ROSEBURG, OREGON, MONDAY, APRIL 7, 1930.

1930 FISHING LICENSES A YEAR

THE following is a news story from a recent issue of the Portland Oregonian, quoted in full:

A group of city employees of Pasadena, Cal., has written to H. H. Clifford, state game warden, asking for information concerning Diamond lake and its features as a summer resort. This letter, which was received yesterday, indicates that the party will spend a vacation period on the lake.

More than 90 per cent of the summer residents of the lake are California tourists, Mr. Clifford said, and the state warden stationed there sell about 1000 non-resident fishing licenses a year to these tourists.

Read that last sentence again: "Wardens stationed there sell about 1000 non-resident fishing licenses a year to these tourists." Throughout the entire summer there are nearly as many people in the Diamond lake settlement as in the city of Roseburg. Those people, although much nearer to this point if the road were completed, are provided with food which is hauled in by truck from Klamath Falls or Medford. Furthermore their cars all go and come that way too. If we had a road completed so that cars could be driven from and to Diamond lake through the Umpqua valley, not only would tourist business through the valley be nearly doubled but we would have another city almost equal to Roseburg in size as a market for farm products.

Taking the Census

THE present urge is for speed in taking the census and a few small cities already have announced triumphantly that their counts have been completed. A little later loud outcries will be heard on the ground that there has been too much speed and that thoroughness has been sacrificed to it. From ambitious towns in the boom belts demands will go up for recounts and some of them, if events go true to precedent, will be granted.

In the decade that elapses between census counts people generally forget the poignancy of disappointment that comes to ambitious cities where the actual tallying of noses does not bear out fully the estimates of the chamber of commerce and the booster clubs otherwise they would not now be crying for speed. But such disappointments have made themselves stridently vocal in every census year back through more than half a century, if not actually to the days of 1790 when the first national census was taken by the United States marshals of the land.

Young and ambitious cities commonly insist that when the census taker counts noses he shall count all noses. Some have not scrupled also to demand that a numerical method based somewhat on the order of the baker's dozen, but a little more so, be employed. There is recalled one census taken down in Portland when, following completion of the first count, there arose hearty and general denunciation of the census taker as one who must be blinder than a baseball umpire. His sins of omission, it was charged, were terrible. A recount was demanded and ordered. When it was made the enumerators became appressed for the first time of the presence in the homes of many of the first families of an astonishing number of butlers, coachmen, parlor maids, etc., each fully documented and unaccounted, according to the information handed to the enumerator at the front doors. That was only one of the measures resorted to by the resourceful citizens. The recount gave Portland quite a substantial addition to its original count but, even the revised total figure fell somewhat short of Seattle's and that, of course, was a very rasping circumstance.

The census enterprise has grown since that far day in 1790 when the marshals took the first one. There were 17 of the marshals then for the whole United States and they employed some 600 assistants and expended on the whole enterprise about $45,000. This year the cost of the census will be $100,000,000 and more than 100,000 enumerators are being employed. In 1790 the nation's total population was below 4,000,000. Best estimates for this year place it around 125,000,000. It will be observed that we have grown. And not only that but we are still growing. In the United States of today there is a birth every 13 seconds and the net gain between arriving and departing foreigners is one for every 23 seconds. There is still room, however, to swing a cat by the tail in many a far flung county of the good old U. S. A., including some in Oregon.

An inquirer wants to know whether the answering of all questions asked by the census enumerator is compulsory. It certainly is, including that bete noir of the eternal feminine, the inquiry concerning the year of her birth. The law provides that any persons who shall "refuse or wilfully neglect" to answer any question on the enumerators' list shall be subject to $100 fine or 60 days' imprisonment or both. And those who give false answers are subject to $500 fine and a year's imprisonment. But though mildy may tell her true age in order to make certain she will not be thrown in jail, she need have no fear that the information is going to be spilled to her neighbor. The census enumerator is forbidden by law to tell what he hears in his official capacity except in his reports to his superiors. That makes things better than they otherwise might be.

Oregon Editors' Opinions

A Reversal
(Cottage Grove Sentinel)
Fall, who took the money is guilty, but Doherty, who gave the money, is not guilty. That is a reversal of liquor enforcement procedure in which the one who does the delivering is guilty.

For Another Landslide
(Junction City Times)
The Times hopes that the Literary Digest poll on the liquor question shows such an overwhelming majority in favor of repeal of the eighteenth amendment that a referendum vote will be ordered. We believe another landslide in favor of prohibition, such as was indicated by the election of Hoover, would settle the matter for quite a while. But even should the vote be for repeal a few years' experience with the conditions which existed in the old saloon days would soon bring about the enactment of a law which would be more stringent than the present laws.

HERBERT WILLIAMS RITES ON SUNDAY

The funeral of Herbert Williams, of Roseburg, was held Sunday afternoon at the Roseburg Undertaking company chapel, which was crowded with relatives and friends. The flowers were many and beautiful. Rev. Charles A. Edwards, of the Roseburg Methodist church, conducted the service and the music was furnished by a quartet. Interment took place in the City View cemetery near Ballard. Mr. E. H. Hoyer was in charge of funeral arrangements.

STIMMEL FUNERAL DATED TOMORROW

Funeral services for the late Thomas J. Stimmel, who has been a resident of Roseburg for the last 12 years, will be held in the Chapel of the Douglas Funeral home, Tuesday at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. Fish of the Advent church, will conduct the service. Funeral arrangements are in charge of H. C. Stearns.

Talks on Health

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

ONE can scarcely pick up a newspaper nowadays without seeing the account of some fatality from carbon monoxide gas.

Only recently a man in Cleveland lighted the gas burner under a hot water heater in the kitchen of his apartment, and also the three burners of the gas range. While standing in another room he suddenly felt ill, and realizing the gas was escaping, ran to turn it off. He neglected to turn off the burner under the hot water heater. At this point he was entirely overcome and sank to the floor, but at just that moment a neighbor luckily appeared, and saved his life.

You perhaps read of the cook who put something on the gas stove to boil, and then proceeded to lie down and go to sleep. The water boiled over, put out the gas flame, and the whole family was asphyxiated by carbon monoxide. There are hundreds of such cases, and what is to be done about it?

The very fact that carbon monoxide gas has neither odor nor taste makes it a real menace to public health. Disaster comes without warning.

The manufactured gas for heating and cooking used in almost every city where natural gas is not available contains as much as 20 per cent of carbon monoxide. Natural gas contains a negligible amount of it. Illuminating gas contains much of it.

The hazards from this poisonous gas are not alone in the boiling over of the family coffee pot. There is danger from the furnace closed too tightly, in any leakage of a valve of the gas range or from the hot water heater. There is a menace, too, in the closed garage with the motor running, and on the congested city streets where so much traffic lies.

Civilization has brought these new methods of heating and lighting and motive power. With it has come new dangers to public health. The danger from carbon monoxide is very great.

In spite of repeated warnings, some persons will persist, without thinking, in starting the motor of an automobile running in the garage with windows and doors shut tight. Without realizing the deadly menace in the escaping carbon monoxide gas, they are overcome and expire. It is a serious thing when there is a leakage or break in your gas range. If you have one of the old-fashioned flexible tubes to a gas heater you should make sure there is no escaping of gas from it. See that your water heater is in good condition.

Pointers of the air from the exhaust of automobiles on congested city streets is a problem hard to control. We hope it will soon be solved by the automobile and gas manufacturers themselves. Already there are under way experiments on certain devices to lessen the trouble.

In cases of carbon monoxide poisoning there are certain things that must be done for the victim. A doctor should be called at once. Prevention is ever better than the cure. We can give warnings of the danger, but the public must take heed of the fact that careless use of these agents may result in ill health and even death.

Answers to Health Queries

A. R. Q.—How can piles be cured?

A.—Constipation must be cleared up first and an operation is sometimes necessary.

A. C. R. Q.—Is it good to eat oranges every day?

A.—Yes.

S. C. S. Q.—How can I reduce?

A.—Weight reduction is chiefly a matter of self-control as regards diet. Eat very sparingly of starches, sugars and fats.

C. F. Q.—What will cure hay fever?

A.—Consult your doctor for treatment.

S. E. E. Q.—What causes poor circulation?

A.—Run down state of health. Build up your general health and your circulation will improve.

E. O. Q.—What do you advise for dizziness?

A.—This may be due to a circulation disturbance, to an eye or ear condition, or to some intestinal disturbance. An examination will determine the exact cause and then definite treatments can be prescribed.

A. H. Q.—Would nose and throat trouble, also an inactive liver, cause mental trouble?

A.—No.

E. M. G. Q.—What would clear up blackheads and pimples?

A.—Correct your diet and avoid constipation.

OREGON CAVES TO BE IMPROVED AT COST OF $35,000

(Associated Press United Wire)

PORTLAND, April 7.—The Oregon caves in the Grants Pass district, are to be given a thorough scrubbing to remove the soot that has accumulated through use of the torch as a light for explorations. And then, with the fairyland passages resplendent once more, electric lights will be strung and the blackening torch will be a thing of the past.

John D. Guthrie, assistant district forester, outlined the program that will restore one of Oregon's wonders to its former beauty. Congress has allotted $35,000 for this work.

A power line is to be installed throughout the caves and lights will be suspended from the cable. Water will be piped into the caves and hose lines will be used to wash down the blackened walls.

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

Is it right for a girl to have five or six different boys call on her? Her parents have no special objection. But do you think that she should limit her callers to one or two. She also goes out with various ones occasionally. She is in her early teens. Is this all right?

KAY.

KAY: Of course, an attractive girl cannot help it if she attracts a host of admirers. And if her parents have no objection to a number of young men calling on her there is nothing more to be said. And I suppose, like every other girl, she will ultimately discover there is one whose company is to be preferred beyond the others, and then the visits of the others will automatically cease. But it seems to me it would not do this young lady a bit of harm if she went out with other girls' friends also and invited them to her house once in a while. What do you think?

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl in my early teens and very fond of a boy two years my senior and would like to know if a boy will think more of a girl who shows she cares for him or holds him at a distance. For I would like very much to have his friendship.

PEGGIE.

PEGGIE: A boy will think more of a girl who is bright, pleasant, cheerful, interested in his hobbies and ambition. And this is generally the kind of girl who makes a boy treat her with respect, because she has self-respect and keeps him at the proper distance.

Be issued if a foreign state can reimburse less than ten days, and it has been estimated that approximately 140,000 non-resident cars were checked through our border crossing stations and an additional 39,000 more came into the state over routes on which stations are not maintained.

According to this estimate, 179,000 cars from other states entered California in 1929.

OUR own Secretary Ross says:

"During the year 1929, registry bureaus throughout the state reported 102,908 motor vehicles from other states. I estimate that only 60 per cent of the visitors of the state register with our bureaus, which would mean that some 165,000 cars entered Oregon from other states during the year."

SO, TAKING these two estimates and putting them side by side, you see that 170,000 automobiles entered California from other states last year, while 165,000 automobiles from other states entered Oregon.

Not such a bad comparison, is it?

HERE is another fact that is interesting:

Of the 102,908 registered cars entering Oregon from other states, 61,194 were from California. Of the 90,893 registered cars entering California from other states, only 9,600 were from Oregon.

In the matter of tourist exchange, we have all the better of the bargain, for we get from California more than six cars for each car that we send to her in return.

It is thus apparent that we have everything to gain and nothing to

GOOD-NIGHT STORIES

"Those who go Without their dinner Always grow A great deal thinner." —Shadow Sayings.

It doesn't pay to become too friendly with cannibals, even though they have good manners. Snicker or later you're bound to get into trouble. At least that's what Mij, Flor, Hanid, Yam and Knarf—the five little shadow-children with the turned-about names—discovered.

The cannibal's name was Google. He had a large head of bushy black hair, wide eyes, huge mouth with two rows of shining white teeth, and a wide stomach, across which he always kept his hands folded. He pretended to be a real cannibal, but the shadows didn't believe him. Indeed, they were right, for in reality he was nothing but a perfume bottle.

Yes, my dears, a perfume bottle! His head was the cork and the rest of him was the bottle of perfume. When he was full he belonged to sister, but now, being empty, he had become the property of the children and was kept in the nursery.

The other night, after everyone was asleep, the shadows found him standing in front of the doll

HAWKS COMPLETES FLIGHT IN GLIDER

(News-Review Douglas County Special)

NEW YORK, April 7.—Captain Frank M. Hawks, holder of the east and west transcontinental speed record, enjoyed the added distinction today of being the first aviator to pilot a glider from coast to coast.

Arriving exactly on schedule, he set his small red motorless plane "Eagle" down in Van Cortlandt park yesterday to complete a flight from San Diego, Calif. Towed at the end of a 500-foot cable behind a power plane, he made the transcontinental trip in six and one-half days with 36 hours of actual flying time.

Hawks explained that his glider was not actually towed on the flight but that he kept the cable slack as much of the time as possible and flew all over the state, the strain on its wings. He displayed his blistered hands to show that it had been work.

RIDDLE WOMAN WINS SLOGAN PRIZE

Mrs. T. J. Butler of Riddle has been announced as winner of third place in the slogan contest conducted by the Oregon Buttermakers' association. Entries were attracted from all over the state, and the winners were announced today by Dr. G. Whiter of Oregon State college, secretary of the association. First prize went to Miss V. Dunbar, Portland high school girl. Her slogan was "Let butter be the only spread for your buttered daily bread."

Second prize went to Paul H. Lohr of Corvallis with the slogan, "No better tomorrow eat today."

Mrs. Butler's slogan, which took third place, was "Health for wealth, butter for health." Mrs. Butler won a prize of $5 for her entry.

SENIOR HI GRADS TO STAGE COMEDY

The annual senior class play to be given by the graduates of Roseburg senior high school will be held Friday, May 9, it was announced today. The seniors have selected the play, "Daddies," by John L. Hobbs, a four-act comedy, for presentation.

This play deals with a bachelor's club, in which the members have sworn to refrain from marriage upon penalty of dismissal from the club. During the course of the play each member adopts a war orphan. One member accidentally adopts triplets and another twins. Naturally when a group of bachelors attempt to take the place of mothers plenty of comedy is bound to happen, and the play is replete with humor from start to finish.

The cast is made up of fifteen students, who have started rehearsals under the direction of Miss Kate Buchanan.

Lenten Devotions

By Rev. Alexander Muirhead

First Presbyterian Church

"Father forgive them for they know not what they do."

—Luke 23:34.

THE NEVER FAILING FRIEND

As we continue our Lenten meditations, I trust the brief messages I am privileged to give, may come to the attention of some individuals who may have wandered away from the church and the God of their fathers. It is so easy to wander. I do not believe men deliberately make a choice of evil, and turn their backs upon God. It is true that some make this their choice, but the great majority separate themselves gradually.

Have you ever noticed the shepherd gather his sheep together at the evening hour, and close them in the fold or corral, to protect them from the wild animals that prowl around in the darkness of night. When they are released in the morning, the grass tastes sweet with the morning dew upon it. With their heads close to the ground, the band of sheep gradually spread out and go on and on, step by step, until some may have wandered far astray from the rest of the flock. So absorbed were they in their task, that they "nibbled themselves away" from the others. And folks just like that, with their heads close down to the daily routine of life, they become so absorbed in their various tasks, that in a brief space of time, yes, almost unconsciously, they possibly how God and His church out of their life; "they have nibbled themselves away" from the God and church of their fathers.

But the never failing friend, the Good Shepherd, has not left you, but is anxious to have you return to the fold. He loved even those who nibbled Him to the cross, and prayed His Father to forgive them; how much more does He love you? Would you have a happy Easter? Travel with me daily in these meditations and with a quiet, yet firm determination, resolve in your heart to walk with Him.

"I was a wandering sheep, I did not love the fold; I did not love my Shepherd's voice; I would not be controlled. I was a wayward child, I did not love my home; I did not love my Father's voice, I loved afar to roam."

I was a wandering sheep, I would not be controlled; But now I love my Shepherd's voice; I love, I love the fold. I was a wayward child, I once preferred to roam; But now I love my Father's voice; I love, I love His home."

FIELDS, CARNER, DUNDEE BILLED FOR BOUTS TOMORROW

NEW YORK, April 7.—Jackie Fields, Los Angeles, holder of the world's welterweight championship, is scheduled for a 13-round non-title bout at Cleveland tomorrow night against Tommy Freeman of Erie, Pa. Freeman has a record impressive rather for its length than the calibre of his opponents although draws with Gorilla Jones and Andy Divoli are on his 1929 list. In 95 battles listed, he has scored 36 knockouts and has been knocked out but once and then by the current champion, Joe Dundee.

Dundee, who lost the title to Fields, appears at Rochester, N. Y., tomorrow against Bucky Lawless of Syracuse in a ten rounder.

Primo Carnera of Italy takes his huge frame to Los Angeles tomorrow night, seeking his fourteenth successive knockout. His opponent, Neil Clabey, Riverside, Cal., must win to compete in the usual 60 or 70 pounds to the ambling alp. He weighs an even 200 pounds. Like most of Carnera's opponents in his "fango hitting" tour, Clabey has no important triumphs on his record.

PORTLAND DISPUTE UP TO ARBITRATION

(Associated Press United Wire)

PORTLAND, April 7.—The question of increased wages for street car employees in Portland will be submitted to board of arbitration. Representatives of the union and the Pacific Northwest Public Service company, operators of Portland's street railway system, will sign the articles of arbitration today. Each side will then have five days in which to select a representative. Those two men will then select a third within 15 days.

The vote to submit to arbitration was reached by the union at a meeting Sunday. The Portland Electric Power company had promised the street car men an increase in event the 10-cent fare went into effect.
