

To Buy or Not to Buy--Is Not the Question--When Every Dept. in this Big Store is Offering Sensational Sale Prices

READ AND HEED!

Fortunately for you when winter goods are needed—we offer them at reduced prices. Our misfortune in timing our sale to meet the biggest demand in years for heavy goods, becomes your opportunity. We've turned a store upside down to dispose of our overloaded stock. Buy Now—Save!

Blankets Boots Galoshes Shoes
Underwear Wool Hose Sweaters Coats
Wool Sox Wool Dresses

LOW PRICES

Fishers
Better Service—Better Merchandise

BIG SAVINGS

News of Douglas County

BRIDE HONORED AT SHOWER GIVEN BY MRS. CULVER

(News-Review Douglas County Special)

BUTHERLIN, Jan. 16.—Mrs. Jack Culver, Sr., gave a miscellaneous shower at her home Tuesday evening honoring Mrs. Claude Selbeck (formerly Hulda Gilstrap).

A program was given early in the evening which consisted of a piano solo by Mildred Slater, and readings by Marguerite Anderson and Anna Lee Allen.

The gifts were carried into the room in a large basket by Junia and Helen Allen. They were presented to the guest of honor by Anna Lee Allen, the small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Allen. Many beautiful and useful gifts were received by Mrs. Selbeck.

Refreshments were served at one large table and two small ones. The large table was beautifully decorated in pink and white. In the center stood a miniature bride and groom and train-bearer under a pink arch. White candles in silver holders helped to complete the color scheme.

Those present were: Mrs. Claude Selbeck, Mrs. Gilstrap, mother of the bride, Mrs. Selbeck, Sr., mother of the groom, Mesdames Lee Myers, Paul Helweg, M. C. Bond, B. Shack, Geo. Shamp, Sr., Geo. Shamp, Jr., J. W. Turner, Jack Culver, Jr., Clyde Holman, Maurice Vogelholz, Ollie Avery, John Cook, John Mungro, J. C. Cooner, Bertha Barze, W. H. Holman, Ann Holgate, Addie Paxton, Wesley Thompson, Alice Thompson, Otto Nelson, Mark Tidale, Misses Marguerite Anderson, Mildred Slater, Lucille Avery, Wanda Hall, Anna Lee Allen, Junia Allen, Helen Allen, Nellie Carroll, Marie Klev, Blanche Slater, and the bridesmaids Mrs. Jack Culver, Sr., and Ruby Culver.

WINCHESTER BAY

(News-Review Douglas County Special)

WINCHESTER BAY, Jan. 16.—Rev. C. C. Hulet, Sunday school missionary of Myrtle Point, attended the community Sunday school at Winchester Bay last Sunday. The Winchester Bay orchestra repeated their Christmas music under the direction of Mrs. Victor Carlson. Rev. Hulet gave a short address in which he complimented the high Mrs. Carlson and the orchestra on their good playing.

Mr. and Mrs. John Anderson, who left for Davis, Calif., before the Christmas holidays to visit relatives, returned to Winchester Bay last Wednesday. While in California Mr. Anderson exchanged his Nash touring car for a Ford coupe.

Charles Baker returned to Winchester Bay from Portland last Tuesday after a short business trip.

The boy and girl scouts held their regular meeting at the school house last Monday evening in spite of the cold weather.

Many sleds were hurriedly built last Saturday at Winchester Bay, and were used by the young folks during the snow which fell here.

Jerry Trombley of the Empress coast guard station left last Sunday for Newport and Taft to visit friends and relatives during his leave of absence.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Herring returned to Winchester Bay last Friday from a motor trip to Portland where they visited relatives for several weeks.

Captain and Mrs. Clark and daughter, Loreta, motored to Marshfield last Saturday on a combined business and pleasure trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Taylor motored to Scottsburg last Sunday on a pleasure trip.

Mr. Packett, county road master, returned to Winchester Bay last Sunday after a business trip of several days to Roseburg.

Mrs. Bert Woods and son, Ward, returned to Winchester last Monday from Tillamook, where they were visiting relatives for the past few weeks.

Among those who attended the theatre in Reedsport last Wednesday evening were Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Weeks, Mrs. George Prescott and son, Donavan, Richard Hovos and Dobbie Carg.

A ten-pound son was born to Mr. and Mrs. William Hendrich last Saturday at Winchester Bay.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank English returned to their home in Winchester Bay last Sunday from Portland, where Mr. English has recently recovered from a major operation at the Veterans' hospital.

Walter Roobaskevsky returned to Winchester Bay last Tuesday from Powers where he was employed as a mechanic. Mr. Roobaskevsky has reopened his service station which he closed early last fall.

ELKTON

(News-Review Douglas County Special)

ELKTON, Jan. 16.—Miss Naomi Haines, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Haines, left Monday on the morning stage for Eugene.

John Fullerton was a visitor in Elkton for a while last Saturday. Funeral services were held in the local Christian church for Esau Smith, Monday afternoon. Rev. E. L. Whisler had charge.

The Sunday school class of Mrs. Jenkins met at the Methodist parsonage Saturday evening for an evening of fun. Those present were: Phyllis and Barbara Adams, Mildred and Doris Hancock, Virginia Beckley, Eleanor, Phillip and Robert Beckley and Rev. and Mrs. Jenkins.

Rev. and Mrs. Jenkins drove to Eugene to attend a preacher's meeting Wednesday.

Ass. Anderson drove to Eugene Wednesday to look after business for a few hours.

Mrs. Frederick Conn, who is taking Miss Weatherly's place in the grade school, went home over the weekend.

Friday, Saturday and Monday were turkey days in Elkton. Quite a large number of birds were brought in.

Mr. Richardson, principal of the local grade school, says he will be able to name the honor roll pupils of his school some time next week.

Rev. and Mrs. Jenkins entertained Mr. and Mrs. Richardson and Mrs. Conn at an informal dinner Tuesday evening.

Mr. Row was down from the top of the mountain Tuesday afternoon. He reports about 10 inches of snow up at his place.

Arthur Climo was in Monday and Tuesday from his ranch across the river.

John Henderson was in town Tuesday. He lives across the river from Elkton.

HIGH SCHOOL AT RIDDLE PURCHASES STAGE EQUIPMENT

(News-Review Douglas County Special)

RIDDLE, Jan. 16.—The new high school gym-auditorium has added a valuable feature to its stage. It is a deep blue velvet, velvet curtain with valances, which lends a quiet dignity and beauty to the proscenium arch.

The cyclorama, or stage setting, has been ordered by the student body and will be installed on the gym stage in February. The soft, silky folds of the cyclorama will be of a light grayish blue color to harmonize with the dark curtain.

It is in four sections, each section measuring 12 feet high by 15 feet long, and two masking borders, 26 feet by 30 inches. All made up in fifty per cent fullness.

The student body has paid half of the cost of this setting and the proceeds from the first play will more than cover the balance. Ceiling border-lights, in colors, will be purchased later.

The first play to be staged with this splendid setting, will be a rousing comedy-drama in 3 acts, by Wallace Ben Hare, "A Little Cloudhopper," with a cast of seven and a group of extras in song and specialties. Also a humorous skit, "What Law Needed," with Carl Butler, Katherine Hendrick, Ruth Marcum and Henrietta Multhead in the cast. The orchestra will furnish music between acts.

A voluminous document of 85 pages, all aimed at safeguarding human life on the highways, the bill includes among its 109 clauses such innovations as:

Abolition of the speed limit for private cars.

Compulsory liability insurance for motorists.

Drastic penalties for drunkenness.

Stringent "physical fitness" requirements.

Strict supervision of motorcycle joy rides.

While it does away altogether with speed limits for light automobiles and motorcycles, the government bill increases significantly the penalties for "careless" and "dangerous" driving.

As to drunken driving, no accident is necessary to bring down a penalty on the inebriate's head. If he is found drunk at the wheel of an automobile he is liable to four months' imprisonment and a $250 fine. If he has any friends with him they, too, are liable to imprisonment as accessories.

Good eyesight and normal control of bodily functions are required of all applicants for driver's license, and the concealment or attempted concealment of such handicaps as poor vision or a tendency to faint carries a heavy penalty.

Under the compulsory insurance provision of the bill the motorist would be required not only to take out insurance against injury to others, but to carry at all times a "certificate of insurance" issued by the company whose policy he holds.

The statement, designed to answer "some of the criticism made with respect to the commission's report," said, "there appeared to be in some quarters a misapprehension as to the recommendations concerning the prosecution of certain offenses against the prohibition law as misdemeanors."

"The commission did not propose to take from any person the right to trial by jury guaranteed to him by the United States constitution," it said. "But," Wicksham continued, "as the supreme court has held, the right does not apply to those petty offenses which at common law were under the constitution always have been triable by the court."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

Eases Court Work
Wicksham said that would relieve federal grand juries and United States district courts of a burden "which experience has shown it is impossible in many districts fully to discharge, and would give the defendant that most fundamental of all rights, a speedy trial."

HOOVER'S BOARD DOES NOT OPPOSE JURY TRIAL RIGHT

Hearing Before Magistrate Urged as Measure for Speed, Explanation of Wicksham.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Charmian Wicksham of the law enforcement commission said in a statement today that the recommendations in the commission's report developed no departure from ancient no invasion of any constitutional right.

"The statement, designed to answer 'some of the criticism made with respect to the commission's report,' said, 'there appeared to be in some quarters a misapprehension as to the recommendations concerning the prosecution of certain offenses against the prohibition law as misdemeanors.'"

"The commission did not propose to take from any person the right to trial by jury guaranteed to him by the United States constitution," it said. "But," Wicksham continued, "as the supreme court has held, the right does not apply to those petty offenses which at common law were under the constitution always have been triable by the court."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

Eases Court Work
Wicksham said that would relieve federal grand juries and United States district courts of a burden "which experience has shown it is impossible in many districts fully to discharge, and would give the defendant that most fundamental of all rights, a speedy trial."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

months' imprisonment and a $250 fine. If he has any friends with him they, too, are liable to imprisonment as accessories.

Good eyesight and normal control of bodily functions are required of all applicants for driver's license, and the concealment or attempted concealment of such handicaps as poor vision or a tendency to faint carries a heavy penalty.

Under the compulsory insurance provision of the bill the motorist would be required not only to take out insurance against injury to others, but to carry at all times a "certificate of insurance" issued by the company whose policy he holds.

The statement, designed to answer "some of the criticism made with respect to the commission's report," said, "there appeared to be in some quarters a misapprehension as to the recommendations concerning the prosecution of certain offenses against the prohibition law as misdemeanors."

"The commission did not propose to take from any person the right to trial by jury guaranteed to him by the United States constitution," it said. "But," Wicksham continued, "as the supreme court has held, the right does not apply to those petty offenses which at common law were under the constitution always have been triable by the court."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

"The commission's proposal," he explained, "seeks to apply this distinction to a number of petty misdemeanors or petty offenses of a character, which, under state legislation, always have been subject to prosecution on complaint or information and triable by a magistrate without a jury, and which by act of congress may be made subject to like procedure in the federal courts."

J.C. PENNEY CO.

229-231 W. Cass St.

Roseburg, Oregon

An Event of Tremendous Style and Thrift Importance!

A Group of New

Dresses

assembled to sell

for

$6.90

Every dress is new . . . in a smart style that is distinctive of this season . . . selected with care . . . to offer you the very smartest, the very best values that the market provided to sell at $6.90. Satin . . . canton crepe . . . in black and colors . . . many, many types . . . for women, misses and juniors . . . be sure to see them!

Come Early They Won't Last Long

AL SIMMONS BEST CLEAN-UP HITTER AMONG LEAGUERS

Drove in 157 Runs for the Champion Athletics in 1929—Ruth Second, Alexander 3rd.

Associated Press Sports Writer CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—Al Simmons performed his daily clean-up job for the champion Philadelphia Athletics in championship style last season, leading the circuit in the important business of hitting in runs, official 1929 averages revealed today.

The heavy swinging Philadelphia slugger participated in 143 games and drove in 157 of the 901 runs scored all season by Connie Mack's team. Thirty-four times he scored himself by home runs and came home with 80 more through the assistance of his mates.

Babe Ruth, playing eight less games than Simmons, was second with 154. The Bambino tied with his Yankee teammate, Lou Gehrig, for the honor in 1928 with 142.