RENEWABLE RADIO TUBE FILAMENT IS FOUND BY WOMAN

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 22.—A "darning needle that glows" has been placed in a radio tube by a woman.

The result is a tube of indefinite life. For should the needle which really is the filament or heater, burn out, it can be replaced.

Filament renewals are made without disturbing the vacuum of the tube.

The woman who thus has removed from radio one of its greatest bugaboos, the burnt out tube, is Mrs. Clara E. Quinn, a mother who guided the footsteps of her son to healthy manhood while aiding progress by her work in the laboratory.

Three years of extensive experimenting was necessary before Mrs. Quinn, who is an electrical engineer, felt that her development was foolproof.

In the ordinary tube, the filament or heater is in the vacuum and cannot be changed without breaking the bulb. There are two types of filaments, one which emits electrons directly, and the other which heats the cathode or electronic emitter thermostatically.

Mrs. Quinn's tube is of the heater type, with the filament out of the vacuum. It is a high resistance wire, well insulated. The filament is fastened to a removable section of the tube's base held in place by a small screw.

This section also contains the two filament prongs.

Built permanently in the tube are the grid, plate and cathode. This is a small hollow tube of special metal, open at the bottom, into which the filament is inserted. This hollow tube is sealed in so that no air can get into the tube proper.

Such a filament burns in the open air, while it is in the center of the vacuum. It actually heats the cathode, which glows dull red like a hot poker, by thermostatic action. Life tests have shown the filament will last from 8,000 to 12,000 hours. So far three types—220, 277 and 177A—have been developed.

Mrs. Quinn has been associated with the electric light industry since 1899, having first started her career as a teacher of stenography and accounting. All of her spare time has been devoted to study and research.

Late in 1922 she entered electrical development work on her own account, establishing a laboratory and factory in Cleveland, from which she made numerous contributions to radio.

It was three years ago she saw the possibilities of the "darning needle" tube.

Joe Wolcott, Regarded Greatest of All Pugilists, Happy With His Lot as He Performs Menial Tasks

By EDWARD J. NEHL (Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Madison Square Garden is a dim, cool place in the afternoon, full of shadows that blot the outlines of the battle ring and tuse the endless rows of empty seats into banks of dusk. Footsteps echo loudly, folks usually talk in whispers in the amphitheater that by night blazes with light and rocks to the roars of fight crazed multitudes.

There are dim figures, too, in the corridors, mostly twisted old fellows with mops and pails of suds, washing floors for a meagre hourly wage. There are others darning the walls, wiping the glasses in huge pictures that show the likenesses of the late Tex Rickard, John L. Sullivan, Dempsey, Corbett, Johnson, Joe Gans and hosts of almost forgotten warriors of the ring.

Only one of the janitors hums to himself, whistles occasionally, chuckles at his work. He's a short, chunky, happy negro with arms that stretch down to his knees. His shoes are almost without form, his trousers hang, his cap is a gray checked coat sweater, fitting his arms all right, stretches down to his knees in incongruous fashion. Diligently he wipes pictures and woodwork with a dirty cloth, a shapeless cap on the back of his black hairless head, a grin on his wide, flat features.

Yet this happy, harmless negro, 58 years old and glad of the chance to work at menial tasks, is Joe Wolcott, the Barbadoes Demon, perhaps the greatest fighter that ever lived. He once weighed 129 pounds for an epic battle with Kid Lavigne and as the welter-weight champion of 35 years ago he never scaled over 142 pounds. But he knocked out great fighters in five classes—lightweight, welterweight, middleweight, light heavyweight and heavyweight. His most amazing victory was a seven-round knockout of Joe Choynski, a crack heavyweight, when Wolcott weighed 146.

Today he polishes the pictures of men, "ch" quailed before him decades ago, ring heroes now dead, whose shades might tremble a bit even now at the touch of Wolcott's hands, now harmless. He fought when a lifetime's earnings in the ring did not equal the purses paid ordinary fighters today for a single bout.

Furthermore, he doesn't think that the entire crop of fighters in the smaller classes today could have finished George Lavigne, the Saginaw kid, with an interesting night's work. Joe has tremendous respect for Lavigne, as well as Tommy West, who had a disconcerting habit of biting chunks from his scalp in the bloody battles they fought decades ago.

Liked "Big Boys" The old timers, Joe says, were tougher, stronger, were just as good boxers, and took the game more seriously than do the gladiators of the present era. To his mind, the easiest men to bring down were the big fellows despite his own scanty five feet of height.

"Ah liked to play with them big boys," Joe grinned as he swabbed away at the woodwork. "Ah just punched away at their tummies till they began to bend. Then just thing you know their jaws is down when your tummies was and then 's easy."

Joe ambled off down a corridor, past a picture of Tex Rickard, past the likenesses of heroes of his times, and dabbed at a painting of Ruby Rob Fitzsimmons.

"Ah ain't got no kick," he said. "Ah's alive and they's dead. Ah'm gettin' plenty good po'k chops, too."

Chuckles rippled out behind him.

STOWELL, IDAHO FORWARD, LEADS THE BASKETEERS

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

SEATTLE, Jan. 23.—Harold Stowell, flashy forward of the University of Idaho basketball team, continued to lead the northern division, Pacific Coast conference point-getter, after two weeks of play with a total of 62. Stowell, third place winner for the season last year, took the lead in his first game this winter and has not been headed since.

Claud Holsten, lanky forward of Washington State college, quitted, boosted his stock last week by jumping from fifth to second place. He has been gaining on Stowell with each game and the Washington State-Idaho battle at Moscow next Saturday night will see the pair waging an individual fight for points.

Buck Grayson, Oregon State college guard, has also moved up the ladder, jumping from eighth to third place after some fine shooting in the Washington-O. S. C. tilt here last Friday and Saturday. Keenan of the University of Oregon is high point man for the Webfooters to hold seventh place.

Hank Swanson, elongated forward of Washington, is the best shot for the Huskies with 20. Washington has played only two games compared with four and five for the other four schools in the northern section and Swanson will have a chance to catch the leaders when the Huskies meet Oregon at Eugene Friday and Saturday.

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 23.—Whitman and Linfield colleges are leading the northwest basketball conference, having won the only games played in the schedule.

Whitman took two games from College of Puget Sound, 54 to 32 and 55 to 33, while Linfield defeated Pacific university 52 to 21 in the opening game. All teams in the conference get into action this weekend.

BYRD PARTY HELD BY ICE; AID ASKED OF 2 GOVERNMENTS

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Moving to the relief of the Byrd Antarctic expedition, which is threatened with having to spend another winter on the Ross ice barrier without sufficient food, the state department today asked the British and Norwegian governments to use their good offices in having ships from the Antarctic region go to the relief of the party.

In telegrams to the American ambassador at London and the minister at Oslo, Acting Secretary Cotton said the department had been informed that the vessels of the Byrd expedition might be unable to negotiate passage to Little America to bring out Admiral Byrd with his men and equipment.

Should the party not be brought out, Mr. Cotton said, it was believed a serious situation might confront the explorers, as their food supply would run low.

Four Norwegian ships and one British vessel are in the neighborhood of the Byrd expedition, all believed to be capable of penetrating the ice pack. One of these, the Nilzen-Alonso, a Norwegian whaler, was reported steaming north through the pack. R. Cotton said, his master having declined to assist Admiral Byrd, without direct orders from his owners.

"It has been represented to the department," the telegram to Minister Swenson at Oslo said, "that unless Admiral Byrd receives assistance within 30 days no vessel of any character could be of use, and to insure the safe passage, the expedition should be brought out within 15 days."

Health Bulletin

Fondling Sick Animals May Be Contagious

(State Board of Health)

The occurrence of a number of cases of psittacosis or parrot disease in this country demonstrates definitely that it is not always safe to handle sick birds carelessly.

The vast majority of animal diseases are not transmitted to man. In certain communicable diseases the specific organisms may be capable of transmission to several different species of animals including man. If man comes into intimate contact with these diseases infection may occur. Among the diseases that may be transmitted from animals to man are levin, tuberculosis, rabies, undulant fever, tularemia, tick fever, infective rat bite fever, parrot disease, ring worm and a number of other animal diseases.

It is a safe rule not to fondle or carelessly handle sick animals or animals recovering from a sickness. Dogs, cats, birds, other pets may transmit infections to man.

Parrot disease is a rare disease.
