ANTLERS—Today, Saturday, "Applause," all-talking with Helen Morgan.

LIBERTY—Today, Saturday, "The Light of the Western Stars," Zane Grey's novel, starring Richard Arlen, Mary Brian.

By G. C. ARR
It's difficult to review this current Antlers picture, "Applause." To say that it is a picture full of unusual acting isn't saying enough. The acting certainly is unusual and effective, but it's more than that. "Applause," featuring Helen Morgan, is, as it was advertised, a "different" picture.

The story is about a burlesque star and her struggles to keep her daughter from following in her own footsteps and going on the stage. Around this plot is wrapped pathos, comedy and it gives sufficient opportunity for a lot of good acting. How the young daughter, just out of a convent, goes to the city to find her mother dancing in a cheap burlesque house, how the girl fights against odds to keep from the stage and how finally she sacrifices her love and the prospect of a happy marriage to aid her failing mother all go toward the success of the play. Anyone who likes good acting and a dramatic story will like "Applause," which shows again to night and Saturday.

"THE Light of Western Stars" romped into the Liberty theatre last night for its three day run and roped the audience heart and soul with its spectacular outdoor scenes, its heart-throbbing romance, its rollicking humor and its great human thrills.

Richard Arlen has his second western role as Dick Bailey, the ranch foreman, whose swarthy proposal of marriage incurs the hate of Mary Brian. Awakened to real love, he works to offset his first bad impression, saves the girl from the sinister plans of Fred Kohler, and brings everything to a thrilling and happy ending. Miss Brian, playing opposite Arlen, is even better than she was in "The Virginian," and the picture, as a whole, is just as spectacular as was that rousing entertainment.
