How sweet to live to true a life That after fifty years of strife A man can say like Charlie Schwab "I am contented with the job!"

"The only men with generous heart, Who hold good will the noblest art, Can truly say, at sixty-eight, My friends have been my richest fate."

Charles Schwab came up from out the crowd; He knows the men whom toil has bowed, Has climbed the ladder rung by rung— Unfailing kindness on his tongue; He's gathered friends on every side, And now they are his greatest pride; He has not lived for just himself— Has never lost a friend for pelf.

Charles Schwab, with his creative brain, Has lived above mere lust for gain; While conquering by his force of will, Has never lost the heart to thrill To every call of human need; With sentient ears to hear and heed He stands among our famed, elect, Whom men of every class respect.

Schwab's story is a hero tale With lessons all along the trail; He's gathered millions by the way, But now when he is growing gray— Comes closer to the journey's end— His richest treasure is a friend, And lo, he has a wondrous host! How few who could so many boast!

POEM FOR THE DAY

By LOUIS ALBERT BANKS

MAKING FRIENDS MAN'S GREATEST ACHIEVEMENT

After a business career of 50 years, Charles M. Schwab, on the occasion of his sixty-eighth birthday on Feb. 18, said he planned to retire from all business activities except those in connection with the Bethlehem Steel company. Mr. Schwab is chairman of the Bethlehem board.

"I am retiring from all business enterprises except the Bethlehem Steel company, with which, being my child, as it were, I shall always continue my connections," Mr. Schwab said. "Looking back through the years, I will say that I had my life to live over again, there has been nothing to it that I would wish to change."

"To me now friends are more important than this so-called business success, and it is very gratifying for me to finish my long business life with the multitude of friends that I have all over the country."—A news story of Feb. 18, 1930.
