EASTERN OUTLET NEEDED

BELOW is an editorial clipped from the Medford Daily News this week. It speaks for itself as to the way Jackson and Klamath counties feel about the advantages of a Diamond lake road:

NEW LAKE ROAD REVEALS TEAM WORK Funds have been provided jointly by Jackson and Klamath counties and the forest service for the survey of a modern highway from Union creek to Diamond lake and thence to a junction with The Dalles-California highway, near Leaver Marsh.

More people visit Diamond lake from Medford than any other point in southwestern Oregon, but local people have no desire to look that resort and great natural attraction. Members of the county court of Jackson county and "Pop" Gates, state highway commissioner whose home is in Medford, requested the county court of Klamath to join in the new lake highway project.

When you pause and reflect that both Medford and Klamath Falls are farther distant from Diamond lake than is Roseburg. When you realize that these counties already have east and west outlets and that to them the Diamond lake road is entirely a tourist road, it is easy to see that the editor of the Medford News knows what he is talking about when he says that "Two-by-four policies are rapidly being booting out in the general program to develop southern Oregon."

The position of Douglas county with reference to the Diamond lake road is entirely different. The most important feature of the road up the Umpqua, so far as we are concerned, is that it will give us a through road to central and eastern Oregon over which we can send produce of this valley to market.

POEM FOR THE DAY

By LOUIS ALBERT BANKS SALVATION ARMY ENTRENCHMENTS This bright news story comes from New York. "The corner stone of the new Salvation Army center, which will be the national and territorial headquarters of the organization, has just been laid by Commander Evangeline Booth.

How far the Army of Booth has flown! How white the shadow it has thrown! Brave William, Catherine, holy pair, How they have sweetened human air! And though long passed into the skies, Their fragrant presence round us lies, These vast intrenchments tell the tale Of work they did too great to fail.

And now there reigns Evangeline— A name to make sad faces shine; She's true to all old-fashioned ways, Yet keeps in step with modern days— The same deep love for human kind, With every cause of good aligned. Her fortress at the city's heart, For right will play a valiant part.

PLAIN, BUT LIVING SECRET OF PROWESS

Dr. Copeland, Stressing the Health Worth of Proper Diet and Exercise, Points to the People of Olden Times Who Knew How to Live.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D. United States Senator from New York, Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

PLAIN living and straight thinking had much to do with the development of the wonderful ancient Greek race. They lived plain, simple lives, ate the plainest foods, took abundant exercise, lived much in the fresh air, and believed in and practiced cleanliness.

DR. COPELAND.

Today we see a trend to those good old days when "people had the true knowledge of how to live, and acted upon it. Why will people blindly go on, day after day, eating the wrong food, violating the simplest rules of good health? The right diet, proper exercise and correct living may save us from endless suffering, and days of inefficient work through ill health.

Many of the early writers of antiquity condemned over-refined foods. The Greeks lived largely on the coarser foods, whole-meal bread, the homely vegetables, fruits, fish, oil. They used little meat and drank an abundance of pure water. In many things, we can do no better than to follow their example.

We have to these days many fine foods, but these are for the most part rather than for everybody. It is true, Americans have within the last few years turned to the out-of-door sports and games, mountain climbing, fishing and walking in sunny places. There is nothing so good for people as to exercise. Walking is one of the finest exercises in the world and its benefits cost nothing.

While every facility for bathing is ours with our private and public baths, cleanliness is overlooked by a good many. There is nothing so good for man and animal as frequent bathing. A warm or tepid bath every day keeps the body in vigorous health; the skin and nerves are stimulated and it is rare that anyone who cannot bathe in cold water, but for those who can, the cold shower hardens the body and builds up resistance to disease. The Greeks knew this. They followed these rules.

By practicing moderation in eating, drinking and sleeping, we will be filled with comfort and efficient service. If we do live rightly we shall build up a stronger and better race of men and women.

Good Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BECKMAN If She Likes "Gifts for the Home" DEAR MISS BECKMAN: The present custom of my husband and myself is to give Christmas gifts for my mother. She likes gifts for the home.

FOR gifts for the home, I suggest a table of some kind, and now-a-days almost all of them are made up as well as decorative. They are, for instance, for the bedroom, many kinds of serving tables, small tables that are essentially serving-tables, or ones that are first of all tea-tables, or coffee-tables, from those that are very expensive to the very high priced ones, from only the table to the set of tables and four chairs. Tables with detachable tray-tops are convenient for use as a breakfast tray or tea-tray. Tables, small, feminine ones, or other that are large enough for father's use or general home use. Telephone tables, with a heated chair, bed side tables, sewing tables, tables with shelves for books, benches, very newly designed electric tables, with three or four outlets on the side. And a great many others—a sort of table. Now these are sometimes made so that every table is of a different size, shape, color, or a different wood.

Dunn in Better Form

The semifinal, between Tiger Dunn of Roseburg and Red Hansaker of Eugene, was a very strong engagement. Dunn, who disappointed fans by his recent bout with Corbett, being sent out in condition, was back to his old form last night and boxed in aggressively from the first bell. Smoothing a fast left to Hansaker's nose in the first round, Dunn drew a stream of blood that poured from the Eugene boy's nose and mouth during the entire battle, proving a very gory spectacle. Hansaker, in the first round, opened an attack on Dunn's body, using a hard, straight right, which he shot in at every possible occasion. Dunn punished Hansaker terrifically during the first three rounds, but during the last three rounds he tried to knock Dunn out by continued body punching, and began missing. Both were tired out in the final round. A two to one decision called the affair a draw. Dunn getting the approval of one of the judges.

Young Dunn, a brother of Tiger Dunn, won a decision in his first ring engagement by beating Paul Leland of Coquille in a last four-round preliminary. Dunn was the aggressor through the entire battle, and shows much promise as a fighter.

Jack Franco of Roseburg and Tex Davison of Coquille fought a fast four-round bout as the second event of the evening. Both were willing to each time, and gave a great deal of punishment. They were given a draw.

Cal Herman, referee, announced that the next card is to be given at the armory on the evening of Friday, January 3.
