TODAY'S MARKETS

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

PORTLAND, Oct. 21.—A carload of Texas grape fruit, the first ever offered in this market, will replace the Florida and California products Wednesday, according to a leading product company. The Florida grapefruit, heretofore considered the most delicious, has been absent from the Oregon trade for some time because of the embargo incident to the Mediterranean fly, and the California fruit has almost ceased its movement to Oregon because of the poor quality and the consequent poor demand. The Texas fruit is said to be equally appetizing with the Florida fruit. It will sell wholesale at $6.50 to $8.50 a crate, according to size. Each crate will contain from 70 to 126 grapefruit.

With the approach of Thanksgiving and the Yater holiday season, the cranberry price has been advanced 25 cents. The wholesale price Monday was $5.75 to $6.50 a box.

Local tomatoes have almost disappeared. California tomatoes dominate the market at $1 to $1.25 a lug.

California is also shipping in quantities of Brussels sprouts, persimmons, artichokes and pomegranates.

Eggs and butter prices were unchanged, with egg values still firm.

ATTENDANCE GOOD AT CELEBRATION DESPITE HARVEST

The courthouse dedication celebration held Saturday was by far one o fthe most successful events to be held in the county in recent years. Despite the fact that many prune growers are still engaged in drying, keeping many people away from the celebration to work in the orchards, there was an excellent attendance and the city was crowded all day.

The dedication ceremony in the afternoon, conducted by the grange, was most impressive. The ceremony was directed by Fred Goff, county deputy, the grange ritualistic service being used, Ed Evarts, master of Pomona grange, leading the program.

Governor I. L. Patterson and County Judge Walter S. Hamilton assisted in the laying of the cornerstone. A metallic box was placed in the stone, containing the names of the county and state executives, the name of President Hoover, the names of city officers, a special edition of the News-Review, S. P. time table, telephone directory, copy of the grange ceremonial, program of the dedication ceremony, and a chamber of commerce booklet.

Two bands, one from Sutherlin and the other the Roseburg Municipal band, participated in the event, and played concerts after the conclusion of the afternoon program, which included addresses by Governor Patterson and Circuit Judge J. W. Hamilton. The theatres were crowded for the special matinee performances, while there was also a big crowd at the football game.

In the evening a very interesting program of stunts was given on Douglas street in front of the courthouse building. Floodlights were placed at each end of the block to afford illumination, and red flares were also used.

The program concluded with a dance in the evening.

PRIEST PRAYS FOR THOSE ON AIRPLANE WHEN PERIL COMES

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

LONDON, Oct. 21.—A dispatch to the Express from Brussels today said a Roman Catholic priest, flying from Antwerp to Ghent, Saturday, pronounced absolution for the dying, on behalf of his eleven fellow passengers, when the plane's carburetor ceased functioning.

While he recited the solemn words the pilot carried on in growing peril and finally landed his plane safely. The pasengers were scarcely clear of it when the gasoline tanks exploded and the machine was destroyed.

KLAMATH COUNTY WARS ON DOG SHEEP KILLERS

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore., Oct. 19.—When reports were received Friday that 18 head of sheep in the Olene district had been killed and 65 injured by sheep killing dogs, an open war was declared today on unlicensed dogs in Klamath county.

Owners of unlicensed dogs also are liable, according to law.

INFLATED KNICKERS FAIL IN AVIATION ATTEMPT

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—James Meers has made the startling discovery that golf knickers may look like a balloon, but aren't.

Meers, who is 66 years old, put on a pair of plus-fours and went out with the boys early yesterday. The conversation turned to aviation and Meers had an idea. Inflate the knickers, he figured, and the wearer could float through space or upon the surface of waters.

With his companions he adjourned to a filling station and the plus-fours were pumped full of air. The boys then went to the roof of a small building on the Chicago river bank and Meers jumped.

Policemen pulled him out.

"'Tis very strange," said Meers, wringing water from the trousers. "Probably it's the bum air one gets at the filling station nowadays."

GRANTS PASS WATER CO. WOULD INCREASE RATES

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

GRANTS PASS, Ore., Oct. 21.—City officials have been notified to appear before the Oregon state utilities commission at Salem October 25 to show cause why the Grants Pass Water company should not be given an increase in water rates.

It is understood attorneys for the water company will ask the commission to extend the time in which the company is required to make improvements in the present system.

The Shadow-Children Discover How Really "Important" the Beetle is.

One afternoon Mij, Flor, Hanid, Yam and Knarf—the five little shadow-children with the turned-about names—were walking in the fields when they heard a great buzzing noise close by.

"Wate out, watch out!" came a voice at their feet. "Don't step on me. I'm very important."

They looked down and saw a large beetle. It was beautifully colored. Its back was green and its shoulders were red. It glistened in the sunlight like a jewel.

"I'm Very Important!"

"I mustn't be stepped on," it repeated. "I'm too important."

"What makes you so important?" Hanid asked.

"My rarity," it replied. "I'm exceedingly rare. There isn't another beetle just like me."

"There isn't another shadow-boy just like me either," said Knarf.

"Humph," retorted the beetle, "that doesn't make you important. Nobody studies shadows, you know."

"Does anyone study beetles?" Yam asked. The beetle gave a buzz of astonishment. "I should say so. There are hundreds of professors who do nothing else all day but study me."

"I don't see them studying you now," said Mij.

"You don't understand. They do not study me exactly. They study beetles that are just like me."

"You just said there were no beetles just like you," Flor reminded it.

"My, my, you children simply won't understand. There aren't any just like me but the professors know about me just the same and are studying me as hard as they can."

"Why is that?" asked Knarf.

"Because I'm so important. Do you know that long ago in the time of the Egyptians, the members of our family were so highly thought of that we were used as charms. They called us scarabs. Even today you will find rings and bracelets and necklaces on wich are carved in jewels the likenesses of my ancestors."

"I never saw any," remarked Yam.

The beetle paid no attention to her. "I'm probably the most important insect in the world," it said, "of course, I don't let my importance go to my head. I'm modest and reserved and I don't interefere in other persons' affairs. In fact, as a rule, I scamper off as quickly as I can, whenever I hear someone approach."

"Perhaps," said Hanid, "someone is looking for you and can't find you because you always scamper off."

Apparently this had never occurred to the beetle before, for it suddenly became very thoughtful. "H-m," it said at length, "that may be. I'll remember that next time."

Just then there was a sound of footsteps and they all looked up to see a tall, thin man, with spectacles drawing near.

"It's the Professor!" cried Flor.

The beetle was in the act of dashing under a rock when it paused. "Oh," it said, "the Professor! He must be looking for me. Here I am Professor!" it squeaked.

"What a beauty," exclaimed the Professor, spying the beetle. Then he bent over and picked it up. "My, my, I thought this family of beetles was extinct," he went on as he examined it. "This is a real find indeed. I'll take it home at once and study it."

And with that he put it in a little box and, placing the box in his pocket, walked off with it.

"The beetle really was important, wasn't it?" remarked Y=m.
