GOFF DENIES HE COACHED McDONALD

SAN FRANCISCO, July 31.—Police Captain Charles Goff today denied before the California supreme court he had coached John Macdonald, recanting witness, to falsely identify Thomas J. Mooney and Warren K. Billings as the bombers of the 1916 Preparedness day parade here.

Goff, sergeant of the bombing squad in 1916, declared Macdonald came voluntarily to the police and identified Billings and Mooney from photographs before he had seen either of the accused men. The officer denied snappily he had told Macdonald while approaching Billings' cell "There's your man."

The captain said Macdonald walked ahead of him at city prison until he came to Billings and pointing at the prisoner said, "here is one of them."

In the case of Mooney Macdonald was hesitant in identifying the photograph because Mooney wore a mustache. Goff said he put his thumb over the mustache in the picture and that Macdonald then tentatively identified him, saying, "I think that's him." Of Billings, Goff said Macdonald told him: "Here is the one that put the suitcase (containing the bomb) down."
