GOOD-NIGHT STORIES

By Max Trel

KNARF TRIES TO STEAL A MARCH ON THE OTHER CHILDREN.

One day, Mr. Flor, Knarf, Yam and Knarf—the five little shadow-children with the turned about names—were invited to take tea with Cuckoo who lived in the clock in the hallway. They promised to be there at five o'clock, which is tea-time, as you well know.

Being more than punctual, they reached the clock at twenty minutes past four. Knarf, who was very hungry for Missus Cuckoo's little mince-pies which she always served at her tea-parties, was for going up at once. "Oh, no," Knarf said. "That would be impolite. She doesn't expect us yet."

"Let's surprise her," said Knarf. "She'd enjoy being surprised."

But the other's all shook their heads.

"You only surprise people on their birthdays," they said.

"Humph," said the little shadow boy. "He's make believe it's her birthday then?"

Nevertheless, the others refused to be persuaded, so Knarf left them and sat down on Cuckoo's doorstep, which was very near the top of the clock. The door was tightly closed.

"It's no use your waiting," the others called up to him. "She won't let you in."

The little shadow boy was drawing near to the number five and was about to pass the hour hand when Mr. Knarf exclaimed: "I have an idea. Instead of crawling up to Cuckoo's house, we can take the elevator."

"Elevators?" they all said in surprise. Even Knarf's interest was aroused and he leaned over to hear Mr. Knarf's answer. "The minute hand is the elevator. If we sit on it, it will take us right up to number twelve. And that's where Cuckoo lives."

Mr. Knarf's light, for Cuckoo did live at Number Twelve, Cuckoo's Clock tower front.

Knarf, however, began to laugh. "It will take you half-an-hour to get there," he said.

"That doesn't matter. We'll just be there at five o'clock sharp, and Cuckoo will be at her door calling us."

"Come down here and ride up with us on the elevator!" the others called. Knarf smiled slyly. He had a much better plan. As the minute hand touched number six the door suddenly swung open and out came Cuckoo, for no other purpose than to announce the half-hour, as she always did. Knarf quickly darted in before she could turn. Then he ran right through her house until he reached the entrance to the long staircase leading down into the cellar where the clock's machinery was stored. He fairly flew down the dark, winding stairs. Louder and louder grew the tick-tock, tick-tock as he descended. At last he came to the mottom and, opening a tiny door, he found himself in a long room filled with the most curious maze of wheels and cogs and springs.

Stopping carefully around all these objects which whirled and turned and jumped in the most alarming manner, he arrived at length at a tall steel wall. Putting his ear to the wall he heard with startling loudness TICK-TOCK, TICK-TOCK!

Knarf knew then that behind that wall was what he was seeking—the mainspring and mainsome of the clock, the two things which kept the clock going.

Instantly he ran around and around the wall looking for an opening, for Master Knarf, you see wanted to stop the clock.

His reason was simple. If the clock stopped, Cuckoo couldn't open the door, the other shadow-children wouldn't be able to enter and he should have the whole tea-party to himself.

Oh, for a bad one, was Master Knarf!

SEATTLE DAIRIES IN $3,000,000 COMBINE

SEATTLE, Aug. 28.—The Consolidated Dairy Products company of Seattle, through U. M. Dickey, president, today announced a merger by which consolidated takes over the businesses of the American Creameries, Inc., the Red Shield Creamery company, Inc. and the Bradner company, all of Seattle.

Organized nine years ago, the Consolidated company is said now to be one of the largest cooperative dairy organizations in the world.

The merger, involving properties and business worth approximately $3,000,000, was said to give the Consolidated and its affiliated organizations a world-wide sales volume of dairy products totaling 75,000,000 a year.

STOCKHOLDERS ARE BACK FROM MINE INSPECTION TRIP

Mining operations on a large scale will start at the Dardoff mines in the early spring, according to word brought back by a group of the officers and stockholders, who spent the first part of the week on an inspection trip at the properties. The party included W. L. Cobb, J. E. Chapman, B. L. Eddy, M. M. Miller, A. C. Seely, G. A. Cobb, Mr. and Mrs. Austin of Portland, Mrs. Seaman of Portland and Mr. Capell of Spokane.

Practically all of the preliminary work is done and the ulcine boxes were given their first cleaning. The surface dirt, part of which had already been washed in previous operations, was sluiced out, and gave excellent indications. Paning of unwashed samples near bedrock revealed very rich dirt.

As two claims are located below the present work, it was decided to wash out these lower claims first, using them later as a place to deposit the tailings. The change will necessitate an extension of the pipeline for 1,700 feet and installation of additional sluice boxes, and this will be done during the winter and actual mining will start in the spring. All who made the inspection trip are very enthusiastic over the prospects and expect excellent returns from their investments when work of washing out the gold is actually started.
