ified of tracks found below where Beggs was shot and in the general vicinity of where Whitmore was supposed to have been. These tracks, they said, indicated that someone had run down hill for about 200 yards, then climbed back and come up to the place where Beggs lay.

It was admitted at the inquest by all three of the men that they were hunting deer out of season. Officers assert that they will be required to face this charge in court here.

Dr. Wainwright, who attended Beggs after he was brought here, testified concerning the nature of the injury.

The jury which sat to hear the evidence was composed of Carl Ohman, Al Kent, S. J. Jones, Harold Smith, Mr. Pemberton and Scott Morrison.
