OLIVER Tillage Tools

Why not plow for profit? Plowing is a pre-requisite to successful farming. The forward looking farmer is the man who carefully considers the advantage of one type of equipment over other types in the same field, who considers the necessities of his land and who buys equipment that will best serve the purpose for which it is bought.

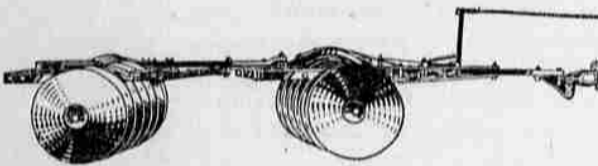

Conservation of soil fertility, control of fungus and weed pests are two vitally important farm problems. Clean plowing of stubble fields as soon as the grain is harvested is sure death to the annual weeds due to the fact that the plow turns all of the surface vegetation to the bottom of the furrow and leaves none protruding up through the furrow slice.

If plowing must be done, why not do it scientifically with a plow base that is adapted for your particular kind of soil.

ABOVE LEFT is shown a cut of the Oliver Corn Cultivator. With the new pedal guide construction it was possible to make an extremely simple cultivator using fewer and stronger parts. Strength to spare, and in addition, operation could not be made easier, so small is the effort necessary to shift the gangs or to make field adjustments. Perfect balance under all conditions adds to the ease of handling.

Oliver features the new three-bottom tractor plow shown at the left. This efficient tool will help your tractor pay for itself in an amazingly short time.

FAMOUS OLIVER OFF-SET DISC is the most admired of the new tillage tools. Turns to right or left with equal ease. Will cultivate easily in fence corners or beneath overhanging trees. The off-set feature does it.
