Attractions AT THE MOVIES

LIBERTY—Today, Thursday, Gary Cooper, in "Seven Days Leave"; Friday, Saturday, Betty Compson in "Inside the Lines."

PARAMOUNT did the unconventional, defied the rules of production and made "The Ten Commandments," "The Covered Wagon," "Chang," "Beau Geste" and "Interference." Now that company has dared the best popular traditions for film-making, again with the presentation of "Seven Days Leave," which opens at the Liberty today for three days.

Here is a picture whose story content is entirely new to moviegoers. It is the tale of a childless London widow's adoption of an orphaned Canadian soldier-boy during the dark days of the great world conflict. There is no boy-and-girl love in the play. There is no final "clinch."

Yet here is a picture that will doubtless rank with the most famous of the new show world for its human, poignant drama.

Cooper appears throughout the play, which is based on Sir James M. Barrie's stage success, "The Old Lady Shows Her Medals." In the kills and bonnet of a Highlander of the Canadian "Black Watch" regiment. He creates a new hero-role for talking screen enthusiasts and particularly for Cooper fans. It is a sympathetic role, endowed with the rich whimsy of Barrie's literary original.
