PROHIBITION UNIT ON PACIFIC COAST GETS BIG SHAKEUP

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 13.—Jesse Flanders, for many years with the special intelligence unit of the department of internal revenue, has been transferred to the newly reorganized prohibition enforcement unit as assistant prohibition administrator of the Pacific coast. He will make his headquarters in Portland.

The branch office of the special prohibition unit at Portland, operating under W. K. Newell, will be closed, but offices at Seattle and Los Angeles will be retained.

It is understood numerous changes in the personnel of field agents will be made.

Reorganization of the service opened with promotion of Captain R. E. Beeman, for several years director of the special prohibition unit in Seattle to head of the Pacific coast enforcement unit. His headquarters will be at San Francisco.

The reorganization was ordered after the recent conference at Washington between prohibition administrators and the attorney general of the United States.

W. K. Newell, present deputy administrator for Oregon, will be assistant to Flanders at Portland.

Their department is independent of the special agents who will cover the Oregon region hereafter from the San Francisco or Seattle offices. The special agents are employed by the government to investigate activity of the enforcement unit. Beeman becomes chief of this investigation branch after long service in the actual enforcement division.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall O-Lax has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall O-Lax at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c to-day at the nearest Rexall Drug Store.—Adv.

After that you'll want to walk around and smile to your friends—"One 85 cent bottle of Kruschen Salts is worth one hundred dollars of any fat person's money."

Leading druggists all over the world sell Kruschen Salts; you can always get it at Nathan Fullerton's, who sells dozens of packages every week.—Adv.

NEW TONIC BANISHED HER GRAY HAIR AND MADE IT BEAUTIFUL She Was Troubled with Dandruff, Too, But It Also Vanished REALLY WONDERFUL. THIS USER DECLARES

"It is simply wonderful the way Lea's Hair Tonic restores the natural color to gray hair and leaves it so pretty and nice. It also banishes every sign of dandruff and makes the scalp so healthy I can't say enough for it," writes Miss A. L. Landorner, whose picture appears on the right.

"Before I began using Lea's Hair Tonic my hair was rapidly turning gray and I was constantly troubled with itchy scalp and dandruff. That was two years ago. In a few weeks with Lea's the dandruff had gone and just as natural as anything in the world my hair had all turned back to youthful color and since then an occasional massaging of the scalp with Lea's keeps it lovely," continued Miss Landorner, whose address is 116 1/2th Avenue, North Nashville, Tenn.

Thousands of beautiful women distressed at gray hairs or off-colored locks, have learned Lea's Hair Tonic works so natural like when used at home that even experts fail to detect its use. One woman so much better groomed and looks ten years off one's age, users declare. Socially or in business, beautiful hair is an asset worth many times the trifling time and expense of using Lea's Hair Tonic. Freedom from dandruff is another blessing that users say always come from using it.

Made of finest ingredients with only the finest pleasing odor of bay rum and never staining scalp, hair lotion or powder it is used with delight by the most fastidious people. Suggest it to men in your family also. The same bottle does for all colors or conditions of the hair. Obtain a bottle from druggists, shampon thoroughly and follow the treatment tonight and follow simple directions on the bottle. Manufacturers guarantee you'll be pleased and delighted in six weeks of daily use, or money back. If druggist hasn't Lea's send money or stamps for dollar bottle return mail. Lea Tonic Co., Brentwood, Maryland.

PEAR GROWERS OF DOUGLAS WILL GET FEDERAL REPORTS

Douglas county pear growers will receive daily telegraphic reports at government expense, according to information received today by J. C. Leedy, county agent, from L. E. Breitaupt, economist of Oregon State college extension service.

This service becomes available through the county agent's office at the request of Douglas county pear growers, made recently by Fred Flaher, director Umpqua Valley Fresh Fruit Growers; D. N. Busenbark, member of agricultural committee of the Roseburg chamber of commerce; and Fred Goff, chairman of the agricultural committee of the Oregon state grange.

The reports will include shipping point information relative to total shipments, points of origin, and prices paid, as well as results of auction sales in the principal market centers.

Shipping point reports will be received about 10:00 a. m. and may be secured at once by telephoning the county agent, or by calling at the office in the Federal building in Roseburg.

The auction sale reports arrive during the afternoon. Bulletins will also be furnished by the county agent for publication in the News-Review.

POEM FOR THE DAY

By LOUIS ALBERT BANKS

KNOWLEDGE AND TOLERANCE College students of today are not quite aware of what religion is all about, but are vitally interested when the emphasis is on life instead of theology, and on values, instead of beliefs.

These are some of the observations gathered from two years' experience of the first man in Oregon to undertake to teach college courses in religious education for full academic credit in a state institution of higher learning.

Professor E. R. Warrington, for five years Y. M. C. A. secretary on this campus and prior to that a successful Oregon minister, has just completed two years as head of the privately endowed department of religion at Oregon State college. During this period he had 220 students the first year and 271 the second in purely elective courses ranging from studies of special Bible selections such as "The Sermon on the Mount," to more advanced work in orientation of religious thinking.

One of the startling facts brought out in the two years is the wide divergence of types of religious thinking among students, willing and capable of evaluating religious facts together in an open-minded manner. This is especially noticeable in the classes in orientation of religious thinking, says Dr. Warrington.

"In just one class I had a Buddhist, a Roman Catholic, a Greek orthodox, several with no connections, and a number of Protestants," he said. "One man had lost all connection and was trying to find what he did believe. One was a conservative school superintendent who was considerably at sea. Still another was somewhat of a material scientist with little sympathy for religion as he understood it, while others were strictly fundamental in their thinking."

"In spite of these most divergent views we enjoyed free and complete discussion without argument. Little prejudice is shown, and most students approach the problems presented with open minds. In fact, it has been interesting to note that open or closed-mindedness is not confined to any particular group." Professor Warrington added, "One of our tests showed that an avowed atheist was far more intolerant than a strict fundamentalist in the same class. This was such a shock to him that it resulted in quite a change of attitude."—Special correspondence, The Morning Oregonian, Aug. 2, 1930.
