DECLARATIONS IN INSTALLMENTS

A PRACTICE that has grown up under our direct primary system whereby the candidate first announces that he will probably soon announce his candidacy and a little later announces that he has decided definitely to announce it soon, followed by his definite announcement and later by a skeleton of his platform and finally his complete platform has aroused the satire of the usually amiable Bend Bulletin, which wants to know:

What is the difference between announcing that one is a candidate and announcing that one will announce that one is a candidate?

The Bulletin furnishes its own answer: "One more news story." The situation to which the Bulletin thus refers is one that has long been thrusting itself on the attention of all newspapers. The practice of candidates in the matter renders their announcements anti-climatic. It also entails an imposition upon the good nature of newspapers, which are asked to publish several free statements for each candidate when one, fully prepared in advance, would be sufficient.

A number of reasons contribute to the practice and it is not likely that desire by the candidates themselves to obtain a maximum of free space is a chief one, although doubtless it is a contributing factor in some cases. The anxiety of newspaper reporters to get the news as promptly as possible and of each to be first with it is one factor. As soon as it becomes known that any man is a potential candidate he is besieged with urgings to declare himself. If he is really considering a candidacy he does not want to offend the reporter by refusing to answer questions and thus he is drawn into admissions which in some cases at least he would doubtless rather have delayed. So the newspapers themselves are in part to blame for a practice whose effects they do not like.

Often an aspirant's announcement that he is considering becoming a candidate is intended as a trial balloon. He wants to see how the prospect will be received and what the public reaction will be.

Thus in the present campaign for governor seven aspirants have declared their intentions to run but we have no full platform declaration from any. Governor Norblad has uttered and emphasized a keynote of progress and Mr. Hall has issued a skeleton platform much to the same effect. Mr. Corbett has thus far advocated nothing and Mr. Bennett contents himself with an attack on Mr. Corbett. All candidates are completely silent on the proposal for cabinet form of government, which will be an outstanding issue in Oregon this year, and nobody knows how any of them stand on it. None has given a clear cut statement as to what he would do about prohibition enforcement, which also is a matter much in the public mind. None has enunciated a program on taxation.

We shall have to give our candidates time. It is always so.

POEM FOR THE DAY

By LOUIS ALBERT BANKS

MEN WHO OWN THEMSELVES

"Repeat of the state enforcement act would be an open invitation and an incentive to violate the law. It would breed and nourish lawlessness which spreads as a contagion to destroy all law."
"In these words Frank G. Allen, governor of Massachusetts, made known his position on the 'Baby Vote' Act. In his address before the two branches of the general court at the opening of its annual session, incidentally it was his anxiety to the wet interests which have been pressing him to make his attitude clear on the issue. His statement was followed by applause both from the floor of the house and the galleries.

"Any of our citizens who may be opposed to the eighteenth amendment are provided by the constitution with a lawful and orderly method for repealing the amendment. So long as the eighteenth amendment to the constitution is law, our duty is clear and well defined. Whether a person believes in the wisdom of the eighteenth amendment or not, he ought to stand squarely for the enforcement of the supreme law of the land."
"The Christian Science Monitor.

We like the men who stand foursquare:
Who have the pluck for truth to dare;
Who have convictions of their own,
And can, if need be, stand alone.
This is a Massachusetts trait;
Her men have often set the gait
That led the nation in a stride
To which our history points with pride.

Methods that such an hour has come!
We hear the call—the beating drum;
The Constitution is at stake;
'Tis time New England was awake.
The voice of Webster now is heard
In Frank G. Allen's splendid word;
He honors high the old Bay State,
Would hold her true, would keep her great.

This is a trying, crucial hour—
A time to test our men in power,
While some men are but fragile reeds,
Have little care for people's needs,
Are swayed by every wind that blows,
Dare not offend their country's foes,
Here speaks a man who owns his soul
And hews a line straight to the goal.

He sees the right, and right he'll do
In spite of all the lawless crew,
Like Coolidge in 'policemen's strike,'
So Allen does what true men like:
He casts his challenge brave and clear,
Forgetting it may cost him dear;
He plays the man before the world—
His country's banner high unfurled.

JUST one more word about satire. The fellow who is wholly satisfied with his job down at the bottom of the ladder seldom climbs any higher up. So, if you want to get ahead, don't be too easily satisfied.

Maybe I'm Wrong

By J. P. MEDBURY

A Chicago man, 101 years old, has filed suit for divorce. He says there's no truth in the first hundred years being the hardest. He claims the odd year has been just as hard.

He's had six wives and doesn't drink or smoke. Marriage is his only vice.

It's surprising that he's lived to be 101. He's been married enough times to kill any ordinary man.

He says he doesn't feel his age. Paying alimony has kept him young.

He wants his sixth wedding annulled on the grounds that it wasn't legal. He claims they didn't go to Niagara falls.

Another reason is that his wife is only 57 and he's tired of being married to a flapper.

He wants a girl about seventy-five who's willing to settle down. He's looking for somebody who'll be a companion to him when he gets old.

At 101 he attributes his longevity to climate. He gives California credit for fifty years and the other fifty goes to Florida.

North and South Carolina are fighting for the odd one.

He hasn't decided which patent medicine kept him alive. He's dicker with several manufacturers now.

He's going to get married once more and if the next bride isn't a success, he'll probably spend the rest of his life as a bachelor.

He doesn't intend to waste all of his best years on women.
He's given them eighty two so far and he wants the rest of them for himself.

The Rest Cure In Dementia Praecox

It's Essential in Treating the Mental Disturbances of Youth, Says Authority.

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.
U. S. Senator from New York, Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

IT is very sad to see a young person, who has been well and strong, normal and cheerful in his mental processes, suddenly develop some unusual and disturbing symptoms. The things which used to make him happy may seem now so bore and even irritate him. He may develop "brain storms" when he will break furniture, sweat and act like a demon.

DR. COPELAND.
The general term "Dementia Praecox" is applied to a condition rarely attacks one past twenty-five years of age. It is associated with the development period of life.

There is a weakness of the mental processes and perverted ideas. At times there may be great mental excitement, and at others depression and sadness. Occasionally there is mental alertness, and then times when the mind is confused.

Sometimes he may recite one line of poetry for hours at a time. He will perform the same act over and over.

The marked difference between the feeble-minded youth who has always been weak-minded and the youth with dementia praecox is shown by the history of the case. In dementia praecox the onset may be sudden. Shock, fright or prostration, either bodily or mental in origin, may be followed by this disability. In other cases its onset is gradual and the course is progressive. The acute and sudden type is the more hopeful of cure. It may take time but recovery comes. The slow type is more serious.

If there is found to be a lowered resistance from some discoverable cause the prospect of recovery is good. For instance, if the young person has been ill or overworked removal of the existing cause will go far toward restoring his health.

Recent work of physicians in these cases has made us more hopeful of their outcome. They must be studied with particular reference to localized infection in teeth, tonsils, large intestine or other parts of the body. When the physical basis is found recovery follows the removal of the primary trouble.

Careful examination of the blood and all of the secretions are necessary. Until every test has been made no reliable estimate of the probabilities can be attempted.

The rest cure is a good thing. Rest in bed, proper nourishment, baths, massages, change of scene are all important. Most important is the finding of the far-reaching physical trouble and getting rid of it.

The details in its favor by the District of Columbia court of appeals permitting WGY to be on the air without time limit was final and not open to review by the supreme court.

19TH ANNIVERSARY OBSERVED BY SOUTH DEER CREEK GRANGE

South Deer Creek grange held a very interesting meeting last Saturday. Every officer and nearly the entire membership was present, and many strangers from other units were guests for the evening.

Supper was served at 7 o'clock, after which the regular business session was held, and upon conclusion of the closed meeting a program was presented by the lecturer, Mrs. C. H. Bailey, which was open to the public.

The meeting was in commemoration of the 19th birthday of the grange, and a birthday cake, made by Mrs. Wm. Karcher, graced the table and the first master of the grange, Dr. C. H. Bailey, lighted the candles, while the present master, Harlan Melton, presided as master of ceremonies and blew out the flames of the 19 candles. Among the numbers on the program were a piano solo by Miss Josephine Cachelin, violin solo, Wm. Melton Jr., Mrs. Ada Melton at the piano; a description of pioneer life in Oregon, Mrs. E. McCormick, whose grandparents came to Oregon in the fifties; harmonica duet, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Royce; a history of the organization of the grange 19 years ago, by Wm. Karcher; recitation, Mrs. J. J. Kester; piano solo, Miss Isabelle Karcher.

The grange decided to hold a hard time dance next Friday evening, open to the public. At the conclusion of the program an informal dance was held until midnight.

Good Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Using the Doctor's Title.
DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Your services have been a great help to me and many others with their problems. Now I come to you with mine.
1. Why does it disturb me so to hear my woman friends and acquaintances say, "Doc" or "Doc" or "My husband or his friend who comes to be a man of a justly earned degree—be he dentist, doctor, architect? I have discussed this with one whom I consider a friend, but to no avail. She says that the men do it, so why can't the ladies?

2. When introducing my husband to a woman whom I have just met, or in fact any woman, am I correct in saying "Mrs. Blank, may I present my husband, Dr. Smith?" Or should I just say "Mr. U. H.

HOW thoroughly I agree with you! I, too, consider this abbreviation of title one of the inexcusable details of manners, or lack of them. I don't know exactly what you can do about this—people who are so ill-mannered as to address a doctor in this rude manner are difficult to show this kind of thing, but I can understand how deeply this bothers you and annoys you and embarrasses you. I wonder why people will think that such informalities are smart or funny or friendly. It goes with the back-slapping type of so-called friendship, a misplaced idea of comradeship.

Your manners, too, though not nearly as rude as the use of the title "Doctor" without the last name. Don't you dislike that, too? It is like saying "Mr." with no last name. "What do you think of that, Doctor?" should, of course, be "What do you think of that, Doctor Browne?" The last name should be used with the title.

3. Since your husband is a doctor then you should say, "my husband, Doctor Smith." In any case you must not say "Mr." (Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on etiquette submitted by readers.)

DEMAND FOR SARGON BREAKS ALL RECORDS

Twenty-four Carloads in 25 Days in 27 States Is Amazing Record Recently Made by Celebrated Medicine — Overwhelming Demand the One Great Outstanding Proof of Its Merit — Rapidly Becoming Household Word Throughout America.

Most medicines are sold by the dozen or by the gross. A few are sold in larger quantities, but think of a medicine that sells in such enormous quantities that wholesale dealers are forced to buy it in solid carload lots to supply a demand that has been so phenomenal as to almost stagger the imagination.

That's just what has happened with Sargon, the celebrated new medicine that is now sweeping the country like a great tidal wave. Not only is the trade buying it in carload lots, but they are buying carload after carload, each car containing over 20,000 bottles of Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills.

Twenty-four carloads in 25 days in only 27 states is the amazing record recently made by these wonderful medicines.
In the State of California where Sargon was introduced in April of last year, it has required 20 carloads to supply the ever-increasing demand in this one state alone. Texas dealers required 9 carloads in only four months!

A single New York firm, with wholesale branches in leading cities, is selling at the rate of over a Million and a Quarter bottles a year.

"Phenomenal and bewildering" is the way one of the big drug jobbers of the country describes the marvelous demand for Sargon.
"It's the greatest seller within the memory of the oldest members of our organization," said another. "We are selling more Sargon than any other one medicine put together," said still another.
