Roseburg Girl Will Spend Six Weeks in Managing College Home

Word has been received here that Miss Fern Busenbark, of Roseburg, who is a senior in home economics at Oregon State college, is living at one of the college home management houses during the coming six weeks.

Residence at one of these practice homes is required in a course in household management. One of the practical features of the work is the care of a real live baby. In addition to the week spent in charge of the child, each girl spends a week as each of the following: Manager, baby director, cook, assistant cook and laundress.

During a college year, each of the babies at the two home management houses, will have been mothered by 26 different college girls. Past experience indicates that the little tots thrive on the variety of motherly love.

One of the two houses also has a nursery school where the little tots between the ages of two and a half and five years of age, are given a half day of pre-kindergarten work. This also gives the college girls practical training in child development.

Miss Busenbark is well known in this city, having been graduated from the local high school four years ago.
