POLITICS

THERE is little remaining doubt that George Neuner will enter the race for the republican nomination for governor. Had Mr. Patterson lived, Neuner would not have participated in the campaign. Had Tom Kay decided to run, Neuner would not have entered the race against him. It is clearly evident that Mr. Neuner considered either of the other two men outstanding favorites of the people for the office, but that with their names not on the ballot, the way is left open for him. We hope that his reasoning is correct for George Neuner is a son of Douglas county and served this district well both as district attorney and as a member of the legislature. He was always well liked and respected here and when he moved to Portland to become United States district attorney, people here were proud of his advancement but regretted his departure.

To win the nomination, Mr. Neuner has some very strong men to defeat. Governor Norblad is a popular figure and has the advantage of incumbency in office. Harry Corbett is a good clean well liked man and comes of a grand old family in the state. Corbett will make a strong race. Charles Hall, from Coos Bay has been campaigning longer than the others, perhaps too long, but he has been building up political strength for this race for years, so he too, is a candidate to be reckoned with.

Of the four, Neuner seems to be the only one having a definite section of the vote set aside for him. Neuner will be the "dry" candidate—not that the others are "wet" for they are not. It happens that Neuner is the favorite with the dry leaders. Neuner will also have other definite organized support which has not yet appeared and cannot be classified as yet but it is expected to be formidable.

In spite of what political prognosticators may say and think, the nomination on the republican ticket for the office of governor is yet to be won. The happenings and the campaigning of the next few weeks, not what has happened in the past, will decide the outcome of the election in May. The reason this statement is true is that the average citizen has not yet fully made up his mind as to how he will vote, he has not had anything definite enough yet on which to base a decision for one candidate in preference to the others.

The editor of the Corvallis Gazette-Times, Claude Ingalls, who writes the interesting and oftentimes aggravating editorial column of that newspaper has a claim to fame which should be ranked high in the list of endurance champions, flagpole sitters, etc. Claude states that he has never heard those hard hitting advertisers of Listerine tooth paste, Amos and Andy, in their nightly broadcasts. We have to assume that he has seen an automobile, has perhaps used the new invention known as the telephone and doubtless on trips about the state has seen, perhaps even ridden on railroad trains—but he has never heard Amos and Andy—that is news, not editorial material.

POEM FOR THE DAY

By LOUIS ALBERT BANKS

A GROWING LIFE

When George Eastman, kodak manufacturer, nearly thirty years ago gave his home city, Rochester, N. Y., a new building for its Mechanics Institute, he provided it should not have the slightest trace of ornament.

Mr. Eastman, a self-educated business man, has since given an eleven million dollar gift anonymously to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; two and a half million to two negro industrial schools at Hampton and Tuskegee, a physics building at the University of Rochester and, in a later deed, gave for his home city unique to all the world. The man who possessed equipment has become a passionate devotee of beauty; a life organ plays while he drinks his breakfast coffee and his nose, and perhaps his stomach still was to the Association of American Home Scientists. —Caprice Magazine.

George Eastman with his kodak snare
Has helped us all to beauty share.
The whole wide world owes him a debt
It never, never should forget;
He's scattered wide a beautiful art
That adds its grace to mind and heart.
No wonder that his growing soul
Now takes a larger beauty toll!

No man can give his wealth alone,
And always streams of blessings pour,
And not himself grow sweeter grace
That shows in mind and heart and face,
George Eastman's reaping what he sowed,
What from his hands to others flowed;
The thirst for beauty he has slaked
In his own soul a thirst has waked.

Men often shrink as they grow old,
But Eastman takes a stronger hold;
He's done so much to others' bliss,
It echoes back their happiness.
His open heart, so free to give,
In fragrant atmosphere will live,
He's scattered beauty sweet and rare,
And in that beauty now he'll share.

Such men as he arouse our pride;
We revel in their gallant stride.
They do not live for self alone—
From off their bosoms a breath is blown
That carries balminess on its wings,
And to men's souls fresh impulse brings.
His love of beauty will increase,
His showers of beauty never cease.

ing to interest newcomers in Oregon. Comparing the figures for January of last year with the figures for January of 1929 makes it quite clearly apparent that it PAYS OREGON to advertise.

IN OUR state of California they spend 50 cents per capita per year for advertising their state. Here in Oregon we spend SEVEN AND ONE-HALF cents per capita for advertising our state. Oregon's population is slightly under a million. California's population is more than FIVE MILLIONS.

Draw your own conclusions.

The time will come when Oregon will spend for advertising as much in proportion to her resources and population as California spends. When that time comes, there will be less complaint about delayed development in this state.

CANADA BEST OF U. S. CUSTOMERS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Three bean contractors during 1929 purchased nearly $1,000,000,000 more of goods from the United States than they sold to the United States in the same year. The relationship of American exports and imports to the principal agricultural divisions of the world for 1929 was disclosed today by summary of domestic statistics on foreign trade.

Canada was the best customer among nations for the United States during 1929, and in addition was the largest single source of imports which the United States

Monotony Lowers the Morale

Change of Scene, Exercise and Sunshine Effective in Chasing Away the "Blues"

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.
U. S. Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City.

WHAT is this thing we call debility? Many a person has gone to his doctor expecting to be told that something serious is gnawing at his vitals. To his great joy the doctor has given the news that nothing serious is the matter, but that he is merely a sufferer from "debility."

DR. COPELAND.

Well, that is comforting, and yet, after all, everything is not as it should be. Debility is a condition which, if left to grow, may end in some really serious disturbance. Young and old may be afflicted with this debilitated state of health. It may follow some illness or injury. One may have debility from long continued worry, or grief, or fear, or from any disturbance, physical or mental.

It is strange how one may lack strength at such a time. You haven't much interest in what is going on, you are quite indifferent whether you eat, sleep or move! Perhaps you do not sleep well, you feel irritable, and you just feel as though you aren't of any use to anybody.

Have you been too much engrossed in your business? Or perhaps you have allowed your household cares or other duties to keep you indoors too much. Staying up late nights, "burning the candle at both ends," as the saying goes, will eventually wear down your nerves so that you just cannot feel normal.

We all know there is always a cause for everything. If the cause is a moral one, then religion, or some phase of life, is a good thing. Perhaps we never needed religion in the world more than we do today.

"Do not talk defeat to yourself." It was Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick who said that such words "debilitate personality." I think he is right. The world is filled with all sorts of curious and beautiful things, a walk abroad, wherever we are, will show us this. An interest in the things and people around us is good for us. We ought to enjoy the open doors more, take every opportunity to get out into the fresh air. If we live in the city, at least part of the week-end, could be spent out in the country. The country is beautiful in the winter time as well as in the summer. Living a few days in the city will wipe out many an attack of the "blues."

We all need relaxation and change of scene, occasionally. It means health to us. For persons who are run-down for any reason, being out in the sunshine is a beneficial factor in getting well. Probably one of the greatest factors in getting away from the everyday grind has been the automobile. It is a good thing for us to be able to see new sights and sounds. But do not overlook the fact that you must daily exercise and a general building up of your bodily health, so that the condition of debility will not grow to some more serious trouble.

received during the year. Total exports to Canada from the United States for 1929 were $948,501,221 against $814,715,215 the previous year.

Good Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Overcoming Diffidence

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: When a young man brings a girl home from a party, dance or other social occasion, and he would obviously like to call, but perhaps is shy, should she invite him to come to her home, or should he ask? And should he or she suggest a date for this, and if there is an objection upon the part of either one, who should suggest another date?

M. F. It is quite proper, and thoroughly laudable, for the girl to invite the young gentleman to come to see her. She is, in this way, "extending the hospitality of her home," and one can easily do this with a grace and charm that will indicate that she is a perfect hostess, and not just trying to urge a man to come to her on his heels, or to call on her. After she has graciously extended her invitation, I think that it would be well for her to leave to the gentleman the suggesting of more definite details. That is, if he will, if he wishes to come to see her, ask her when he may come, or he may wait until later and telephone her for a definite engagement. Don't worry, M. F., a man will find the way to come to see a girl, if he wants to, and if he sees that his coming is not unwelcome to her—even if he is shy!

On the Right or on the Left

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: Will you please settle an argument between myself and nephew? I think the salad should be served at the left of the plate, and he thinks it should be placed at the right? Which is correct?

MRS. M. J. M.

BOTH are correct. That is the ever-shifting and convenient. Usually, as a matter of fact, it is placed at the left. Why, I don't know, since this is usually not the more convenient side from which to eat it. If there is only one glass on the right (and in these days there usually is only one) it is, I think, more convenient to have the salad placed at the right of the plate.

The Flower Girl's Costume

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: I would greatly appreciate information about the flower girl at a formal wedding to be held at a hall. As the child is about eight years of age, I was thinking of having her dressed as a type child. Will that be correct as the type of wedding I am planning?

B. F.

NO, this would not be correct for any type of wedding. Dress the flower girl in the type of dress appropriate for a formal wedding. In a crepe de chine dress of pastel shade, or in a smart tulle dress of some lovely light shade.

HILL BILLIES OF TENNESSEE DUEL FOR GIRL'S HAND

(Associated Press Special Wire)

DAYTON, Tenn., Feb. 10.—One mountaineer was near death today and his rival for the hand of a mountain girl was under arrest as the aftermath of a knife duel fought here Sunday.

While 200 neighbors looked on, Garland Woodson, 36, and Paul Millam, 21, met in a wooded place by prearrangement and slashed away at each other with loaded knives. Woodson, heavily mortally wounded, was taken to a Morgan Springs hospital. Members of Millam's group also snatched him away.

Late yesterday Millam walked into the sheriff's office and surrendered to a charge of felonious assault. He was bound over to the circuit court.

"It was an affair of honor," Sheriff Jesse McNeeters said. "It is the law of the mountains that such affairs be settled by duel. But the law of the mountains must make way for the law of the land, and dueling must stop. I'll see to that."

Attractions AT THE MOVIES

ANTILLES—Today and Tuesday, "Antilles of the Rio Grande," all talking, with Warner Baxter, Mary Duncan, Antonio Moreno; Wednesday, "The 13th Chair," all talking, with Conrad Nagel, Lella Hyams; Thursday, Friday, Saturday, Zane Grey's first all-talking picture, "The Lone Star Rancher," with George O'Brien, Sue Carol.

THE ANTIERS is now showing a genuine romantic treat. It is the screen adaptation of "Conquistador," a sparkling novel of the southwest by Katherine Fullerton Gerould. "Romance of the Rio Grande" opened last night for a three-day run.

The story concerns two cousins, one a half American (Mexican on his mother's side) and his Mexican cousin. They are jealous about a vast estate, the property of their grandfather, and particularly over Mary Duncan. This intriguing beauty, in the role of Carlotta, is too much for any man to resist. Warner Baxter as the half caste cousin, wins the affections of a number of characters. Antonio Moreno, playing his first "boy" role, as Juan, is passionate. Find of Carlotta and proves a brilliant foil for Baxter, who is becoming one of the outstanding actors of the stage and screen.

This story moves at a brisk pace without a pause from first to last scene. Almost at the very opening, from the attack by bandits on a construction job, to the fatal struggle at the end, one has to hold one's breath, so gripping is the action.

But it is not our intention to give the story entirely away. We here with conclude by wholeheartedly recommending that you see it.

YOUR INCOME TAX

NO. 5

Recognizing that single persons, by reason of the care and support of others, are entitled to consideration, the law provides that the "head of a family" shall be allowed the same personal exemption granted a married person, $3,500. The head of a family is defined by regulations relating to the income tax as "an individual who actually supports and maintains in one household one or more individuals who are closely connected with him by blood relationship, relationship by marriage, or by adoption, and whose right to exercise family control and provide for these dependent individuals is based upon some moral or legal obligation."

Several factors are involved in determining whether a taxpayer is to be thus classified. In maintaining the home and providing for the dependent individual or individuals, the taxpayer's right to exercise family control must be based on some moral or legal obligation. The element of either legal or financial dependency must exist. A taxpayer who has minor children is legally liable for their support. If he supports and exercises family control over them, even though they have an income of their own sufficient for their support and maintenance, he is classified as the head of a family. If he does not support them, however, but does exercise family control, the common home being maintained, he cannot be classified as the head of a family.

If by reason of illness or disability on account of business the taxpayer and dependents are separated, the common home being maintained, and the taxpayer furnishing the support, the exemption as head of a family is allowed. Moreover, if a taxpayer does not maintain a common home but the dependents are at school supported with relatives, or in a boarding house, while he lives elsewhere, the exemption is still allowed. If, however, without necessity, the dependent continuously makes his home elsewhere, his benefactor is not the head of a family.

For income tax purposes, there can be only one head of a family. The exemption can not be divided.

INFLUENCE OF NEWS-PAPER ON PROSPECTIVE SETTLERS IN OREGON

Editor News-Review—It is very gratifying to everyone, perhaps more especially to a newcomer, to note the many inquiries being received from prospective settlers. It has just occurred to me that if a prospective settler could be furnished with a copy of your paper of the 11th, marking the summary of January weather, while the recollection of their own weather for the same period is still fresh in their minds, it would have more influence than a great deal of the ordinary run of literature sent out by chambers of commerce. Most all such literature reads about the same, but newspaper accounts seem to carry more authority than the former.

Longman as climate is our strongest selling point, we should not lose an opportunity to cash in on a big thing like this. In fact, I would like to offer this point to the chamber of commerce: Let them send to every prospective settler who makes an inquiry a six months' subscription to the News-Review. Indeed, from my own experience this daily reminder has more effect than any

RAILROAD PREXY SAYS FARM BOARD POLICY RUINOUS

(Associated Press Special Wire)

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, Feb. 9.—Fred W. Sargent, president of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, charged the federal farm board with violation of the fundamental rights of the constitution in an address last night.

He said the farm board was violating the constitution "by using the powers of government and the assets of the national treasury to go into the grain business in competition with private operators."

Present methods of handling the nation's wheat crop, Sargent said, "is a building of formidable foreign competition and that steadily mounting taxation is threatening to undermine the nation's prosperity."

"Bying" grain as it is, the government is taking property without due process of law and without compensation," Sargent said. "When the government uses the money of the people to go into the transportation business, taking trade from private interests, and when it uses this money to subsidize water transportation it is in effect destroying private property."

"If America is to be prosperous, there are two problems that must be solved," he said. "Agricultural property in the country must be revived, and our steadily increasing taxation must be cut down or it will destroy American industry, reckoned in competition with foreign production."

EARLE'S LETTERS IN REPLY TO GIRL ARE READ IN COURT

(Associated Press Special Wire)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 10.—Reading of the first of three depositions made by Ferdinand Phineas Earle, artist, denying charges of breach of pre-nuptial contract in a $30,000 damage suit brought against him by Dolores Salazar, dancer, was begun in trial of the case in superior court Saturday following the reading of the first deposition yesterday.

Regarding their alleged love affair, Earle said, "She (Miss Salazar) fell into my lap like a ripe peach." Shortly afterward, reading of the depositions was halted and attorneys successfully appealed to the court to excuse the jury after the reading of the first deposition to permit the lawyers an opportunity to peruse the remaining statements.

Earle, who is living in Paris with his fifth wife, is accused by the 25-year-old dancer of marrying her in a mock ceremony and promising to place $15,000 in trust for her. She claimed she never received the money.
