The time will come when the United States will need more lumber than it can produce at home. To meet these needs and to conserve reasonably our own timber supplies, we shall find it advisable to import from other countries.

But we DO need tariff protection that will equalize the costs of production here and abroad—in Russia, for example—so that foreign operators, with cheap labor and cheap ocean freights, can not invade our own markets and take

Frontier Clashes Leading Russia And China To General War; Japan Claimed In Alliance With Soviet

SHANGHAI, Aug. 21.—The nationalist government semi-official Tachung news agency today issued a dispatch under a Harbin date line saying: "Although no major developments have taken place on the Manchurian frontier during the past two days, both China and Russia are quietly preparing for war."

The Chinese authorities declared martial law throughout the entire length of the Chinese Eastern railway as a result of "the increasing gravity of the situation as well as because of a number of incidents along the railway such as the derailing of trains and the recurrence of sabotage by both Russians and the Chinese communists."

The dispatch added that the Kirin provincial government had ordered two artillery brigades to proceed to the eastern border of Kirin province to oppose alleged raids by Russian troops. Telephone communications from Harbin to the east have been interrupted and communist agitators are believed guilty.

The official Nationalist News agency Kuomintang says today: "Foreign observers returning from Manchuria stated that Soviet troops along the frontier were adopting a provocative attitude, apparently seeking to test public opinion regarding Russian military action. In the event of the absence of a hostile public opinion, Soviet Russia is expected soon to launch a formal offensive against China."

Japan Aids Soviet This same agency issued another bulletin under a Mukden date saying: "Foreign observers returning from Manchuria stated that Soviet troops along the frontier were adopting a provocative attitude, apparently seeking to test public opinion regarding Russian military action. In the event of the absence of a hostile public opinion, Soviet Russia is expected soon to launch a formal offensive against China."
