OVER and over, for years, you have been hearing this story: "Prohibition and its enforcement are filling our prisons to overflowing with offenders against the prohibition laws."

HERE is the truth, so far as Oregon is concerned. There are now 901 prisoners in the Oregon state penitentiary, of which FORTY-SEVEN, or less than FIVE PER CENT, are serving terms for infractions of the prohibition laws.

IF you listen at all to the things that are being said around you, here is another story you have heard:

"Prohibition and its enforcement congest our courts, leaving too little time for all the other important business that must come before them for decision."

BEFORE believing that story too implicitly, you should sit through a term of court, drawing your own conclusions from what you SEE FOR YOURSELF, instead of taking them on hearsay.

This writer, who has been doing jury duty for nearly a month, knows by observation that the courts are busy, perhaps even congested, but doesn't believe for a minute that they wouldn't STILL BE BUSY, even if there were no prohibition laws to be enforced.

HERE is what is congesting our courts, and running up their costs:

Too many people are coming in to court with civil cases based on more or less petty disputes that ought to be settled OUT OF COURT, and too many people are coming into court as defendants in criminal cases because they haven't the GOOD SENSE and the SOUND MORALS to refrain from violating laws that are made for the protection of society and the upholding

The senate this morning unanimously passed the bill to establish a national soldiers' home in the northwest.

Senator Charles L. McNary so wired the chamber of commerce here this morning, indicating also that Roseburg is the probable location for the home which congress has appropriated $2,000,000.

His telegram follows:

"Very, very happy to advise that the senate has just passed our bill to establish a home for disabled soldiers in one of the Northwest Pacific states. The action of the senate was unanimous and occurred immediately after I had obtained consent of senate in committee on the bill. Roseburg has won. You may count on my persistent and aggressive advocacy."

Roseburg's Hopes Bright

The hopes of Roseburg to secure the home are strengthened by the senator's message, in which he pledges his support in locating it here.

Original in the senate under the hand of Senator McNary, the bill has successfully gone over a number of hurdles.

It was first referred to the house of representatives for the reason that it carried a provision for appropriation of two millions. The house passed it on to the committee on military affairs which reported favorably only after striking out the definite mention of Roseburg as the site. Roseburg's name was taken out in order to speed up the process and push the bill through this term of congress.

In the lower house the bill was passed and sent on to the senate where the military affairs committee considered it and reported favorably on Wednesday of this week.

By the untiring efforts of Mr. McNary the bill was brought before the senate as a whole this morning, receiving no opposition whatever.

Egg Packery Assured for Roseburg

DIRECTORS OF CO-OP DECIDE TO CONSTRUCT

Plant Will Be Replica of Eugene Branch, Costing $12,000; Work Will Begin in Fall.

Association Confident of Sufficient Product to Warrant Project; Stock Issued.

Construction of an egg packing plant in Roseburg, to start in the late fall of this year, was decided upon at a meeting of the board of directors of the Pacific Cooperative Producers association in Eugene yesterday.

J. H. Clark, Roseburg member, stated upon his return today that the plant will be the same size as that in Eugene, which cost $12,000.

Because of the slow movement of eggs, with thousands of cases in cold storage, the directors did not feel justified in starting construction work before fall, Mr. Clark reported.

The New York man, who had been expected to make some announcement about a branch of his concern here in the future, did not add anything to what he had already announced on a previous visit.

At that time he stated that the Big 7 would put a packing house here if and when a sufficient tonnage of fresh fruit could be contracted to keep it in operation.

Together with the announcement that a receiver has been appointed came the encouraging information that a group of farmers and fruit men are ready to form a cooperative and take over operation of the canneries this season.

Immediately following the filing in the circuit court this morning of a complaint asking that a receiver be named, Judge J. W. Hamilton announced the choice of D. N. Busenbark, prominent Douglas county fruit grower and farmer.

SURPRISE HAT SWAP DOESN'T SATISFY J. P.
It sometimes happens that a jurist is disrobed, but this time one has been "unhatted."

Charles F. Hopkins, justice of the peace, had a dinner at one of the leading hotels last evening and came away without his hat.

The one he wore home fit perfectly, but it didn't check up in other regards with the one he owns. Whether he took somebody else's hat or whether somebody else took his own's, the magistrate doesn't know; but he'd rather have his own.

BOMB EXPLODES IN SEATTLE P. O.
(Associated Press Leased Wire)

SEATTLE, June 27.—Postal Inspector Charles Rutherford was busy here today, trying to solve the mystery of a bomb which exploded in Terminal postoffice, near King street station, last night. From bits of wrappings, string and splinters of a wooden box, Rutherford hoped to find out to whom the bomb was mailed and by whom it was sent.

The bomb, wrapped in a parcel post package, and one of the many being transported along a conveyor belt to sorting tables, shattered every window within 50 feet, hurled employees to the floor, and temporarily deafened John McKenzie, employee, who was standing under the conveyor belt.

Investigators of the explosion said the bomb was the work of an expert.
