

POLICING SYSTEM OF GRAPE RAISERS ADVISED BY DORAN

(Associated Press-Los Angeles Wire)
SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 29.—Grape growers and shippers of California today had under consideration a recommendation of James M. Doran, federal prohibition commissioner, that the organized producers and distributors themselves establish a policing system designed to prevent their product from being put to illegal use after it leaves their hands.

Addressing leaders of the industry here last night, Dr. Doran reaffirmed that the prohibition department would not interfere with the purchase by householders of grapes for "grape juice" purposes in the home. He declared that such purchases were legal so long as the grapes were exclusively for home use and were not sold.

Mr. Doran declared that the distributors in California should devise some means of checking up on the manner of disposal of carload grape shipments to eastern states if possible.

"We do not wish to have to make a detailed check of shipments into the eastern markets," he said, "but when numerous cars of grapes go into the hands of a man who does not sell them directly into household channels we will have to look into it."

The California grape crop, which has an average value of about $300,000,000, was described by Dr. Doran as the largest perishable agricultural industry in the United States.

OREGON NEWS

(Associated Press-Los Angeles Wire)
PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 29.—George O. Witter, special counsel for the bureau of internal revenue with headquarters at Seattle, today announced his resignation from government service. He said he would enter private law practice at Los Angeles.

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 29.—Without arriving at any decision, the state highway commission met yesterday for a hearing on a petition for creation of a super road district. The proposed district is intended to provide funds for a short cut road reducing mileage between Portland and Tillamook by way of Yamhill.

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 29.—Chambers of commerce at Eugene, Portland, Salem, Albany, Corvallis and other western cities were receiving invitations today to send delegations to the "golden spike" driving on the completed Southern Pacific Klamath Falls-Altoona cut-off at Huckleberry September 14. Klamath Falls will be represented by a special train of 500 persons, it was said.

PENDLETON, Ore., Aug. 29.—A coroner's jury has been named to investigate the shooting of Heland Moore, eastern Oregon rancher, by his son, Clinton, near Hermiston Tuesday night, but the time of the inquest has not been established.

The jury will make a thorough study of the case in which the elder Moore was slain, before it reports the findings.

The 15-year-old boy was being held in the county jail today and District Attorney Probstel said the case would be handled through the juvenile court.

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 29.—An unidentified motorist, who was on the eleventh day of an eighteen-day fast and was "very tired," slept at the wheel of his automobile here last night and nearly collided with a car.

ROSEBURG FAMILY SUED ON DEHYDRATOR PATENT

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 30.—Suit was filed in the federal district court here yesterday by the Chapman Dehydrate company of Modesto, Cal., against Isabelle Jane Curry, Charles Thomas Curry and William Graham Curry, executrix and executors of the estate of Isabelle Jane Curry. Birdella Elizabeth Curry, Edith Florence Curry and Lulu Ann Curry, Roseburg, charging infringement of patent.

The plaintiff company alleges they are the owners of a patent in suit to Ronald L. Panchinell of Los Gatos, Cal., and covering certain improvements in dehydrators. The defendants are alleged to have infringed upon this patent in equipment used at Roseburg. The complaint seeks an injunction against further use of the complained equipment.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. R. Dyer, of Myrtle Creek, accompanied by Miss Ina Dement and Lloyd Dement, also of the South Umpqua town, spent the day in Roseburg shopping.

BORAH BIGGEST DRAWING CARD IN U. S. SENATE

Prosaic Speeches Always Bring Overflow House And Nobody Ever Walks Out.

By HERBERT PLUMMER
WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—One of the truest and most familiar expressions on Capitol Hill is "No one walks out on Borah."

In the United States senate, where so many words are spoken and so little said, "walking out" is a favorite sport. In fact, it seems at times that the minute a senator rises to make a speech it is the signal to most of his colleagues to vacate the chamber. And they do.

But "no one walks out on Borah." Instead, the reverse is true. More people (senators included) flock to the senate chamber when the Idaho senator speaks than can be seated. They stand in lines outside the gallery doors far down the corridors. There is always the chance that some one on the inside either must leave to catch a train or return to his office. At any rate, hundreds think a break is worth waiting for.

No Joker
And yet it is rather strange how Borah packs the galleries. He never is funny. He looks with disdain on jokes or witty remarks to help drive home a point. He seldom is sarcastic, and, ever, only mildly so.

He never tears a victim to pieces before the crowd. He never has been known to get personal while speaking.

He frequently is called one of the best orators in the senate, and he is. But his language just keeps on the prosaic side of eloquence. His voice is good—one of the best in the senate—but it is not a voice like that of William Jennings Bryan.

He makes no fine phrases. He coins no epigrams. He has little passion.

All of these—the things calculated to appeal to the masses—are lacking in Borah.

And still they fight for a chance to hear him.

Just Himself
Why? Simply because Borah is Borah. Borah has moral earnestness. He is one of the few who do not bore you with it.

Borah never speaks unless he has something to say nor too long then.

Borah is informed on every subject as few are, and when he reads the riot act to his colleagues, as he so frequently does, all know that he is perfectly sure of the ground on which he stands.

Borah has a fine mind that has no contempt for lesser minds. He may disagree with you as wide as the poles, but he leaves you with the feeling that he understands and respects your position and philosophy who has been studying asks that you accord him the same understanding and respect.

Borah is picturesque. His long hair and strong face set him apart from all his colleagues.
And above all, Borah has courage—courage to stand alone in a fight, defy one and all, and stick unswervingly to the path he has mapped out for himself until the bitter end.
