BRINGING UP FATHER

POEM FOR THE DAY

By LOUIS ALBERT BANKS

THE THIRST FOR KNOWLEDGE

The man with whom I was talking had been a teacher for the past seventeen years in one of our first universities, and yet he had never "been to college" in the accepted sense. Only by courtesy is he known as "Doctor." Last September, when he took office as Dean of the Johns Hopkins College of Arts and Sciences, he became known at once as the "degreeless Dean." Perhaps he is the only one of his kind in or out of captivity.

"In making a dean out of an uneducated man," said Dean Edward Wilber Berry, smiling, most people feel that Hopkins took a very radical step. The fact is, however, that education does not stop with the end of schooling. After all, it isn't what we learn at an institution that is of value to us; it is the attitude of mind we acquire.

"When a boy takes up his life work after finishing grade school or high school, and succeeds, we commonly speak of him as a 'self-made' man. But the college graduates who succeed in the true sense of the word are also self-made. More or less, he prepares himself in school, but makes himself after he is graduated.

The moment he is beyond college walls, he comes to use books and helps that do not feed him, and learns upon those that do."

In 1890, young Berry finished his formal schooling when he was graduated from the Polytechnic, New Jersey, high school. —M. K. Wheelwright in the American, Feb. 1929.

The man who has the thirst to know, Has found the secret how to grow; He takes fair wisdom for his bride, Is always happy at her side. John Hopkins' brave "degreeless Dean" Has learned the secret how to glean; Has found the way to nature's heart, And traced the graces of her art.

The man whose thirst is strong enough, Will never find the way too rough. Like Berry's fossils in the clay, The thirsty mind will find a way To gather knowledge—new and old— Will overcome the thirst for gold; And all the odds that block the road Will only prove, for him, a goad.

Dean Berry is example high Of men whose souls are in the sky. Their feet may walk on common earth, But with the Titans they hold mirth. What use has he for high degrees Who learns earth's secrets on his knees? He's caught the scholar's attitude— Knows how to think, and how to brood.

'Tis good to see a man like this— Who reveals in fair Wisdom's bliss; Who has the grit to take the pains Until his genius holds the reins; Who's climbed the ladder, rung by rung, And kept a wise and humble tongue. He seems a kinsman, very near, Whom all our souls awake to cheer.
