last few years.

The wool situation in this country is closely tied to the world situation, while lamb prices are largely controlled by domestic conditions. The present wool outlook does not seem to be one to encourage further expansion in wool production in this country at the present time. World wool production in 1929-30 will probably be at least as large as that of 1928-29.

CONGESTION IN FEDERAL PRISONS TO BE RELIEVED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—A plan to solve in part the overcrowding in federal penitentiaries has been agreed upon between President Hoover, Secretary of War Good and Attorney General Mitchell.

It contemplates among other things the transfer to the justice department of military prisoners now but slightly used.

Such prisoners are at Leavenworth, Kansas; Blackwell's island and Alcatraz. These now have only a few inmates and can accommodate more.

The first move in the new plan will be to turn over the Leavenworth military prison to the department of justice.

PRUNE GROWERS TO FORM POOL ON AUGUST 30

them see that the fruit from this state is just as good if not better, than that from California.

"It is impossible, however, to make a good dried prune out of a poor green prune. A grower can dry a prune that contains brown rot or drought spots, and the fruit cannot be distinguished from good prunes after being dried, but it can be quickly distinguished by its flavor, and a consumer can form a very poor impression of Oregon fruit if he bites into a prune that has been touched with brown rot."

"For that reason we are urging every grower in our organization to be extremely careful and pack nothing but the very best of his crop. However, all of the prune growers of the county are not in our organization and we, therefore, want to impress upon every grower the need for a high quality pack this year."

Mr. Leedy recommends that growers dice their orchards before the harvest. If this is done, he states, the prunes are safe from being picked while still green. Most of the orchards, however, he states, will fall off early. If a die is run over the orchard before picking starts, following the disc with a plunger, a soft and clean surface is furnished for picking and there is little danger of getting diseased fruit in the pack.

TWO BOMBINGS TODAY ON CHICAGO'S RECORD

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—A bomb exploded in the doorway of Johnson's shoe shop in Evanston last night, marking the first bombing in the north shore suburb in 10 years.

A short time before, Chicago police found 21 sticks of dynamite, all fused, near an apartment building which had been bombed earlier in the day. There have been 74 bombings in Chicago so far this year.

The Evanston bombing was attributed to a personal grudge. Early today another bomb damaged an apartment house on the north side.
