ROGUE RIVER FISH BAN ADVOCATED BY SENATOR MILLER

Grants Pass Visitor Gives Comparisons, Showing Greater Benefit From Closing.

Senator Ed W. Miller of Grants Pass spent today in Roseburg in the interests of the bill to close Rogue river to net and seine fishing, which comes before the voters of the state at the November election. Senator Miller states that the bill is receiving much support throughout the state, and that it is believed its passage would settle the Rogue river fishing question once and for all.

"In 1910," he states, "the river was closed by legal enactment by the people. At a later date, while the river was still closed, the McClellan interests, now holding the monopoly on the Rogue river commercial fishing, bought the properties they now own, and brought such pressure to bear on the legislature that the mandate of the people was set aside and the river reopened. As a result there has been constant turmoil regarding Rogue river fishing, and we now propose, by constitutional amendment, to again close the river by vote of the people, and at the same time take the fishing question out of the legislature so that no future lobby can have the rule set aside."

Comparative Values. "Our measure," the senator declares, "is not a destructive one, but rather is of a constructive or conservative nature. Unless netting is stopped on the Rogue river our fish are doomed. The bill does not prohibit commercial fishing, as trolling may still be practiced, but it does prohibit the use of nets and seines."

"We believe that the value of the river from a recreational standpoint, outweighs the importance of the canning industry. In Curry county, at the mouth of the Rogue river, the total investment in canneries, nets, boats, etc., is $12,000. The representative of the fish commission reports that last year 30 people were employed in commercial fishing, and that the industry paid $1,100 poundage tax to the state. The average returns to the commercial fisherman was $300 annually."

The Greater Revenue. "In contrast with this we find that the total amount of money invested in auto camps, summer homes, hotels, etc., for entertaining the fishermen who come to the Rogue river, is well over one million dollars. In Curry county alone the sale of non-resident licenses was far greater than the amount paid by the canneries to the state. One auto camp alone on the Rogue river has a much greater investment than is represented by the entire canning industry. Non-resident fishing licenses in Curry and Josephine counties during the past season amounted to more than $10,000 while Joe Wharton's store alone in Grants Pass sold more than $2,800 of licenses. It is estimated that the average commercial fisherman receives 10 cents per pound for the fish he catches for the canneries. On the other hand, the angler pays $2 per pound. Most of the commercial fishermen at the mouth of the Rogue river are making from $300 to $1,000 per year using their boats to accommodate anglers, where they receive only $300 per year for commercial fishing.

Metal Lung Gives Girl Hope of Life

Frances McGaan whose lungs became useless through infantile paralysis, is being treated at St. Luke's hospital, Chicago, with a lung machine. Tests are made at intervals, and in the early ones she was only able to breathe a few seconds, but the last test showed great improvement and she was able to breathe over ten minutes without the help of the machine.

Nothing Taken Away. "The canning interests, of course, are putting up a claim that we are destroying a big industry but we believe the facts sufficiently prove that the recreational factor, and the conservation of our fish is of greater value in actual dollars and cents. The interests on the Rogue river bought in at a time when the river was closed and we are taking nothing from them by closing it again."

"They are also spreading the word that rich men are buying up the banks of the Rogue river and are closing it to the public. This is not true, for at nearly every summer home on the river, a fisherman will find a stile in the fence, and a sign inviting him in to fish, asking only that he be careful while on the private land."

Senator Miller is making a very active campaign on behalf of the measure and plans to visit several sections of the state. Although he is a resident of Grants Pass, he is a heavier taxpayer in Douglas county than in Josephine, as he owns considerable property in the Days Creek district.

A meeting of the Roseburg Merchants' association is being called for Monday evening at 7:30 in the chamber of commerce office.
