Advantages of Rural Life

T HAVE employment or conduct a business in the city it was necessary formerly to live in the city. Now paved roads and automobiles make it perfectly feasible to live within a radius of 20 to 30 miles of the city and conduct daily activities there. To have amusements one had to live in town. Now the radio brings amusement into homes however remote and the nearer rural dwellers readily drive into town for an evening's entertainment and home again afterwards. Electricity and gas are being more and more made accessible to the rural districts adjacent to cities and in some cases far from cities. Town high schools are accessible to rural students. In short, the conveniences that city dwellers enjoy and that may not also be enjoyed by rural dwellers not too remote have become few.

In casting about for reasons for the disappointment that some cities are experiencing from their census returns just now it is likely the foregoing facts will be found to cut a figure. If it is true that there is a trend cityward from the remote farms it is likely to be found true also that there is a trend from cities to the not so remote rural areas. If so it is a sensible and a healthy trend. It is a trend of which there is further evidence in the recently reported increased demand for farm property, and particularly for small farms, in the interurban areas.

Those who can live within easy reach of the city; having city conveniences and city opportunities and yet enjoying the lower taxes, greater freedom of movement and environment and peculiar charms of rural life are fortunate.

The trial of Emory Davis and E. H. Bent, arrested in the national forest, has been postponed. No doubt those fellows are enraged at this delay which prevents them from getting back to their haunts in the forest. So, this does not assume that they will be released. Judging from past experiences they will be back when and after they have served what time demanded of them by the federal court.

Farm board executives gave a business man's answer to a farmer's problem. Farmers were told to curtail the production of wheat. Suppose you were a wheat farmer, owned land fit for growing practically nothing else, and they told you to leave a portion of your land unworked. That would not sound like farm relief to you would it?

Due to a combination of circumstances which could not be gotten around, the committee in charge of the strawberry carnival has disbanded. There will be no carnival this year. Perhaps a fall harvest festival will be projected instead.

As Dr. Houck pointed out to the Kiwanis club yesterday, why should we be disturbed about the fact that there are no more people in Roseburg now than ten years ago when the bank deposits here total fifty percent more?

If all local business people were more than six feet tall, the savings would probably be raised high enough so that they would not knock the hat off of a reasonably tall man.

Oregon Editors' Opinions

(Oregon City Enterprise)
Despite the various claims of managers, and promulgations that are quite uncertain, now that that puts a degree of credence in the claim that Corbett is gaining the fact that the Voter and Spectator agree on that point. Summing up an article, the Spectator has this to say: "Frankly, the Spectator believes that Harry Corbett has made the biggest gains in the last fortnight. Aside from the fine friendly feeling shown toward him in the interior, there is a growing sentiment in the community that a conservative and well-polished business man could best represent the people's new aspirations and ambitions for a bigger and more prosperous Oregon." When the Spectator and Oregon Voter agree, there can be no reasonable doubt the question agreed upon is indisputable.

Obvious Lack of Need
(Weston Leader)
According to the platform of a Texas candidate for United States senator, "the government should give every poor man a cow." But what's the use, when the established practice is to milk the government?

The Sunday Divorce

(Corvallis Gazette-Times)
Mrs. Billy Sunday, Jr., has secured a divorce from Billy after making a fool of herself for the past two years trying to bluff him through his paw by giving their matrimonial difficulties a lot of publicity. She could just as well have secured her divorce two years ago, saved young Billy from trying to drink himself to death, in an effort to drown his troubles.

Not Worth the Ride

(Bend Bulletin)
Scientists are reported to have discovered that gasoline can be made from straw, but announcement of the discovery, which will doubtless be hailed as one of the most important of the age, leaves us distinctly cold. We just can't work up any enthusiasm over the idea of stepping out and mowing the lawn every time we want to go motoring.

There to Stay

(Coos Bay Harbor)
Portland newspapers frequently made reference to "rumors" of withdrawal on the part of certain republican candidates for governor. Senator Hall, who spent Sunday at his home in Marshfield, declared he was at a loss to understand why anyone should assume for a minute he had ever considered withdrawing. "I am in the race to win and from every possible source comes information most assuring," Senator Hall stated. "Just say for me that the rumors published by the Portland press are unfounded as far as I am concerned."

ELKS-VIKING CAR DUE HERE FRIDAY

One of the cars of the official Elks-Viking prosperity fleet is scheduled to arrive here Friday, thus completing another leg of its transcontinental journey from the far west to the Elks grand lodge convention at Atlantic City, New Jersey. All four cars of this fleet are due to arrive in the Jersey coast town Sunday, July 6, the day previous to the opening of the convention.

From rear light to radiator, the car is painted with the official purple and white of the Order of Elks and is piloted by a member of the order, who is drawn from the advertising staff of the Elks Magazine, sponsors of the property tour.

On their transcontinental journey the cars of this fleet are scheduled to visit some four hundred and fifteen Elks clubs and they will travel more than eighteen thousand miles to do this.

ARCHERS TO VIE IN ROSEBURG SATURDAY

Between forty and fifty archers from all parts of the state will meet in Roseburg Saturday for the first invitational archery match of the season, according to Earl Ulrich, local bowyer, who is handling the details of the contest.

Shooting will start at 9 o'clock at the government target range in North Roseburg and will continue throughout the day until the several events are shot off.

Among the archers who will participate, Mr. Ulrich reports, are Dr. George Cathey, Portland, men's national flight champion; Mrs. Homer Prouty, Portland, women's national flight champion; L. L. Daily, Monmouth, men's state flight champion; Henry Burr, Coquille, men's state target champion; Mrs. Pernia Harris, Coquille, women's state target champion.

BRIDGE-500 PARTY NEXT TUESDAY AT PARISH HALL

Plans have been completed for a bridge and five hundred party to be given on Tuesday evening, May 6, by the Catholic ladies at the parish hall, on Canal street.

Mrs. T. H. Neal, chairman of the committee in charge, announces that a very interesting and entertaining affair is being planned.

There will be an attendance prize as well as the regular prizes. This is a monthly affair that is very much enjoyed by those participating.

Talks on Health

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

WE are living today in an age of great activity. It is necessary that we have the proper food to keep the body in good condition. We must have it to enable our hearts and muscles to do their work.

One hears much about a balanced diet. How many are there who know what this means? Even if they do realize its importance, there are too many, either deliberately or without intent, who go merrily on their way. They eat wrongly and in consequence suffer the penalties of broken health.

Every housewife must feel the responsibility of choosing the right food to keep her family physically fit. There are certain simple rules to follow. It requires the application of a little intelligence, of course, but it will pay in the long run to put thought and care into the selection of the right things to eat.

The important foods which produce energy and repair body waste are divided into three general classes—protein, carbohydrates and fats. A balanced diet calls for these food elements in the following proportions:

One part of protein made up of the flesh foods, like meats, eggs and the dairy products. These are for building and repairing the muscles and framework of the body.

Three parts of fats, such as are found in butter, cream, oils and cooking fats, oily nuts and fat meats. These furnish energy and build up the body. They give flexibility to the joints and the muscles.

Six parts of carbohydrates, made up of sugars and starches, such as potatoes, cereals, breads, sugars and other sweets. These furnish heat and energy.

There are other foods, also, that are needed to provide the mineral salts. These elements go to make the teeth, bones and other tissues of the body. The foods must contain roughage and a sufficient vitamin content to protect the body from disease.

Meals are not necessarily well balanced even when they contain all of each class of foods, for much depends upon the proportions used. Do not use too many

WILLIAM S. VERITY, who was advised 75 years ago by Horace Greeley to "Go West," is dead. He took the great editor's advice and went to Chicago, which was then the wild and woolly West.

Chicago, except for the provincial-minded New Yorker, is no longer the West, but it is still wild. One wonders how Mr. Verity lived to the ripe old age of 97 without running into a gangster barrage.

BUT here is the interesting part of that story: Verity was in love, and he HAD TUBERCULOSIS. The normal thing for him to do, according to the standards of those times, was to curl up and die.

But he didn't. He married, and then turned in to FIGHT OFF the white plague. He was such a good fighter that he lived to be nearly a centenarian.

IF you are still young, AND HAVE ANY STSSE, there is every reason in the world why you, too, should live to a ripe old age. It is all a question of taking care of yourself, of living up to a few simple rules.

If you will start doing that while you are still young, you can twiddle your fingers and laugh scornfully, time times out of town, at old age.

It will hold no terrors for you.

MISS KNIGHT THIRD IN TYPING CONTEST

Miss Marjorie Knight, senior at the local senior high school, won third place in the contest for accuracy in the eighth Oregon state typing contest held Saturday, April 24, at Coquille under the auspices of Oregon State college.

Miss Evelyn Halfburton, of The Dalles, won the gold medal for accuracy with a record of 62.64 words per minute with no errors. Miss Emily H. Paris, of the Grant high school in Portland placed second with 60 words per minute and one error. Miss Knight's record was 62 words per minute and two errors.

EBONY SERENADERS HAVE RETURN DATE

Empqua Park dance hall management announces that the Ebony Serenaders, popular Negro orchestra, composed entirely of colored musicians, will return to this city Saturday night for another dance at Empqua Park. The band has been playing in Eugene, Corvallis and Salem this week. Local people have shown much appreciation of the new dance music the orchestra has played during its three engagements here.

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl in my late teens. For three months I have been going steadily with two boys.

One, one night, the other the next. I have suddenly realized that I love one of them. Please advise. I care too much for the other to hurt his feelings.

WAITING: Are your affections reciprocated by the young man whom you so admire? Before you show your preference for his company, you should be very sure, or else you may lose both of your friends. The other one will soon become aware of your choice, and if you are tactful about things, you will have the consolation of knowing that it is circumstances and not you personally, that have caused him any unhappiness.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I'm badly in need of your advice. I'm a sixteen-year-old girl and like to go to parties and out with friends at night, but my parents do not approve of my going to places at night; they do not seem to trust me. I'm not even allowed to have boy friends.

Please tell me how I can make them trust me. There is no reason why they should not, they act as if they never want me to have a good time, they want me to stay at home all the time.

UNTRUSTED: Do not think that your parents mistrust you, my dear, simply because they will not permit you to do the things you would like to do. It would seem that they just think that you are still too young for parties, boy friends and dates. As you grow older and gain understanding, you will be grateful for their good care of you.

SARPOLIS HOLDS LEWIS TO A DRAW

(Associated Press Leased Wire)
TACOMA, April 30.—Dr. Karl Sarpolis, Cleveland middleweight, held Ed (Strangler) Lewis, former heavyweight wrestling champion, to a draw here last night after eight rounds. Each won a fall, Lewis taking the first in the second round with a series of headlocks, while Sarpolis took a fall in the final round with his flying scissors.

Ted Thye, Portland, won over Kara Pasha of Turkey in the five round semi-final, while Des Anderson, Salem, Ore., defeated Billy Coggins, Tacoma, in the three-round curtain raiser.

GOOD-NIGHT STORIES

By Max Trel

"An octopus is not like us. And is even less like an omnibus."—Shadow Sayings.

Mij, Flor, Hanid, Yam and Knarf—the five little shadow children—were caught in the arms of an octopus!

It had all come about in a strange manner. In search of adventure they had gone out in the middle of the night (while their masters and mistresses were asleep) to pay a visit to King Neptune, whom you should know is king of the ocean. In two twinkles of an eye they came to the ocean and sprang right in, for they weren't in the least afraid of drowning. This was because they instantly changed into water reflections, as all shadows do when they are under water.

It wasn't so easy finding King Neptune as they thought. For one thing they hadn't his address, and for another thing they couldn't find a policeman to ask questions of. By and by they met a turtle who took them on its back to a grove which looked as though it might be King Neptune's underwater castle. To their dismay, however, they were seized in the long arms of a giant octopus.

"Let us go, let us go!" they cried. "It wasn't at all pleasant to be caught by an octopus, especially when you are in the middle of the ocean."

"What are you doing in my house?" the octopus asked. "We're looking for King Neptune," replied Hanid. "Please let us down."

"Who is King Neptune?" it said, setting them down. "I never heard of him."

"Why, he's the king of the ocean," Mij said. "But the octopus didn't know him. At this moment a group of fishes swam into the grotto and the octopus asked them whether they had ever heard of King Neptune, the king of the ocean. They shook their heads. No, they had never heard of him either, though they had heard of Mr. Whale, who was big enough to be a king."

"No," King Neptune isn't a whale," said Knarf. "He's like a man except that he has long green seaweed hair and is always surrounded by his daughters the mermaids." Knarf knew very well for he had seen a picture of him in a book his master was reading.

"And he always carries a pitchfork with three prongs called a trident," added Hanid.

It did no good. They simply did not know King Neptune, nor any one that looked like him.

"Maybe he lives in some other ocean," Mij said at last.

The others agreed that this might be so, but didn't know how they could get there, since oceans are large and shadows are small. At length the octopus made a suggestion: "I've got long arms. I'll put each one of you in a different ocean. Then you can search for King Neptune yourself."

The shadows, however, didn't want to be parted. They said: "Take us all together and put us in one ocean." Flor said:

"To us as up and we'll stay in the one we come down in," said Knarf. "Oh, no, don't lose us up! Something is sure to happen!" the others protested. It was too late. The octopus had already tossed them up. Instead of falling in one of the oceans, they were tossed clear out of the water and fell down the chimney of their own house, right onto the library table where there was a book showing a picture of King Neptune and all his daughters, the mermaids.

"We've found them, anyway!" Knarf declared.

Hanid, who was a clever little shadow-girl, nodded. "Maybe King Neptune doesn't live in the ocean at all, but only inside story books," she said. And the others couldn't help thinking that she was right.

WORLD'S GLIDER RECORD BROKEN

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 30.—Jack Barstow, young first class glider pilot, flying a Bowler sailplane, landed at Point Loma this morning, ending a flight of 15 hours and 12 minutes duration, and unofficially establishing a new world's record for sustained flight.

TULSA, Okla., April 29.—Frank Goldsborough, 19, seeking to establish a new junior transcontinental airplane flight record between New York and Los Angeles, took off for El Paso, Tex., today. He is the son of Price Goldsborough, who perished two years ago in an attempted trans-Atlantic flight sponsored by Mrs. Frances Grayson.

EIGHT NEW FORDS DELIVERED ONE DAY

According to a statement from the Lockwood Motor company, of this city, Ford cars are in greater demand than ever before, and the factory is turning out approximately 9000 automobiles daily. This is more cars each day than were built at this time of the year in 1929. Local demand for the 1930 models, which are universally admitted to be pretty much all that can be desired in a car of less than $1000 value, are excellent. It was said by Fred Lockwood this morning, last Saturday was the record day for sales since the beginning of the year, and eight new Fords were delivered to purchasers, six of them going to owners in this county, while two were bought by Eugene parties. In addition to this volume of business on Saturday several used cars were also sold to parties here. The deliveries of new cars to purchasers Saturday were made to J. C. Livingston, Glendale; Thomas Ireland, Myrtle Creek; Robert Tjomsland, Medford; C. E. Hapstetter, and Glen Coffey, both of Roseburg; Bertha Blundell, Riddle; Chas. Cordon and J. O. Davis, both of Eugene.

NORTHWEST FOREST FIRE PERIL GIVES OFFICIALS WORRY

(Associated Press Leased Wire)

PORTLAND, Ore., April 29.—Major John D. Guthrie, assistant Pacific northwest district forester, said today that the seriousness of the forest fire situation in the northwest cannot be exaggerated and predicted that unless an abundance of rain falls within the next month the 1930 season will assume more dangerous proportions than the preceding year.

Guthrie said he had received a report from P. A. Thompson, supervisor of the Colville national forest in northeastern Washington, indicating that conditions now "never looked worse." Thompson said that the streams did not rise, water holes are drying up, grass is poor and "only good spring rains will save us."

From the Hood's canal district of the Olympic national forest Guthrie reported the first fire for the 1930 season. The blaze, which was believed to have been of incendiary origin was subdued but indicated the dryness of the country.

The Olympics, he said, usually are wet enough to offset any serious fire damage.

Guthrie said that complete stocks of fire fighting equipment are being distributed to all ranger stations in all national forests in Oregon, Washington and adjacent states.

GRANTS PASS 4640, ASHLAND 4528, SAYS CENSUS SUPERVISOR

EUGENE, Ore., April 30.—The population of Grants Pass is reported by J. H. Koke, census supervisor, at 4640. In 1920 the population was 4151.

The Lebanon population is now 1845 and in 1920 was 1605.

Other figures announced are: Ashland, Ore., 4528, increase 245 or 5.6 per cent. Jacksonville, Ore., 766; increase 483 or 44 per cent.
