"This year's production by Graham-Paige reached and passed, on October 15, the total for the entire year of 1928, during which 73,195 cars were built," says F. W. Chase, local distributor. "Production in the remaining two and a half months of the year will thus represent a net gain over last year."

"The rapid growth of the Graham-Paige, under the management of the three Graham brothers, marks one of the outstanding successes of the industry. The Graham-Paige cars in Europe's most important competitive motor events."

continued popularity of the make among motorists and the expansion of the selling organization in the United States and abroad. "Export business by Graham-Paige is a large factor in its total sales, 13 per cent of the cars built being sold to overseas points (Canadian sales not included). In Europe, South America, and Australia, Graham-Paige made rapid headway from the start. Graham-Paige is now one of the best known names in European motordom, owing to the enthusiastic reception given the improved four-speed transmission, and to a remarkable series of successes scored by Graham-Paige cars in Europe's most important competitive motor events."

COLLEGE YOUTH IS A FAST MOTORIST

His feat approaching the accomplishments of professional endurance drivers, a 19-year-old college youth, returning to Harvard from California, drove his Marmon 78 roadster from Berkeley, Calif., to Boston in 79 hours of actual running time.

Making but three stops for food and one for rest during the trip, the young man spent only $97 in making the 3,600 mile journey in total elapsed time of 128 hours. This sum included food, tire repairs, gasoline and oil and all other incidentals, and discloses the remarkable average cost of only 2.6 cents per mile. Although a cloudburst in Utah and a twelve-hour wait for the opening of a blocked road in Nebraska delayed the journey, an average speed of nearly 47 miles an hour was maintained during the 79 hours on the road. Thirty miles of the journey was made in low gear through heavy mud, during coldness, it meant only that her fiery temperament was banking behind barriers that sooner or later must burst. "Besides, I like the country," she said suddenly. "I need a vacation and it's like getting out of a cage to get away from New York."

A step on the veranda distracted his attention from her and he answered the door. He was amazed to find Tom Freeman.

"I was driving by and I thought I'd stop for a minute," Freeman said, with a slow, abashed grin. "I won't take any of your time. I see by the car in your yard that you have visitors. I just wanted to tell you that my sisters are giving a party at our house Saturday night and I'd be glad to have you come. All that old grudge is out of my system and I hope you feel like I do about it, too, Regan. We might as well be friends as long as we are both going to live in the same neighborhood."

Eddie, acutely conscious of the menacing presence inside of Bernice Veress, was, nevertheless, warmed by this unexpected gesture of friendliness from the man who had been his foe in love and in battle.

"That's swell of you, Freeman," he said, sincerely. "It's too bad we got off on the wrong foot at the start. Sure, I'll be glad to come if I can."

Freeman lingered a moment longer as though half expecting an invitation to enter the house. "I'm going to take Marian myself to the party—so you needn't think I've run up the white flag entirely in that direction," he stated, with pleasant frankness.

"It takes more than a fist fight to convince me that you've beaten my time. No use our being a couple of chumps, is there?" "Sure not," Eddie responded. "All's fair, they say."

FRED ARZNER WILL HUNT COUGARS IN JACKSON CO.

For the protection of wild game, especially deer, in Jackson county, Fred Arzner, of Canyonville, pre-datory hunter employed by the state game commission, is expected to arrive in Medford this week and begin operations, in a short time in the Evans creek district.

Arzner has been engaged in hunting in a game refuge in Douglas county, and was expected to be through early this week. Cougars will be the main object of Arzner's work in this county. The cougars have been killing a large number of deer and are reported to be fairly plentiful in the mountain regions.—Medford Tribune

Blue Blood And Red

by ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

CHAPTER XLV.

Life had caught him up and was whirling him through some gigantic machinery that nullified the feeble efforts of his mind to guess what it was all about. The discouraging thing was that he could conceive of himself only as a toy, a plaything in the hands of an awful and wanton Fate. Only one central shining focus of truth remained in his breast—his love for Marian Thorndike. Nothing, not even Destiny, could change that.

He wanted, with aching earnestness, to go to her—to put his very life into her hands and have her mould him like clay, as she willed and he would be anything she desired—would shape himself into the image of any ideal that was in her mind. Yet, when he had been in her presence, he had faltered and stammered until he must have appeared as either a fool or a scoundrel.

When he went to bed it was as though he sought a storm that was about to break. A new day would come with new complications. Bernice Veress, he knew with dread certainty, would return. In this he was correct.

Coming toward the house from the barn he saw her alight from an automobile. While car and driver waited she came to meet him.

An odd thing about his feeling toward her was that she aroused no anger in him. Like himself, she was in the grasp of forces that manipulated her; she was, he conceived, equally helpless with him in the midst of some insoluble jig-saw puzzle of life. It was possible for him to credit her with sincerity—she actually had no desire to ruin his life.

"Why did you hang up on me when I telephoned you last night?" she asked, with a murmur of unhappiness.

Briefly, he explained the public nature of the party-line system.

"What are you going to do?" he asked her.

"Please take me around your farm, Eddie, and show it to me."

she replied. "Why are you so cold to me when I come out to see you?"

"We've gone over all that stuff," he tried to explain, reasonably.

"If you have anything new to say to me let's get it over with. What's on your mind, Bernice?"

She linked her hand through his arm. "Where shall we go to talk it over? In the house?"

There was nothing to do but take her indoors—where she would not be visible to anyone passing along the road.

A faint instinctive hope still actuated him. They sat in the long, old-fashioned living room, and Eddie kept warily on the far side.

"I was awake almost all night trying to figure things out," Bernice said, with a tone of reasonableness.

"I made up my mind, Eddie, what you can do I can do. Maybe this trip down here is the turning point in my life just as in yours. I am going to stay, darling, going to settle in the country, in a little town a few miles from you. There are plenty of opportunities for a girl like me."

Eddie gazed at Bernice Veress in hopeless amazement.

"You're crazy. You can't settle down in this part of the country!" he told her. "You'd be a fish out of water—you'd perish!"

"If you can do it, I can do it," her voice was mixed with determination. "I can start up a little business of some kind—maybe a beauty shop—and make my own living."

Eddie listened to her incredulously. This was only a scheme, a device to stay near and harass him.

"You'd die," he repeated, aimlessly.

"There's nothing for me to go back to New York for," Bernice declared. "Ever since you left I was sick of it anyway. What do I care about the gang I used to run around with? I'll be near you, dear, and I'll be making an honest living so you won't feel disgraced."

about me. You think I'm foolish, Eddie, but I'm not. I got sense enough to know that you don't want me to be a pest—and I don't want to annoy you, either. After I get settled down, maybe we can see each other once in a while. I'll make myself just as damn respectable as that blonde girl that's got your goat."

"I tell you it's no use—" He started to protest before he realized it was useless to batter her with mere words. She smiled at him with a meekness that was the epitome of all stubbornness. But such humility, he foresaw, could not last in a temperament as essentially violent as Bernice's. This was only a passing phase of her obsession—a humility complex. If she was abased, impervious to his

Relief from Gas Stomach Pains Dizziness

The doctors tell us that 90 per cent of all sickness is due to stomach and bowel troubles. You can't be well if your digestion is bad; you are likely to get sick unless you relish food and digest it properly.

Tanlac has a wonderful record as a relief from digestive troubles, even those of years' standing. Mrs. Annie Waters, of 2762 44th Ave. S.W., Seattle, Wash., says: "I suffered from nerve-racking stomach trouble. Every available remedy brought no results until I tried Tanlac. It built me up till my stomach trouble was cured."

If you suffer from gas, pains in the stomach or bowels, dizziness, nausea, constipation, or torpid liver; if you have no appetite, can't sleep and are nervous and all run down, you need Tanlac. It is good, pure medicine, made of roots, herbs and bark. Get a bottle from your druggist today. Money back if it doesn't help you.

...and it has the Cross-flow Radiator safer in zero weather

In a field of twenty-one medium-priced automobiles only Oakland has the Cross-flow Radiator. All of the other cars use down-flow radiators, despite the fact that thirteen of them are higher-priced than Oakland. Yet the Cross-flow Radiator is recognized as one of the greatest automotive developments of recent times. Its design is revolutionary. It practically eliminates losses of water and alcohol through boiling. And as a result it is safer in zero weather. This is an Oakland advantage which becomes increasingly important with the approach of winter. Dozens of others of equal importance combine to make this car America's finest medium-priced automobile. Come in—and we will tell you all about them—and show you how easily you can own an All-American Six.
