GOOD-NIGHT STORIES

Ting-Ling Takes the Shadow-Children to the Tea-Time Factory.
The sound of a whistle rang out shrilly. "That's the factory whistle," Ting-Ling explained to MJ, Flor, Hamid, Yam and Knarf—the five little shadow-children with the turned-about names. They were all inside the picture on the Chinese plate. After going across the bridge over the brook, they proceeded along the garden path until...

"It's a Tea-Time Factory," they disappeared behind the hill. That is, you would have seen them disappear if you had been watching the plate. All at once they met their Chinese friend Ting-Ling. Then the whistle blew. "Yes, it's the factory whistle," he repeated. "Factory whistle—" they exclaimed. "I didn't know you had a factory here," said Flor. "Indeed we have. It's one of the biggest you've ever seen." "We've never seen a factory," Yam put in. "Then I'm sure it's the biggest." "What kind of a factory is it?" "Let me see now," he remarked thoughtfully. "Oh, yes, it's a tea-time factory. Would you like to visit it?" The shadows were only too eager. A tea-time factory. They had never heard of the like. They couldn't imagine what sort of ware was made of it. They found it soon enough beyond the garden. It was a house with two tall chimneys which seemed to be made of crullers and one atop the other. No smoke rose out of them. Instead Chinamen with long pig-tails kept climbing in and out. "Why don't they go in through the doors?" Hamid inquired. "It's a short cut through the chimneys." "But won't they fall into the furnaces?" "Oh, yes, but they won't mind it. The important thing is that it's a short cut. Everything in the factory is a short cut." "Why are the chimneys made of crullers instead of bricks?" MJ wanted to know. "They bend better in the wind for one thing. For another thing, it's a good way to use the holes. Why have crullers got holes, anyway?" The shadow-children shrugged their shoulders. "Why have they?" "Because—because—hm-m, they have their own reasons I suppose. Crullers are peculiar. They're so round and empty." At that moment the whistle blew again. This time there were five sharp blasts. At once from all sides came scores of Chinamen with long pig-tails. They followed each other up the chimney then dropped inside. There were too many to get in all at once. Crowds of them were obliged to wait their turn at the bottom. Many lay down to take a nap. Not one went in through the doors, which were wide open. "You see," said Ting-Ling smiling, "they're wise. They wait for a short cut." "Oh, it's five o'clock," Knarf exclaimed. "Isn't that too late to start work. It's time to finish work." "Not in a tea-time factory," said Ting-Ling. "Five o'clock is tea-time always." "But what's inside a tea-time factory?" Yam inquired. "Come, we'll go in at once." And with that he started for the chimney. (Tomorrow: What was inside the Tea-Time Factory.) (Copyright, 1930, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

PENDERGRASS AND GIBSON HEADLINE NEXT FIGHT CARD

Long-Standing Feud Will Be Settled Jan. 17th; Good Material for Other Battles.

Featuring Austin Pendergrass and Connet Gibson, both well known local boxers, in an 8-round main event, Clyde Ward, local boxing promoter, is announcing a challenge to any fighter of his weight and Pendergrass promptly accepted it. There has been bad blood between the youngsters for a long time. Pendergrass sought a mate with Gibson over a year ago, but would not give him the chance. The two boys are about the same weight now and are both anxious to settle their quarrel in the ring. Both have gone into hard training and are now in good condition. They have agreed between themselves that the winner shall take the entire purse. New Faces to Be Seen. The 6-round main event will be fought by Tim Callahan, a recent arrival from San Francisco, and Billy Norton of North Dakota. Both of these boxers are new to Roseburg. Callahan came to the state recently from California, where he had a good record, while Norton has been fighting in the Willamette valley since coming from North Dakota a few months ago. Paul Laird of Coquille and Young Dunn of Roseburg will be matched in a 6-round special event. They put up a fast fight to a draw decision a short time ago and are both anxious to meet again. They have also agreed that the winner shall take the entire purse. Kid Malley of Sutherlin will fight Jim Franco of Roseburg in a preliminary bout. Jim is a brother of Frank and Pat Franco, both of whom have fought frequently. He is an older brother and is considerably heavier and of the same rugged type. Pat Franco, the younger of the Franco trio, is matched in another preliminary against Kid Hooker, a 120-pound Cottages Grove fighter.
