

'70-B' BUILDS UP NEW ENTHUSIASTS

Willys - Overland's Lowest
Priced Knight Engine
6 Wins Following.

When the Knight sleeve-valve engine made its debut to the American motoring public nearly fifteen years ago, many believed that it would never be possible to incorporate such an engine in a low-priced car. Because the construction of the Knight sleeve-valve engine, such as is employed in all Willys-Overland cars, requires the highest type of skilled labor and the use of the finest materials, it was thought that such a power plant would always be prohibitive to the buyers of cars in the $1,000 price class.

Each year saw a more definite trend on the part of the buying public toward the cars employing the Knight sleeve valve engine. As the demand for these cars increased year after year, the Willys-Overland company gradually, through larger production added by various manufacturing economies, were able to build these sleeve valve engines for cars in a lower priced range.

It was only a short time ago that Knight engine cars were available in a price range that limited it only to the field of buyers who sought cars in the so-called luxury classification. The Willys-Overland company, the largest builders of sleeve-valve engine cars in the world, through its vast manufacturing facilities has now brought all the advantages of sleeve-valve engine performance to that great mass of buyers whose car purchases range in the $1,000 class.

The popularity attained by the Willys-Knight "70-B" during the past year which brought thousands of new motor car owners into the Knight engine field, is evidence of the wide market for this product.

Not alone do these smart models employ the highly perfected Willys-Knight sleeve-valve power plant, but the general design of the bodies, their distinctive lines of beauty, the roominess and luxury of the interiors, the smooth engine performance and comfortable riding qualities have met widespread approval.

Judging by the interest centered in the Willys-Knight "70-B" models at their initial 1929 showing, every indication points to greater popularity than ever before for this car.

A Kiss for Corinna

By MAY CHRISTIE

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Denise Van Wyck, bored with the life of a debutante, and Corinna Dugan, beauty parlor operator, are both in love with Malvey Craig, a clerk in the employ of Denise's uncle, Mr. Criswell. However, on the lack of enough money prevents Malvey from asking Corinna to marry him. And although Corinna knows that he is in love with her she cannot help being jealous of Denise, who is pursuing Malvey. As Denise patronizes the beauty shop which employs Corinna, it falls to Corinna's lot to manœuvre the heiress's finger, nails one day. Noticing circles under the manicurist's eyes, Denise wonders.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 33.
"Is she in love with him?" That thought persisted in Denise's brain as Corinna skilfully manœvered her fingers.

To be in love—according to her tenets—meant that one would be entirely ruthless and unscrupulous!

She would give a lot to know exactly how Corinna Dugan stood with the young man who was filling her own thoughts to the exclusion of her usual flirtations.

To the exclusion of her peace of mind, too. For days and days—oh! almost since first meeting Malvey Craig—she had felt extraordinarily restless.

This discontent!
Yet under it all was a queer, heady excitement!

She'd get him! She MUST! Nothing and no one should stop her!

And—(this was a trump card)—she'd get her uncle, head of the house of Criswell, to back her!

Through her own beauty, cleverness and persistence—by the force of her own passion for him and by the added ambition she would rouse in him, too, she would captivate the handsome Malvey!

She said now, coolly: "It was a great show, wasn't it?—that ball! What did you think of me as Cleopatra?"

Now Corinna was honest as the day, and certainly no hypocrite. So, for the moment, she was somewhat "flummoxed".

Denise herself came to her aid, good-naturedly.

"As Mortimer pointed out, I was almost naked! But one has to be distinctive, you know, to stand out from that crowd."

Corinna forced herself to say—and meant it, to her own painful knowledge: "You looked beautiful. Everyone said so."

"Ha! They admitted it!" That included Malvey, of course.

But only two nights back, in Natalie de Santalvo's patio, hadn't she—to the thrilling notes of Gambretti's love song—whispered: "Denise, you're beautiful!"

She said now, languidly, but in a would-be friendly tone: "Mortimer was really awfully taken with you. He says it's so refreshing to see a girl with a decent enough skin not to need any paint or powder. That was a hit at me, of course. And he simply raved about your eyes. He says you have the longest, most alluring lashes..."

"You can tell him that other people have often told me that, so it's no news," smilingly rejoined Corinna. She was coming out of her shell now—just as she had intended.

"I daresay. Men aren't blind," Denise conceded, with unusual graciousness. "You know, with your good looks, you really ought to make a very good marriage."

Here was a "draw". What one might call a "feeler". If there was any "understanding" with young Craig—or "hopes"—now was Corinna's chance to tell her...

Denise was conscious on her own part of a quick acceleration of the heart as she waited...

But Corinna didn't give herself away. She placed Denise's left hand in a small basin of soapy hot water, leaving it there to soak, before she countered: "What do you mean by a good marriage?"

Denise stared at the inscrutable young face that had all the creamy pallor of a gardenia.

"Why—money, of course!" "In not crazy about money."

This was incredible. A pose, of course! Too ridiculous!

"You mean," said Denise Van Wyck slowly, "that you would marry a poor man?"

"Yes—if I loved him."

("She means Malvey. But she isn't going to get him!" Denise smiled grimly.)

Around she said, ever so sweetly, "That sounds very beautiful and altruistic. But would it work, when it comes down to hard tacks? I take it that the man you'd fall in love with—even if he were poor—would be pretty attractive!"

And fascinating men are run on, and flattered, and made to think that they can marry almost anybody—WITH money! I mean, women are so crazy over good looks they'll go to almost any lengths...

... they seem to think they've got the right to grab anybody if they themselves have plenty of shooks!"

This sounded involved, but at the same time pointed. Had she gone too far? Shown her own hand too soon? That must be remedied!

So, before Corinna could reply, Denise hurried on with the topic.

"You'd be insane to turn down a rich man for some poor and romantic attachment. With your good looks—and charm" (best lay it on a bit thick to cover up her faux pas!) "and judging from the success you had at the ball, you could make a fine marriage. Jack Van Tuyl, who's even more critical than Mortimer and quite a head of my own, said he liked you immensely."

Corinna tossed her head in the grand manner.

"Much obliged to 'em, I'm sure. But I've my own ideas—"

"You mean you didn't like these boys?"

"They were very pleasant to me," said she non-committally.

"They're certainly run on enough," said Denise, rather nettled. (Sneering to conquer was all very well, but the good-will of this beauty shop operator wasn't so vitally important!)

Ensued a pause. Corinna's hands moved swiftly with her "improvements."

Moved by an uncontrollable curiosity, Denise heard herself inquire, reverting to the topic:

"Then you're all set and ready to marry a poor man, is that so?"

In the green light of the mantle lamp, Corinna smiled faintly, inscrutably, at her interrogator. Just such a smile is pictured on the features of the Mona Lisa!

"How can one tell? He may be rich... he may be poor. He might be even a millionaire! Qu'en savez-vous?"

When Denise had gone, to return in three days' time for the specially imported shampoo, Corinna sat alone in her little booth and pondered—aching—upon that conversation.

How much had it to do with Malvey?

That Miss Van Wyck was going to leave no stone unturned in order to annex him, she had no doubt.

The fluttering disquiet was at her heart again, a veritable torment. Why must one suffer so, because one loved?

That studio party given by the Countess de Santalvo! Malvey had been oddly reticent about the incidents of that evening.

He hadn't spoken of Denise Van Wyck at all.

Easier to bear, if he had praised his boss's niece!

"He's succumbing to her. She's clever. And so pretty! Malvey's only human and susceptible to her flattery."

He had said, in a half embarrassed fashion, "I told the countess about YOU, Corinna."

She had demanded, brusquely, proudly, "What did you say?"

"That—that you didn't KNOW many people, being so busy all the time—"

INTERNATIONAL HAS NEW MODEL

Features Three-Ton Truck
Powered With a Six Cylinder Motor.

C. J. Walker, the Roseburg dealer for the International Harvester Motor trucks, announces a new International 3-ton speed truck known as the model "A-5". This new model will be shown by the International Harvester company at their factory branch in Portland during the month of February. Deliveries will be made in a limited quantity during February.

Model A-5 is powered by International Harvester's six cylinder valve in head engine, with a 3.5/8 inch bore and a 4.3-inch stroke and 279-inch piston displacement. It is set in a three-point mounting with rubber cushioned rear supports.

The cylinder block is cast in one piece and the engine has removable cylinder sleeves, two piece head machined combustion chambers, seven bearing crankshaft of drop forged high carbon chrome nickel alloy steel, heat treated statically and dynamically balanced. Three wheelbase lengths are offered, of 156, 190 and 210 inches. The frame is of pressed steel channel, with a deep center section. Pressure feed lubrication is used to all main connecting rod, cam shaft and rocker arm shaft bearings. No pipes are used, as the drilled cam shaft acts as an oil distribution manifold.

The transmission, five speeds forward and one reverse, selective sliding gear type, is mounted in unit with the engine. Drop centered I-beams are used for the front axle, steel forged and heat treated. Reverse Elliott type steering knuckles are of drop-forged, heat treated chrome molybdenum steel. Ball bearings have been used for vertical king pin joints. In the rear a semi-floating spiral bevel gear type mechanism is employed with a heat-treated steel driving shaft, set in a malleable iron, banjo-type housing. The differential bearings are tapered rollers and pinion straddle a set in a three-point mounting with rubber cushioned rear supports.
