Maniac Killer Eludes Metropolitan Police

New York City Sleuths Pose as Petters, but Fail to Trap Fiend Who Has Slain Two and Threatened 14 Other Persons

NEW YORK, June 24. - Two mysterious slayings and written threats to massacre fourteen more victims have terrorized the entire city and sent 1,000 New York detectives dragging the city in the most extensive and frenzied man-hunt in years.

All the searches know of the killer is that he is well educated, a religious fanatic who imagines himself the executioner for an international secret society and seeks his prey from among spooning couples who park their automobiles in lonely sections of Long Island.

His first victim was Joseph Moynihan, College Point, L. I., grocer and father of six children, who was shot to death on a deserted road near Whitestone as he sat in his car talking to nineteen-year-old Catherine May, whom the police allege was his sweetheart.

Miss May's story of the astonishing murder was so fantastic that she was held in $50,000 bail as a material witness. However, when a few nights later Noel Sowley, a wealthy radio mechanic, was killed in identical circumstances near the state insane asylum in Creedmoor, Police Commissioner Mulrooney accepted both crimes as work of the same brain-twisted fanatic.

With Sowley when he was slain was Betty Ring, pretty 17-year-old daughter of a city policeman. Miss Ring's tale of the crime and description of the killer tallied with Miss May's.

As soon as he had time, the homicidal lunatic penned and mailed an almost incoherent letter written in code to the New York Evening Journal. This missive announced the second crime and promised a third killing in College Point at ten o'clock the following evening.

It added that a dozen more murders would follow unless some valuable documents were returned to the international secret society.

Miss Ring told the police that she and Sowley were in his automobile when a shadowy form alighted out of the darkness, and demanded Sowley's license. Before the radio mechanic could answer, the stranger drew a gun and fired two bullets into his head, killing him instantly.

Next at the point of his still smoking gun, he forced the terrified girl to sign her name and address and said he would kill her, too, if she told the police anything about the shooting.

Miss Ring, like Miss May, was then compelled to walk with the slayer for almost a mile, where he put her on a bus. Just before leaving her, the killer asked her to kiss him. Aside from that she said she was not molested.

Both girls furnished the police with excellent descriptions of the murderer.

REGISTRATION OF TOURISTS IS BRISK

Up to the present time registration of tourists in the chamber of commerce office here is as good as that of last year, which means that it is as good as the record year, reports W. C. Harding, secretary.

Last season more than 3600 tourists registered in the local office, Roseburg, being centrally located in the state, does not require a large number of registrations in proportion to these cities nearer the state lines.

Indications are, Mr. Harding states, that at least as many or perhaps more tourists will pass through Roseburg this season than ever before.
